I had known for several weeks that this was the year for the onslaught of the Brood Five crop of 17-year locusts over much of eastern, southeastern and central Ohio, but this was almost unbelievable! And while the symphony of noise was more than disconcerting, it was certainly a memorable experience to hear and see the millions of these mysterious insects.

This was the final phase of the 17-year life cycle of the cicadas. While the males were raising vocal cain, the females were busily flitting about the thin twigs of trees and bushes; not eating the foliage, but piercing the twigs and depositing their eggs. Soon after completing this vital job both the male and female adults would die.

Meanwhile, the egg-laden twig-ends also die (this constitutes the major damage done by locusts over their range) and come next winter the twigs will fall to the ground. The larvae then burrow down into the ground where they will remain, one and one-half to three feet below the surface, for a long 17 years.

Then, suddenly as if by a divine signal, in the spring of 1982 billions of the larvae will burrow to the surface, shed their brittle shells and the ear-piercing roar of the mysterious cicada will be heard again.

For me, even though this noisy din which covered Dillon Lake last Saturday was less than relaxing, it was memorable — so much that I won't even blame the cicadas for the fact that the bass weren't hitting well!

Elsewhere under Buckeye skies, it appears possible that the city of Columbus may face another claim for fish-killing pollution in the less-than-pure Scioto River. The state wildlike Division is probing a reported kill in the river. In the southern part of the city two weeks ago.

Investigators believe it may have originated with sewage overflowing into the Scioto during a period of heavy rainfall. The city and the Wildlife Division are still hassling over a claim for $663.93 filed by the Division several months ago for a case of pollution which destroyed thousands of fish last fall.

Rhodes Will Lead 'Presidential Tour'

Governor James A. Rhodes will lead a two-day expedition to travel editors, reporters, historical buffs and Ohio Historical Society officials along Ohio's famed "Presidential Tour" in mid-June.

The Governor and his youngest daughter, Sharon, will board a Greyhound bus at 6 a.m. Wednesday, June 16, at at the State House and head for Grant Schoolhouse, Georgetown, which Ulysses S. Grant attended as a youngster.

From the Grant Schoolhouse, the tour will go to Grant's Birthplace, at Point Pleasant, to view the four-room cottage where the man who was to become President Lincoln's top Civil War general and a U.S. President was born. The expedition will then proceed to the William Howard Taft birthplace, in Cincinnati, and the William Henry Harrison Tomb at North Bend. Luncheon arrangements are being made for approximately 1 p.m.

The trek then proceeds to Fremont, the Rutherford B. Hayes Memorial Museum and Library at Fremont. The Governor-led tourists will recess for the night at the Cleveland Sheraton Hotel and resume at 7 a.m. Thursday, with a visit to the James A. Garfield Tomb, Lakeview Cemetery, Cleveland. Next will be the Garfield Home, Lawnfield, a restored home and museum to the 20th U. S. President.

The party will then head for Niles, to visit the William McKinley Birthplace Memorial, dedicated to the 25th President, from which they will go to Canton for lunch and a visit to the McKinley Tomb State Memorial. Both the former President and his wife are buried there.

The trek then proceeds to Marion to visit the Warren G. Harding Home, and the Harding Tomb. The house is the one with the famed front porch from which Harding conducted his so-called "front porch" campaign for the presidency.

From there, the party leaves for Columbus, with an anticipated arrival time back in the Capital City of 6:45 p.m.

The Governor is leading the jaunt in an effort to publicize the various tours in history-rich Ohio, commencing with the Presidential Tour. Chief advisor for the tour, and others which the Governor plans later, is Daniel Porter, director, Ohio State Museum, an Ohio Historical Society operation.

"I want to particularly emphasize the value of such tours to parents with growing families," the Governor said. "These tours are most educational, as well as being recreational and relaxing."

Gardens And Flowers

By JIM GRUETT

LOOKING BACK — Wetting my lips after sampling the first sizeable dish of fresh garden strawberries for the season, I was reminded of my boyhood days and several memorable berry hunts. Now a number of our roadside produce merchants are now featuring early local berries along with watermelons, apples, etc. This week's most outstanding blooms are roses, double mock orange and clematis.

LAWNS — Clover is flowering and can be killed effectively at any time with products containing 2, 4, 5 T-P or Silvex. Buckhorn seed heads with their tall slender stems and lantern-shaped heads are visible in many lawns. This weed makes mowing extremely difficult, particularly when a reel-type mower is used. Stems tend to bend and escape most reel-cutting blades. This weed is easy to kill with conventional broad-leaved weed controls. The tiny clover-like weed with yellow blossoms is called Oxalis. It is easily controlled with clover killers.

REMEMBER — Three important factors when using weed controls: First, the product, if dry-applied, must be applied to moist weed foliage. Second, weed control activity is governed by soil moisture. The more moisture in the soil, the more effective the control. Third, most weed controls must remain on the foliage at least 24 hours after application. Avoid watering during that period—also delay applications on days when rain is probable.

WEED IDENTIFICATIONS — If you are in doubt about the weeds in your lawn, send a dry sample wrapped in foil to Jim Gruett, 118 W. Rich-st. for a free identification.

TREES — Some very striking blooms can still be seen on tulip poplar trees. Torco Landscape Service, 889-1983, is now actively spraying shade trees to eliminate the vast number of insect pests before they cause serious damage.

SHRUBS — Weigela is now flowering, as is the beautiful double mock orange. Still time to plant balled and burlapped nursery stock, providing you are generous with the water hose.

ROSES — Roses already have reached their peak, but no one is about to deny the beauty that is still present on a number of varieties. The time is right to feed roses again. Dusting for insects and diseases should be accomplished at least once a week and after every rain. Water roses without wetting the foliage whenever possible.

JUNE 1965

IF YOU HAVE AN ITCHY FOOT—READ NO FARTHER

How Does 'Travel Time - 10 Minutes' Sound?

WHY IS OLD DAD having such a wonderful time? The answer is simple — he's enjoying a picnic with his family only a 15-minute drive from the local motel to which the family has moved for two weeks. When everyone voted to spend the afternoon at one of the Metropolitan parks, it was a simple matter to "run over to the house" to pick up the picnic gear, the poison ivy medicine and Dad's baseball bat and glove for another relaxed day of the "no fuss, no bother" vacation. When the day is over they'll drop off the hampers at home and resume the vacation (which doesn't demand a second one on which to recuperate from the first).

By JANE ROBINSON

Fifty weeks a year Dad, often doggedly, hits the deck on Monday mornings.

With whatever weapons he can wield he sets out to "bring home the bacon."

But in the good ole summer time comes a break.

If he's been a good boy, kept his nose to the grindstone and squirreled away a little "folding stuff" he can look forward to a vacation spree.

For most it means 14 days (with pay) and the password is "Go!"

The routine is stereotyped.

Check Lassie into the vet's, fill the car with gas, the family and paraphernalia and start out to "see America First."

It all sounds wonderful, especially to the guardians of the U.S. gold reserve.

But we wonder if President Johnson ever listened to this dialogue:

"Mother, you promised I could ride 'shotgun'!"

"Chad, stop crowding your sister."

"But, Jane, we just stopped at a restroom 15 miles back."

"Oh, Daddy, I told you I was car sick."

"Sorry, we're all sold out tonight, but up the road a piece . . ."

Ask any family — the answer is the same at the end of the trail:

"It just ain't worth it," or "There's no place like home."

But don't throw in the towel.

Try "see Franklin County first."

This, too, has a stereotyped formula.

Check Lassie in at the nearest vet and yourselves in the nearest motel.

The world "near" is crucial.

Stay close enough home to go back to "run a load" when the kids' clothes run low; stay close enough to pick up the mail; stay close enough to drop over to mow the grass or to cut a few choice roses.

Next, just relax.

Dad won't be working, Mother won't be cooking and the children will be in a different world.

It will be a world of perfect television, maid service, a backyard swimming pool and "I Wanta" menus.

And it will be a world where Dad, free from tomorrow, and Mother, free from today, can prove first-rate playmates.

The pressure is off.

There are no frantic tourist schedules to follow, no grueling hours on the highway, no travel-worn and cross children.

And yet Franklin County offers a grab-bag of "vacation treats" equal to those of "far away places."

Check These Suggestions

Have you met Colo at the zoo? Have you ever seen the Transparent Lady at the Center of Science and Industry, enjoyed the $200,000 Reubens at the Columbus Gallery of Fine Arts or taken time to hit the local museums? Have you gone star-gazing at the Observatory?

Have you ever seen the Jets play or gone to the summer concerts?

Have you eaten at any of the really first-class restaurants in town or taken in the summer productions at Vets Memorial or the Playhouse on the Green?

Or here is something simple to consider — look over your county from the heights of the LeVeque Lincoln Tower. You can watch the planes land at Lockbourne AFB on a clear day.

Undoubtedly you realize that Columbus "goes" on its industry, but have you ever watched it tick? Have you seen the vast production lines of Ternstedt, been awed at North American's missiles, counted soft drink bottles as they roll out by the thousands or blinked as the boards of the telephone company light up like Christmas trees?

And you should see what's going on down on the farm these days.

It's a revelation to watch the mammoth bagging operations where produce is consumer-packaged for the market, the egg factories where hens lay to sweet music and the "cow parlors" where milk "untouched by human hands" pours into huge tank trucks.

For the outdoor lover there are the Metropolitan Parks where one can commune with nature on an individual basis or join the bird-watchers, frog-listeners and snake-spotters to his heart's content.

How long has it been since you've been on a roller coaster, pitched hoops or eaten cotton candy? Gooding's Amusement Park and Buckeye Lake can bring back the excitement of the county fair.

Down in the South End of the city is German Village, an example of historical restoration that has brought people to Columbus from both coasts. Have you trod the brick sidewalks, visited the homes or browsed in the art shops? A day spent there is hardly enough.

Two weeks fly when you sightsee Franklin County, but don't sweat it.

After all, you live here, and if you miss it during vacation, you can try to pick it up next weekend.

Why not give it a spin this year?

And speaking of spinning—instead of playing Russian roulette on the freeways for hours at a time, how about sitting back with a tall, cool drink and figure out how to spend all the money you'll save, "seeing Franklin County first."

THIS FAMILY ISN'T WRITING postcards back home to their friends, "Having a wonderful time. Wish you were here." They are having a wonderful time, but their friends are right with them. One whole Sunday was spent up at Hoover dam and knowing how the Smiths down the street love to water-ski, they just gave them a buzz and the two couples took off, leaving both sets of children at the Smiths with the girl who regularly baby-sits for both families.

THE EVENING WAS COOL and Sis said, "Why don't we go home and have Dad make some of his wonderful barbecued chicken." So they did. Out came the chicken from the freezers, Dad dug out the very special ingredients for his mystery sauce and once again everyone gloated how wonderful it was to vacation with "Home, Sweet Home" only a few blocks away. When supper was over, Mother put the few dishes in the dishwasher while Dad went over the mail, they folded up the saran-webbed furniture and went back to the motel to get "shined up." They were all going to see the Kenley Player production that evening.

In total, the program will attempt to answer questions that are often overlooked in preparing for college.

When two boats approach each other head-on they should always pass port to port, or on the right. "Commit" yourself early in such situations so there is no doubt in the other fellow's mind about what you intend to do.

Well water is often used as a practical and inexpensive means of air conditioning.

If your boat trailer sways when you're under way, it is probably tail-heavy, or tire pressure is too low. Move the boat forward on the trailer or shift equipment forward in the boat.

When running a doubtful channel on a windy day, favor the windward side. In case of grounding, the wind will assist you in working your way free.

State Offers List Of Summer Attractions

HERE ARE A FEW of the many brochures available.

It is news to many people that Ohio has a rich heritage of historic points of interest. The truth is that many outstanding historic sights are within a short drive from any point in the state — some, in fact, may be right in your own back yard.

For instance, there are over 200 picturesque covered bridges located in 43 counties across the state. Just as interesting are the 30 old grist mills scattered across the state in 23 different counties.

You can still get a good meal served in early American atmosphere at a score of stagecoach inns, all over a century old. Many of them offer lodging and antique shops.

The Ohio River, of course, has always played a major role in Ohio's history. Nearly every town and city along the river affords historic buildings, museums, and other points of interest to the visiting tourist.

The information division of the department offers colorful, informative brochures that tell just about all you would want to know about hundreds of vacation spots and recreation facilities.

Most of the attractions described cost little or nothing, and many of the brochures have maps and directions.

You can get the brochures individually or in quantities. Order them by the following titles: Grist Mills, Farm Vacations, Indians, Festivals, Golf, Caves, Skiing, Industrial Tours, Covered Bridges, Museums, Mounds, Stagecoach Inns, Fishing, Camping, Ohio River and Summer Theaters.

The brochures are free and can be obtained by writing to the Ohio Department of Development, Box 1001, Columbus 43216.

THIS FAMILY PICNIC is one of thousands which take place each summer on the grounds of state parks all over Ohio.

RECREATION SITES are a charming "fringe benefit" enjoyed by the public from our lakes and reservoirs built for water storage, flood control and stream supplementation. Here is a map showing the larger bodies of water, both present and planned, that are within easy driving distance of Columbus.

Aquatic Recreation Picture Is Brighter

With the 35-hour work week only a step away, and more people to enjoy it, recreation facilities grow in importance.

And Ohio is not standing still.

A comprehensive $100-million, six-year plan to develop completely the outdoor resources of Ohio was revealed recently by Fred E. Morr director of the Department of Natural Resources.

Much of this money will benefit the Central Ohio area. Within less than two hours' drive from Broad and High-sts are several dozen parks and playgrounds — most of them boasting water recreation.

Not to be overlooked, of course, are the increasing number of privately operated facilities — game preserves, ski resorts, fishing ponds, vacation farms, race tracks and country clubs with golf and swimming.

Included in the state's master plan to upgrade nearby areas are: Lake Hope State Park, $710,000; Ross County Wildlife Area, $429,000; Scioto Trail Forest and Park, $394,400; A. W. Marion State Park, $332,000; Buckeye Lake State Park, $1,640,000; Delaware Reservoir, $2,232,000; Dillon Reservoir, $2,775,000; Indian Lake, $2,549,000; and the future Alum Creek Reservoir, $1,611,500.

The improvements will eliminate such predicaments as beaches without parking, camp sites without adequate roads leading to them, and lakes without proper launching or docking facilities.

There are 53 state-operated parks, featuring picnicking, swimming, boating, camping, fishing, cabin living, dining and hiking. They are outfitted with toilets, drinking water, and many have boat rentals and launch spots.

Complete information on what Ohio parks have to offer is available by writing to: The Ohio Department of Natural Resources, 1500 Dublin-rd, Columbus, O., 43212.

Where's The Parks Money Coming From?

Proposed funding of Ohio's ambitious new recreation expansion program is as follows:

- $30 million in state funds (part of $290 million bond issue approved by voters in May).
- $29 million from federal funds for land and water conservation.
- $25 million from $250 million in bonds approved by voters in May, 1964.
- $12 million in waterway safety funds.
- $4.5 million from highway funds for park roads.
- $4 million from general revenue and fees (docks, concessions, leases, rentals, etc.).
- $1 million from wildlife funds.
- Earmarked federal funds.

Going On A Trip? Packing Is Important

One of the secrets of happy traveling is knowing how to pack. Learn an easy packing technique, study your needs for the trip, then pack so that you avoid frustrating re-packing when you're dashing for plane, ship or bus.

Here's a simple way to organize your packing:

Make a list of everything you think you'll need. Then cut it in half. You'd be surprised how easy that is. Like cutting a 50-word telegram down to 10 little words.

Next, pack in the order of use. If you're going to stay in one place, your task is easier than if you rove. In either case, pack the things you'll need first LAST so that they are on top. Shoes, stockings, scarves, lingerie can be packed around the edges of the suitcase. Shoes should be in transparent bags. Put sweaters and flat evening bags in the bottom of the bag. Pack your nightclothes on top if you're going to move again in one day. That way, you won't unpack the entire bag to get what you need.

Make things serve double purposes. A beach coat can be a negligee; beach shoes can be bedroom slippers, too.

There are three good methods to pack dresses: The roll-up method is fine for arnels and non-wrinkle jerseys. The flat-fold method eliminates lumps. The hanger method is newer and worth a try. Cover wire hangers with paper. (Use the hangers that come from the dry cleaner.) Put the dress on the hanger, fold the bottom half over the top, stuff tissue paper in neck of dress, and place flat in bag. This way, if hotels provide too few hangers, you have yours built-in! Be sure to place the long side of the hanger against the wall of the suitcase, with the hook section inwards. These hangers weigh very little and simplify unpacking.

Keep all "spillables" in a separate little train-case or make-up bag. Use plastic bottles. This is a safe place for perfume, too.

Consider your destination when you pack. If you are headed for Florida, all you'll need will be beachwear and evening clothes. Simple shorts, bathing suits (2) and cottons for moonlight. An evening sweater or a stole will supply glamour. Never over-dress.

Bask In Glory Of Past While You Dine Out

History written upon the land in the form of famous wayside inns may still be seen in many Ohio communities.

Built in the days of wilderness trails, the taverns doubled as meeting places for presidents, poets, politicians and dignitaries from foreign countries.

Many of these hospitality centers still remain as outstanding eating places and several offer overnight accommodations.

Everything possible has been done to preserve these taverns exactly as they were when the stagecoach and Conestoga wagon were the only means of travel.

You will find authentic atmosphere of an earlier America in these surrounding inns: Indian Run Inn, US Rt. 42 and State Rt. 229, northeast of Delaware; Buxton Inn, 313 E. Broadway in Granville; Red Brick Tavern in Lafayette on US Rt. 40 halfway between Columbus and Springfield; The Golden Lamb in Lebanon; Old Worthington Inn in Worthington, and Malabar Inn, 12 miles southeast of Mansfield.

Pymatuning Is Good Fishing, Picnicking Spot

A small creek along the border of northeastern Ohio and Pennsylvania, known by the Indian name of Pymatuning Creek, now has a large role in the outdoor life of people of two states.

By damming this creek, the vast 14,650-acre Pymatuning Reservoir was formed to provide Ohio with one of its most popular state parks, as a side benefit to its original purpose.

Both Ohio and Pennsylvania wild life divisions and parks divisions share in the care of this water recreational area.

Some of the Midwest's best walleye fishing is provided by Pymatuning Reservoir, and bass, crappies and muskies make up the catches of fishermen on these waters.

Ohio's Pymatuning State Park offers boating, picnicking and camping facilities and there are a number of state-operated vacation cabins available for rental.

Many Ohio motorists follow U.S. Routes 6 and 322 to reach the park facilities of Pymatuning State Park.

Nothing is more unpleasant than a virtuous person with a mean mind. — Walter Bagehot.

Swim Safely . . .

Private pools are gaining rapidly in popularity. If you have a pool, or use a neighbor's, observe some fundamentals of safety:

Is the pool kept clean and the water chemically purified?

Walk, don't run, about the pool, and be careful with horseplay.

Fence the pool and keep the gate locked to keep out small children.

Keep rescue equipment, such as long poles and ring buoys, handy.

Keep bottles and glasses away from the concrete or metal pool deck.

PAINTING THE PATIO?

If you're planning to paint your concrete patio, these tips will help you get maximum results: 1—Surface should be clean and dry, unless paint is used which will adhere to a wet surface. 2—Fill surface cracks, indentations, chips and spalls, and prime with alkali-resistant coating. 3—If surface is smooth, etch with muriatic acid followed by thorough water rinsing. Wear rubber gloves and goggles to avoid acid burns. 4—Apply two coats of paint for satisfactory performance.

Hottest Fishing Tips Come From Weatherman

If you don't have sense enough to come in out of the rain, you may catch more fish.

Weather affects every living creature. And, while it seemingly makes life uncomfortable for most folks during a fishing trip, a spring shower can cause wonderous things to happen.

Rain and accompanying temperature changes excite fish like "pep-up" pill transform an "also-ran" into a derby winner. Fish go on a brief but frenzied feeding spree when cooling showers lower temperatures. They seem to lose all sense of caution and pursue schools of bait fish into shallow waters with reckless abandon. At this time, they are not choosey in taste. They'll hit just about any surface lure in the vicinity.

Why fish react in this manner is not known, but fishing experts say these wild feeding binges can be predicted with fairly good success.

To catch these productive periods, check newspapers and television weather forecasts which trace the movement of "fronts" across the country. A call to the local weather bureau will yield the exact time a disturbance is scheduled to pass your fishing spot.

With a cold front, start fishing one or two hours before and during the storm. On a warm front, wait until it has passed and winds have shifted to a westerly direction.

Be willing to get wet, and you'll get some terrific action.

Blue Rock Park Is A Small Area With Big Variety

Down where the foothills of the Alleghenies begin to rise out of the Ohio Country is one of the State's most popular parks, Blue Rock State Reserve.

This is not one of Ohio's largest State Parks, but it offers outdoor enthusiasts a wide variety of attractions such as swimming, picnicking, hiking, fishing, boating, tent camping, and nature study.

Blue Rock is a 337-acre State Reserve with a 15-acre lake. It lies just off Ohio's most scenic highway, Route 77, a few miles south of Duncan Falls and within ten miles of Zanesville. This makes it easily accessible to a large portion of Ohio's population and it also draws heavily from Pennsylvania.

Ach! German Village Tour Sure To Please

By R. L. SCHMITZ

Quick somevun pin two medals on Larry Schaffer. Vun medal for painting his doors und shutters something other than the conformist green that blights der Willage—der Vanderer's own Haus too, I confess mit shame. Zippy blue doors und shutters at Larry's Haus, 745 S. Fifth-st.

Der second metal giff to Larry for furnishing his old Haus in contemporary schtyle.

Larry's ankle-deep carpeting is deep blue, his furniture fire-engine red, his paneling dark, und his circular metal schtairvay, vhich floats upvard in his liffing room is an eye-catching Apfel green.

All of Larry's colors und furnishings — including that secret built-in bar und schtainless schteel sink — are right in line mit San Francisco restorations. Dere many sophisticates restore old Hauses und, since they are living in der last half of der 20th Century, enhance dem mit contemporary furnishings, art, und, if I remember San Francisco properly, tempting bars like Larry's. Because of dat bar, somevun pin a third metal on Larry.

Larry's Haus vill be vun of the 10 on dis year's Haus und Garden Tour. Der Vanderer, who is a Johannes-come-lately on the German Willage scene, has been on only two Willage tours. Schtill, he can promise this: every Haus on the 1965 tour is first class, und this vas not true the last two tours; thus this year's tour, June 27, will be an eye-opener to many.

Willagers who pride themselves upon the antiquity of their Hauses are in for a surprise: there are at least two log cabins in our Willage. Vun is incorporated in the brown shingle Haus at 702 City Park-av. The other is surrounded by the brick Haus at 636 S. Fifth-st. Have you dug into your valls lately? Who knows? Maybe you too are living partly in a log cabin.

From between the valls of the William Thompson reconstruction at 1023 City Park-av a plaster inscription gave indisputable proof of this Haus's age: "House build in 1883." Some Deutscher misspelled that vord build for built vhen he left this information for the present owners to cherish 81 years after he secreted it. Mr. und Mrs. Thompson have framed his inscription. It now hangs in their spacious, homey kitchen for all to appreciate.

Recently several friends und I spent a delightful hour in the Thompsons' kitchen. Mrs. Thompson served her own yummy, homemade banana bread and the most perfect custard that has ever been savored by this custard-doter. While talking about her pioneer ancestors, Mrs. Thompson produced homespun that was in excellent condition, despite its age of over 120 years.

Mrs. Thompson also has jewelry that vas bought from early Ohio Indians by her ancestors. Ya, the Thompsons treasure their heirlooms. Naturalich, the Haus that these energetic senior citizens restored practically mit their own hands is evidence of this regard. Remember the number of the Thompsons' big, gracious Haus — 1023 City Park-av. It too vill be on this year's Haus und Garten Tour.

Pulling A Trailer Requires Caution

Interest in all types of outdoor recreation continues to surge and is requiring that many motorists learn to cope with a new driving problem—pulling a trailer.

Here are suggestions for safe trailer hauling:

- Allow for the added length of the trailer. Widen the arc on turns. Sharp turns require slow speed. When passing, don't cut back in too soon.
- Avoid sudden stops; this may cause jackknifing, especially if a boat with rear-attached outboard motor is being hauled. Apply brakes firmly, but evenly.

Light the trailer properly. Ohio law requires a red light visible at least 500 feet and a white light illuminating the license plate to make it visible at 50 feet, both rear-mounted. Brake-activated stop lights are not required, but should be installed if the trailer will block the view of those on the car.

- Be properly insured, in case of unexpected trouble.

Teens Become Farm Workers

High school boys from Teays Valley in Ashville and Bishop Ready, Evening High and East in Columbus will lend a willing hand to farmers this summer who are badly in need of seasonal workers.

The new "A-TEAM" program (Athletes In Temporary Employment as Agricultural Manpower) was designed to create a supplemental work force to meet threatened farm labor shortage. The program is part of a nationwide effort by the U.S. Department of Labor.

Athletically-inclined sophomore, junior and senior high boys will be formed into teams of from 20 to 31 workers headed by a coach or school teacher as supervisor.

"A-TEAMS" will work as migrant crews in periods from June 7 to Aug. 15 as they are needed.

Ohio is facing a possible farm labor shortage because of increased acreage and the fact that industrial prosperity has thinned the ranks of qualified unemployed in most areas of Ohio.

A contributing factor is the expiration last December of Public Law 78 under which 185,000 to 200,000 Mexican braceros entered the United States as migrant farm workers.

Although Ohio did not use braceros, states which did will now be competing with Ohio for migratory workers.

More than 2200 high school students have agreed to do seasonal farm work this summer under the "A-Team" program.

Franklin University Offers Summer School

Franklin University will again offer its special summer program of special subjects to high school graduates, men and women in technical fields, and individuals who wish to upgrade their jobs. Beginning June 21 and continuing through Aug. 6, the pre-technical curriculum will consist of mathematics and physics.

Applications and further information may be obtained by calling 224-5237 or by visiting Franklin University office at Central YMCA.

SAFETY TIP . . .

The Ohio Society for the Prevention of Blindness, Inc., 3250 Riverside-dr, reports that inadequate illumination is a significant factor in accidental falls that kill more than 10,000 elderly persons each year. The society recommends the nighttime use of three-and-one-half to seven-and-one-half watt light bulbs to illuminate bathrooms, bedrooms, hallways and other potentially hazardous areas in the home.

BOOST CHILD SAFETY

WITH THE COOPERATION of the Franklin County Sheriff's Department and the Columbus Police Department, Columbus Moose Lodge 11, has started its second annual bumper sticker campaign to alert motorists to be more aware of our youngsters at play during the summer months. Representing the lodge are: Anthony Fasone, secretary; William Carter, civic affairs chairman. Sgt. Robert Brush represents the police and Deputy Mary V. Thomas, the sheriff. The stickers are available to members and the public at the Moose Lodge Home, 36 W. Sycamore-st.

Planting Extends 'Living' To Lawns, Backyards

Most families take pride in living in beautiful natural surroundings. More and more families are developing the grounds around their homes into inviting, beautiful "outdoor living" rooms.

These "outdoor living" rooms furnish restful retreats for adults, places for teenagers to entertain and for the smaller children to play safely, and to learn about growing things.

Landscaping can accomplish the beauty; each family member can enjoy it. Seventy-two percent of home owners are critical of neighbors with poorly kept grounds — they think of them as too poor to do anything about beautifying, or lazy and shiftless.

On the other hand, they think of families living more beautifully as good citizens, refined and educated.

For individual members of the family, good landscaping can accomplish a great deal.

It is wholesome and educational for children. One industrialist planted a tree for each of his seven children, who watched the trees grow. They experienced the natural flowering and fruiting of the trees, the beneficial shade, the foliage color changes with the seasons, the nesting of birds and many other natural phenomena that helped to enrich their minds, while tree climbing helped strengthen their muscles.

So valuable did these trees become to the family that they spent thousands of dollars just to transplant them when they moved to new homes.

With a beautiful property teen-agers are encouraged to entertain at home on terraces and in "outdoor garden living" rooms.

Parents living on beautifully planted properties have much pleasure in putting their "own mark" on the property in the form of trees and shrubs and better living. Young trees, planted when families are young, mature with the family and represent close family ties.

Sandusky Speedway Offers Another Thrilling Season

THE HALF-MILE ASPHALT SANDUSKY SPEEDWAY IS NOW IN ITS 16th SEASON

Sandusky Speedway, now in its 16th season, was founded by the now defunct Lake Erie Stock Coupe Racing Association.

The present sight of the speedway, located in Sandusky on Perkins-av (between State Rts. 4 and 13) was leased from the late Bert Decker, who at the time was operating a large farm near Fostoria, O. The track operated under the LESCRA for three seasons, first as a half-mile and then as a quarter-mile dirt oval.

When the organization finally "went under" it left several businesses "holding the bag," including property owner, Bert Decker, who after careful study, decided to discontinue farming and to try operating an auto speedway.

Sandusky Speedway re-opened in 1951 as a half-mile dirt oval, and became the first speedway to incorporate irrigation to keep the dust down. Over the years the speedway gained in popularity, and in 1955 became the first half-mile asphalt-paved speedway in Northern Ohio . . . and in the same year Decker engineered and built the all-steel grandstands which now house the concessions and other modern facilities. Mr. Decker also designed and built the machine which bent the steel used in erecting the grandstands.

The speedway continued to gain fame for its speed and large guaranteed purses and is now considered to be one of the top racing plants in the Mid-west. In early 1961 Bert Decker was fatally injured in an auto accident . . . ironically within sight of Sandusky Speedway. Since Decker's untimely death, the speedway has been efficiently operated by his widow, Mrs. Anita Decker and her two married sons, Keith and Dick.

The track has been re-surfaced and more new bleachers installed, along with numerous other modifications. The speedway today features "Super Sprints" . . . a combination of Sprint cars and Super Modifieds, making a very fast, very clean racing program. The "Super Sprints" and Super Modified races are held every Sunday from May through October. Racing is scheduled in the evening during summer school vacation and hot summer months, with afternoon racing being featured every Sunday in early spring and fall.

Special events, such as thrill shows and circuses, are scheduled on other weekdays —two such dates to remember, which have been scheduled for the IMCA Sprints, the first on June 16 and another on Aug. 4. Other big days are July 14 and Sept. 6 (Labor Day) which have set up for 100-car demolition derbies. Other attractions include free acts, such as trapeze artists, dog acts and many others, set up on regular race dates during half-time at no extra charge to the spectators.

Cars and drivers at the popular speedway compete from all over a six-state area and many parts of Canada. Sandusky Speedway is justly proud to have served as a "stepping stone" for top drivers such as Jack Conley, Jim McCane and many more who have made the bid for Indianapolis. The speedway is exceptionally proud to have had Gordon Johncock on the roster as late as 1963. Gordon won many races at Sandusky Speedway prior to going with USAC. On Memorial Day at the Indianapolis "500" Gordon Johncock qualified for the 14th starting position. Driving his Conventional Offenhausen, he fought the deadly curves and the long grind at Indy and placed fifth among a line-up of the top auto drivers in the world.

The granddaddy of them all each year is the big Sandusky Speedway International Classic.

This year's purse is slated to be a $10,000 affair . . . and a 150-lap feature is in store. The International Classic is to be held Sunday afternoon, Oct. 3.

The next time you're in the vicinity of Sandusky, make your visit complete with a day of thrills at Sandusky Speedway. You'll be glad you did.

Shotgun Artists Will Compete For Big Prize Money

More than 1,000 shotgun shooters will converge on Vandalia June 16 to 20 to participate in the Ohio State Trapshooting championships. This 79th annual state tournament will attract the finest clay target shooters from Ohio and the entire nation. They will fire at more than 50,000 targets from Wednesday through Sunday and will shoot for prize money of $25,000.

Second in size only to the famous Grand American Handicap, which will be held on these same grounds in August, this tournament is one of Ohio's oldest and largest sporting events.

Attorney General William B. Saxbe, an expert shooter in his own right, is president of the Ohio State Trapshooting Association, with more than 2500 members, and is directing the big event.

PAINTING MASONRY

Unpainted masonry absorbs water rather rapidly, so dampen the surface before you apply a latex paint. Be sure that the latex paint selected is intended for use on masonry, since latex paints come in a variety of types for interior or exterior surfaces.

Sandusky Bay Has Abundant Fish Supply

Wholesome fish are more abundant in Lake Erie, particularly in Sandusky Bay, than at any previous time in history, according to Dr. Vernon Applegate, fisheries scientist with the U.S. Department of the Interior's Bureau of Commercial Fisheries in Sandusky.

Dr. Applegate indicated that these are good quality fish which serve as food for humans and animals.

Recent publicity on pollution has caused some concern that the quality of fish as food would be affected. There is no evidence of this in any fish taken from Lake Erie.

"It is not our intent to minimize the problems of over-enrichment and pollution of inland bodies of water," states W. F. Carbine, Midwest regional director of the Bureau of Commercial Fisheries. "But we do want to allay the fears of people hearing the recent publicity on the pollution problem who have consequently been discouraged from enjoying the pleasure of eating their favorite Great Lakes fish or from benefiting from their nutritive values in animal food rations."

Sheepshead, as well as carp, goldfish, catfish, bullheads and other species, have increased steadily in abundance in Sandusky Bay over the past few years. These species are more tolerant of warming waters, low oxygen conditions and other environmental changes than the better known fish such as blue pike, walleye and whitefish.

Standards that indicate pollution are not uniform. Those applied to measure harm to man are not fully applicable when measuring harm to other things. By illustration, we need only consider the water supply of most large cities. Man can "take" the chlorine, but it is lethal to fishes, as many an amateur aquarist has learned to his embarrassment.

AEROSOL PAINT TIPS

Aerosol cans of paint are ideal for spraying small objects, such as flower pots, bread baskets, toys and similar items. For best results shake the can thoroughly until the mixing balls roll around without resistance; keep the spray moving parallel to the surface; and overlap each stroke slightly.

There'd be fewer broken homes if more people did things together like us, Helen."

Cedar Point Adds $2 Million In New '65 Fun

CEDAR POINT'S NEW roller coaster, opened to the public for the first time in 1964, is again proving one of the principal attractions this season. The "roller coaster" scored an immediate hit with fun lovers since Cedar Point was without such a thrill ride for many seasons. No less than four previous high rides were at the resort since the turn of the century, but all gave way to the axe after years of service. The present "Blue Streak" incorporates the latest scientific knowledge in safety, speed and with a long track deep into the picnic area.

The Midwest may not be near an ocean, but with Lake Erie not far away, who needs oceans?

This thought has inspired Cedar Point to grow, over the years, into the favorite spot of thousands of vacationers from all parts of Ohio — and from across the country.

Each year Cedar Point finds new amusements to attract the family; it has grown into a complex of funway amusements, luxurious vacation facilities, and long stretches of gleaming white sand.

In fact, it combines the advantages of both seaside and inland resorts.

According to Earl W. Gascoigne, director of marketing, more than $2,000,000 is being spent for the 1965 season which is now under way.

New, and attracting attention of everyone, is the Space Spiral, 331 feet high. The shaft on the spiral is eight feet in diameter and a doughnut-shaped car whisks 60 passengers to a height of 230 feet for a breath-taking view of the surrounding area. This is truly a landmark for Cedar Point.

Jungle Larry has transformed one of the islands in the lagoon area into "Jungle Larry's Safari Island." An authentic village has been constructed and the island stocked with more than 200 wild animals and exotic birds.

A major dark ride — the Earthquake — has recreated the San Francisco Earthquake of 1906. This is new for the '65 season.

A complete new funway structure to house more than 36 refreshment and game stands is new, and has succeeded many of the old buildings that have been in use many years. One section of the structure lines the north side of the present funway and the other section forms the east side of the new funway extending to the beach.

A new Turnpike for the "small fry" includes all the innovations in kiddie sports cars.

Other Cedar Point amusements include the historical rides such as the Stage Coach, Riverboat Cruise, Civil War Train and 1910 Cadillacs. The Monorail presents a more modern method of travel, and in Kiddieland is a special selection of miniature rides for tots.

When the vacationer has had his fill of these and other rides he can turn to the sparkling beach, or the shaded picnic areas, for rest.

A variety of eating places provide food to suit every pocketbook — the spacious cafeteria, Coral dining room, coffee shop in Hotel Breakers and the hotel dining room off the lobby. The 1000-room Hotel Breakers provides luxurious accommodations. It has a playroom and sitter services to give parents, as well as children, a real rest.

In fact, Cedar Point caters to just about everybody. Whether you're looking for sports, dancing, a social program or just the sun and a patch of sand near the sea, Cedar Point has it.

THE CEDAR POINT-Lake Erie Railroad is one of the highlights at the Lake Erie resort for every member of the family. The Civil War train winds its way into the "jungle-land" of the lagoon area, and there are surprises galore for everyone. An authentic station forms the entrance to the railway and it's a "must" for most resort visitors.

Lake Erie, Bay Area Get Walleyes

More than 28 million walleye fry have been stocked in Lake Erie and Sandusky Bay, John Z. Pelton, supervisor of the fish management section of the Ohio Division of Wildlife, announced.

"Over 23 million eggs came from commercial fishermen who have been cooperating with us in our walleye program," Pelton said. "These fishermen stripped the walleyes which were taken in their nets, and our men then picked up the eggs and transported them to the Put-in-Bay hatchery where they were handled in the routine hatching process.

He said that over five million walleye fry were provided from inland waters of the state and that the total fry stocked in Lake Erie and Sandusky Bay Waters came to 28,200,000.

"Every effort," said Pelton, "has been made to place these walleyes in areas that we know, from previous studies, are the best walleye spawning grounds in Lake Erie. We are doing everything in our power to bolster the Lake Erie walleye fishery."

Big Name Entertainers Booked At Cedar Point

Big name bands and entertainers will be almost a "dime-a-dozen" at Cedar Point this summer.

And Harry Martin, half of the radio morning team of Martin and Howard, will be master of ceremonies for several of the summer shows, including the recording-concert attractions the Singing Motions due Friday, June 11, and Leslie Gore on Aug. 6.

Ray McKinley's Glenn Miller orchestra will play Saturday, July 3, after playing in Ohio supper clubs to standing-room-only crowds.

When Tommy Dorsey's orchestra stars July 18, conducted by Warren Covington, his troup will include Frank Sinatra Jr., Helen Forrest, trumpeter Charlie Shavers and the Pied Pipers.

Other top bands and entertainers headed toward the Sandusky resort are Sammy Kaye's crew, July 24; the Flatt and Scruggs Show, July 28; Maynard Ferguson, July 31; Count Basie, Aug. 7; Si Sentner, Aug. 14; Stan Kenton, Aug. 21, and Lionel Hampton, Aug. 28.

VISITORS TO CEDAR POINT on Lake Erie this summer will be greeted by new amusements—including the 331-foot high Space Spiral. It is all part of an additional $2,000,000 being spent for the 1965 season. The shaft on the spiral is eight feet in diameter and a doughnut-shaped car whisks 60 passengers to a height of 230 feet for a never-to-be-forgotten view of the surrounding area. This truly is a landmark for Cedar Point. On clear days passengers report that Canada may be seen across Lake Erie.

Visit To Museum Provides Good Historical Background

Much of Ohio's historic heritage is preserved in over 100 museums which are scattered in all parts of the state. Ohio has many historical societies which actively preserve buildings, homes of famous persons and sites where important events took place.

In Ohio you can see castles, steamboats and completely restored villages.

The Ohio State Museum on N. High-st at 15th has many artifacts taken from pre-historic Indian burial mounds, a life-size log cabin, a working model of a grist mill and a recently completed Hall of Birds.

The museum is open daily from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., and on Sundays and holidays from 1 to 5 p.m. There is no admission charge.

Columbus also offers the Center of Science and Industry at 280 E. Broad-st; Durell Farm Museum and Gallery of Fine Arts.

Westerville is the home of Hanby House at 160 W. Main-st, just north of the Otterbein College Main campus. This was the home of Benjamin Hanby, author of "Darling Nellie Gray."

The Ohio Railway Museum on Proprietors-rd, just north of Granville-rd in Worthington, has a collection of historic electric interurban and street railway equipment in working order.

For a complete listing of Ohio's Museums, write to Development Dept., Box 1001, Columbus 16.

Rx For Doldrums: Catawba Point Weekend

How about a leisurely weekend that's just a couple of hours away from the big "C"?

Anyone who enjoys boating, fishing, swimming, golf, miniature golf, dancing, skating, good eating and a wide variety of entertainment — or just stretching in the sun — will find contentment at Catawba Island Peninsula.

Scenic Catawba, located between Sandusky and Port Clinton, extends to within a few miles of the beautiful Lake Erie Islands. The larger of these are Middle Bass and Kelley's Island.

An auto-ferry trip from Catawba Point to Put-In-Bay will afford visitors a chance to view the Canadian shore from the top of Perry's Victory Monument. Put-In-Bay is also famous for its native wines and wineries and a visit to the vineyards and cellars is both educational and enjoyable. Fishing enthusiasts are invited to bring along a rod and reel since black bass, white bass and perch abound in these waters.

The auto-passenger ferries to and from the islands to Catawba run nearly every hour on Sundays from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m., and about eight times a day during the week.

In case you plan to stretch your holiday into a week or two, there are plenty of cottages, apartments, motels, trailer parks and camping grounds available.

For further information write to: Catawba Island Chamber of Commerce, RD 1, Port Clinton, O.

SKY RIDE FEATURED AT CEDAR POINT

CEDAR POINT BECAME one of few amusement parks in the nation to introduce the Sky Ride to pleasure-seekers. The "cars" carry resort visitors the entire length of the beautiful floral decorated and paved midway where countless amusements await adults and children. And the Cedar Point Sky Ride is one of the highest in the world—as vividly shown in this photo.

Is This Your Summer To Buy A Boat? Gem Service Has It . . . And The Water!

Catawba Island Peninsula on the shores of Lake Erie has been the picturesque home of Gem Boat Service since 1950. Located on W. Catawba-rd, just northeast of Port Clinton and northwest of Sandusky, the "boaters' paradise" is a center of attraction the year around.

Gem Boat offers to the public a $100,000 display of used boats of all sizes, both inboards and outboards. They are open seven days a week. Top names in new boats on display are the Hatteras, Trojan and Lyman lines for 1965. Dockage is no problem at Gem, since there are facilities to handle up to 800 craft.

Gem Boat Service features a complete parts department, retail store, canvas department for custom built jobs or repairs, carpenter and paint shop, and a factory trained mechanical department.

Bob Ravas, general manager, invites you to bring the family for a "boat looking trip" where there's a boat show every day of the week. His staff includes Denny McDaniel, sales manager, and Don Harvey, Larry Motel, George Henderson, Bus Whisner, George Snider, Don Gulau and Carl Quisno. These members of the Gem Boat family are well-trained in the boating field, and fully qualified in assisting you with all your needs.

Gem Boat Service is surrounded with sandy beaches, dance pavilion, cottages and motels, roller skating rink, miniature golf, restaurants and other interesting spots.

If you are a "scientific angler" you no doubt know that fishing is best on a rising or high barometer, and poor on a low or falling barometer. A barometric reading of 29.90 is about average. Generally, fishing is good above this figure and poor below it.

Posse Alerted For Train Raid At Museum, June 13!

Shades of the old west! An honest-to-goodness (almost) train robbery will be staged by the Franklin County Sheriff's Mounted Deputies Sunday, June 13, at the Ohio Railway Museum. The horsemen are appearing at the unique outdoor museum on Proprietor's-rd, Worthington, to help publicize the Midwestern Horse Show which is coming July 1 to 5.

Admission is free to the public, except for those who wish to ride the well-restored old railroad cars. Three "holdups" will occur between 1 and 5 p.m. to enable local television camera crews to get "exclusive" shots.

WINE ISLANDS area offers expanse of sandy beaches.

Catawba Isle Doorway To Vacationland

If the water sports enthusiast were to plan his own ideal vacationland, he could do no better than to create an area similar to the Wine Islands portion of Lake Erie with its wealth of sandy beaches and productive fishing waters.

Catawba Island State Reserve in Ottawa County near the city of Port Clinton is the gateway to this area where a family can spend an ideal vacation year after year. Here one can take comfortable ferry boats to Put-In-Bay, Middle Bass Island, Kelley's Island, Pelee Island or the cities on the Canadian shore.

From Catawba Island it is an entertaining drive by automobile to East Harbor State Park, the Marblehead Peninsula, and the various boat liveries, camp grounds and bathing beaches.

East Harbor is one of Ohio's most versatile state parks with a fine sand beach and a very popular and well-equipped camping area.

Put-In-Bay with its famed Perry Victory Memorial Monument towering 352 feet over South Bass Island, is not only of great historical interest but it is a popular vacation spot. The blue waters around the Wine Islands offers some of the nation's best port fishing.

White Bass Take Is Good In Lake Erie

Grab up that fishing pole, for the white bass are "on" in Lake Erie. A report from Put-In-Bay, revealing quite a few white bass taken over Decoration Day weekend, says they should be in full swing by June 10. Spots producing now are the West Reef off N. Bass and around Starve Island.

Excellent catfishing around the islands can be had too, as well as good perchfishing. Some catches of over 100 perch are being made, according to the report. ing to the report.

Black bass are spotty right now, but should pick up later on this month, after they leave the "nest."

Perch may be had along the west shore too, but try fishing the deeper water. Niagara Reef is a top producer on white bass along the west shore. Try this spot for some fast action.

For the pickerel fisherman, it's a bit early in the season. July should start to produce, if any are to be caught.

One of the chief advantages of air conditioning is dehumidification in hot, sticky weather.

Sandy, Beaver Canal Recalls Dungannon Past

The hilly country around the town of Dungannon in Columbiana County provided more than its share of headaches for the engineers and contractors who built the Sandy and Beaver Canal from its junction with the Ohio Canal at Bolivar to the Ohio River near East Liverpool.

In the four-mile stretch where the canal looped sharply south around Dungannon and then wound northeastward, three reservoirs were built and two tunnels carried the waterway under the hills. The breached dam of one reservoir is within sight of the spire of the oldest Catholic church in this part of the country, St. Philipi Neri Church, which was established in 1817.

The big tunnel, about three-quarters of a mile northwest of Dungannon, was some 900 feet long. Canal boats were hauled through the tunnel by means of an endless rope bullwheel powered by horses. The little tunnel northeast of the town was about 300 feet long. Both have caved in now so that they cannot be seen.

The time to check running lights is before dark just in case there is a loose connection. The smart skipper also checks his lights every two or three hours while under way.

Plan Before Plunging . . .

From fabled luxuries to increasingly popular backyard fixtures, swimming pools have become investments that pay off in increased family enjoyment.

Home owners who are ready to take the plunge and invest in a home swimming pool have many considerations before the actual construction begins.

Cost, materials, landscape and upkeep are just a few points that require careful planning. Although pool construction costs are lower now, it is best not to skimp on quality work in a long-term investment such as this, as any compromise may end up in costly repairs and increased upkeep.

In choosing the material of which the pool is to be constructed, type of soil and physical layout of the property are important considerations. Often the best way to determine if the pool should be constructed of gunite (pneumatically applied concrete), vinyl liner, steel or some other material is to see which is the prevailing choice in the area — a good clue as to which is best suited to the region.

Before construction, check the property for underground rocks or man-made hindrances such as septic tanks or cables.

The shape of the pool is mostly a matter of personal preference, but there are several points to consider in choosing.

First, a rectangular pool, though less imaginative in design than the many free-form and kidney shapes, is best when there are children using the pool for races and sports. Also, the pool should have as few hidden corners as possible, to avoid algae forming and eventually clogging the filter, and to facilitate cleaning.

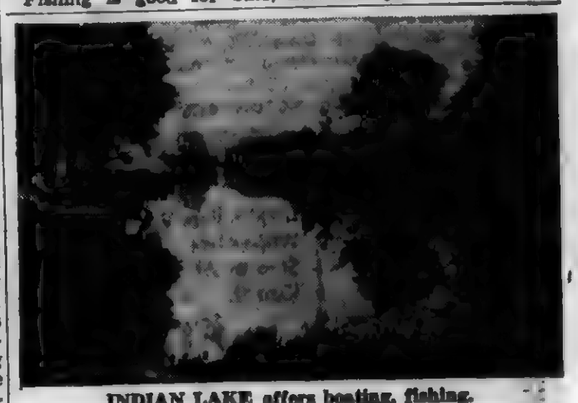
Keep plantings some distance from the pool, to prevent leaves and grass from clogging the skimmers and to discourage insects from pestering swimmers.

Fences are required in many communities, and should be built to avoid any accident.

Happiness doesn't come from doing what we like to do, but from liking what we have to do. — Wilfred Peterson.

BOATERS, PICNICKERS share 7,378 acres of recreation area.

Delaware Reservoir Beckons Fishermen



Delaware Reservoir off U.S. Route 23, just north of the city of Delaware, is a 1,300-acre body of water that attracts fishermen, boaters, picnickers, and in the fall, hunters.

Unlimited horsepower for motors makes this a most popular inland place for those with outboard motors big enough fo. Lake Erie.

Fishing is good for bass, crappies, bluegills and catfish.

In all, there is an area of 7,378 acres of land and water in this State park property, which makes it one of the most extensive public recreational areas available the year round.

The Wildlife Division stocks the hunting area with pheasants each year.

INDIAN LAKE offers boating, fishing.

Indian Lake One Of Ohio's Leading Recreational Areas

Quiet lagoons for boat anchorages, or open water where motor boats of unlimited horsepower are permitted, are attractions offered by Indian Lake, one of this State's most popular recreational areas.

Indian Lake is the source of the Great Miami River and hence was well known to the canoe travelling Indians who inhabited this central section of Ohio.

This State Lake has an area of 5,800 acres and is widely known as a fishing spot. Countless cottages and resorts line its shores. Bordering U.S. Route 33 at Russells Point, Indian Lake is readily accessible from all parts of Ohio.

Many docks around this sprawling lake are available for boat rentals and there are swimming and picnicking areas. Camping areas are also available.

Adams County Prehistoric Land Of The Moundbuilders

It is quite possible that Rome was not even a village when a tribe of prehistoric Indians had a thriving civilization in southern Ohio.

These mysterious people, now called the Moundbuilders, were growing corn and beans in the bottom lands along the tributaries of the Scioto River.

Carrying soil in baskets on their heads, these people and their ceremonial mounds, such as Serpent Mound in Adams County near the present Ohio town of Locust Grove on Rt. 73.

The earliest pioneers visited and marveled at this huge, man-made mound which winds its way along a ridge for some 1300 feet. Viewed from the observation tower in Serpent Mound State Park, this ceremonial mound has the form of a huge snake with an egg in its mouth.

It cannot be pure concidence that the serpent found its way into the religious art of the ancient Egyptians and the Aztecs and Mayas of Central America.

Today, motoring families by the thousands visit Serpent Mound State Park for picnics, nature trail hikes and other enjoyable outings.

FOOD MARKETS THIS WEEK

Why The Rising Cost Of Meat?

By ESTELLE B. FRANKS

THIS WEEK LOOK FOR:

Fruits — watermelons, strawberries, bananas, pineapples

Vegetables — greenhouse tomatoes, homegrown cooking greens and lettuce, carrots, corn, onions, new potatoes

Meat, Poultry — chucks and rounds of beef, ground beef, broiler-fryers, cured pork products, veal shoulder roasts, eggs

Other Foods—milk, cheese, ice cream, frozen fruit juices, canned: peaches, fruit cocktail, tomato products

Food shoppers are beginning to feel the pinch of rising prices on meat. "Specials aren't as good they they used to be." "Will prices go higher?" Should I buy now for the freezer?" — all have a familiar ring to the man behind the meat counter.

Mrs. Franks

Rising meat prices make more sense to shoppers who take a look at the situation behind the price reversal. Here are some of the factors:

• Meat packers are paying more for livestock. Chicago wholesale prices for choice cattle are at the highest levels since January 1963. Cattlemen cut back production because of poor profits in 1963 and 1964, and as a result there are now fewer cattle on feed and the animals going to market are of lighter weight. The average weight of a choice grade steer is 40 pounds less than a year ago.

• Demand for beef stays high. Because of prosperous times Americans have gotten used to eating the best cuts of beef — and eating them often. Outdoor cookery increases this demand. And, the continued growth in population further reduces the meat available per person.

• For pork, it's strictly a matter of reduced supplies because farmers sold off breeder stock last year. In 1964, it's estimated, the profit margins in raising hogs were the lowest since 1956. Now, ttight supplies have hiked prices for top-quality hogs 34 percent — the highest since September 1958.

• Cold storage stocks of both beef and pork are down from last year. On May 1, beef supplies were down about 17 percent and pork almost 30 percent from 1964.

• Broiler supplies during the next several weeks should be at least six percent above last year. Pricewise, however, don't expect a decline, as the smaller supplies of pork and beef accompanied by higher prices will increase the demand for chicken. Broilers increased four cents a pound at wholesale during the past month.

In view of rising prices, can homemakers hold the meat budget in line? Yes, it can be done, but careful planning and sharper shopping are necessary. In general, using the less-demanded cuts at this season trim the bill—the ones requiring longer cooking. Ground beef specials can be counted on because of the increased supply of cow beef coming to market. Also watch for features on cured pork products, frozen fish, fryers, frozen turkey rolls, eggs and cheese.

When ready to "up anchor," start your motor and run ahead slowly toward the anchor, stowing the anchor line as you proceed. If you can't free the anchor easily from the bottom, continue running ahead slowly until you feel it come loose. A vertical tug will free most anchors.

Poor fuel economy is often the fault of old plugs. A good spark from a clean, new plug with the right gap will cut fuel costs and improve engine performance.

KNOW HOW MUCH WHEN PLANNING FOR PICNICS

Planning a family reunion, church picnic or other group gathering? A common question involved with planning food for a group is "How much?"

Determining quantities is easier when a book or bulletin on large quantity food service is used as a guide, says Marion Hermance, extension specialist in institutional management at Ohio State University.

Reliable references may be found at your county Cooperative Extension Service office and your local library. To use a reference to advantage, the meal planner needs to understand terminology used with large quantity recipes and to know how these recipes differ from home-size recipes.

Generally a recipe for large quantity service will indicate exactly what the yield is and the number of servings of a specific size that can be made from it.

For example, a recipe for barbecued hamburger gives this information — yield: 50 servings. Size of serving: approximately ⅔ cup. If you serve each person a ¾ cup portion, you can serve 50 people. If you give seconds to everyone, then only half as many people could be served.

"How much" depends on the size of portions and the number of servings allowed each person. When portions are strictly controlled in size, it's easy to decide quantities needed.

Extras must be planned if the portions are not controlled and when seconds are offered. You may plan for one and one-half servings per person (this is common for ordering rolls) or perhaps two servings per person to be sure there is enough food for everyone.

Pickles Just Like Mother Used To Make

Home freezing and canning schedules are well under way in many homes. Strawberries are ready for jam making; pickle making is in the offing.

To answer homemakers' questions on preserving the summer fruits and vegetables, four bulletins are available from your County Cooperative Extensive Service Office. They are:

- Freezing and Using Vegetables, Fruit and Prepared Foods (O.S.U.).
- Home Canning of Fruit and Vegetables (U.S.D.A.) — Revised February, 1965.
- How To Make Jellies, Jams and Preserves At Home (U.S.D.A.).
- Making Pickles and Relishes At Home (U.S.D.A.).

If you want one or more of these bulletins drop a card or phone the Franklin County Extension Office, Room 317, Old Post Office, Columbus 43215. Phone number (effective June 12) is 469-5595. There is no charge for single copies.

Lime Cooler — Made With Milk Is A Welcome Break . . . Anytime

Mom is working in her flower garden. Dad is up and down the ladder, exchanging storm windows for screens. Junior is playing a few vigorous innings of baseball, and Sis is giving her jump rope a workout.

Suddenly, the activity stops and everyone discovers that the expenditure of energy has made him hungry. And, it's still several hours to the next meal.

At a time such as this, what do you serve your family? Do you serve something that supplies calories but no nutrients, or do you take the wise route and serve something that supplies both calories for energy and nutrients required for good health?

A lime cooler is on the wise route. It will supply calories for energy so that your family can continue their activities. And, it will supply nutrients such as protein, calcium, riboflavin and vitamin A. Everyone — Mom, Dad, Junior and Sis — needs these every day. Start your nutritious snack file off with the recipe for lime cooler. Add to it other recipes that feature dairy products and, with the first flurry of summer activities, you will be prepared to help your family enjoy these activities to the fullest — because they are well fed at both mealtime and snacktime.

LIME COOLER

1 6-ounce can frozen limeade concentrate
3 cups chilled milk
1 pint vanilla ice cream
1 pint lime sherbet

Blend limeade concentrate, milk and vanilla ice cream with a beater or in a blender. Pour into chilled tall glasses; top with a scoop of lime sherbet. Makes about six cups or four to six servings.

TAKE A WORK BREAK and enjoy a cool, pleasantly tangy milk drink.

ON LONG TRIPS . . .

A good rule of thumb is to limit driving to 300 to 400 miles per day, depending on the types of highways traveled, but not more than eight hours behind the wheel. Sightseeing along the way calls for even shorter daily coverage.

NEW EXHIBIT

A new exhibit at the New York World's Fair this year honors 13 presidents at the U.S. Pavilion. The exhibits consist of a collection of historic U.S. documents and personal possessions of the presidents. It was suggested by the late President John F. Kennedy.

What Became Of Ye Olde Housedress?

Do fashion designers dictate what the American woman wears or does the American woman dictate what the fashion designer designs?

Take the revolution in house wear, for example. At one time, the homely housedress was standard garb for American women of all sizes and ages. But in the last 10 years, it has practically vanished from the scene.

Women who formerly wore housedresses are now wearing what is known as "indoor-outdoor sportswear." This new category of fashion is found in the loungewear departments of leading stores.

Crisply tailored in traditional cottons, styles include A-line shifts, jump suits, culottes, and trim smocks. And, true to their name, these indoor-outdoor fashions serve as well for supermarket shopping and family chauffering as for housecleaning and meal preparing.

While fashion and comfort are big factors in the popularity of these cottons, one of the main attractions is their ease of upkeep. They wash well repeatedly, need only touch-up ironing, and are Sanforized so they won't shrink out of fit.

JUNE 1965

GEORGE TRAUTMAN (inset), president and owner of Delux Heating and Cooling, 1946 Sullivant-av, employs a fleet of seven trucks with two-way radios as part of Delux's customer service program.

Local Modernaire Dealer Offers Complete Line, Guarantees Service

"Fast, economical service is our business . . ." say George Trautman, president and owner of Delux Heating and Cooling located at 1946 Sullivant-av. Trautman has been in the heating and cooling industry for the past 20 years and has installed hundreds of units in and around the Columbus area.

Delux Heating and Cooling moved to the Sullivant-av address in August of 1963 and, at that time, had two service trucks. Since then Trautman has added five additional trucks for a total of seven, and now employs 15 installers and service men. "Last year," he stated, "we installed two-way radios in each of our seven trucks to facilitate even faster customer service. Each truck now carries a full compliment of parts and accessories so that we're not faced with charging our customers an additional time fee to pick up parts needed for his unit, whether it be cooling or heating.

Dependable, fast customer service is important to us and reduces the cost to the customer.

John Pauk, service manager for Delux, has been with the organization for many years and is well - qualified to handle any heating or cooling service problem that may arise, said Trautman.

In 1963, Delux Heating and Cooling was appointed a Modernaire authorized dealer by Ohio Furnace Co., local wholesale distributor for the line of equipment. T. J. Hughes, sales manager for Ohio Furnace Co., stated that Trautman has operated a well-run firm and that they have been more than satisfied with the manner in which Delux has handled their original installations as well as the excellent customer follow - up service procedures they have employed during the past three years.

Hughes said that Delux has installed well over 1000 units in this area during the period of time they have handled Modernaire heating and cooling units. These include remodeled and new house installations as well as a large number of apartment buildings and commercial installations for many prominent builders in this area.

"The entire line of Modernaire heating equipment carries a full 20-year, unprorated warranty, and we firmly believe that the warranty means as much to our customers as anything we have to offer, simply because the homeowner or apartment owner knows that the equipment is fully protected, in writing, for the next 20 years," Trautman stated. In addition to the Modernaire line, Delux also stocks Temco space heating equipment, Auto-Flo power humidifiers, Electronic Air Cleaners and a full compliment of parts to back up their service program.

"Customer acceptance and demand on power humidifiers and Electronic air cleaners has grown rapidly during past two years," said Trautman. "Basically, I believe it is because the average homeowner has found out just what these two products can do for members of his family who may suffer from an allergy or asthmatic condition. In keeping with the added demand, the prices of the product and installation have been reduced to the point that neither is out of reach of the average homeowner.

"Our engineers are available at our customers' convenience and will be happy to give free estimates on any type of installation."

WATCHING THE PONIES

Many racetracks during the time of their meets permit visitors to watch morning workouts. If you're in the area of such a track, check for the times, usually early morning. It can be an interesting experience.

Spring Is The Time For A Family Man's Fancy To Turn To Thoughts Of . . . Air-Conditioning!

Don't wait till the summer's first heat wave floors you before you do something about air conditioning your home. The time to act is now.

Spring is by far the best time to air condition. Homeowners can be assured of cool comfort in the hot months just ahead by making arrangements now.

As welcome as summer cooling may be, it is just one advantage of air conditioning— another is the filtering of dust, dirt and pollen from the air, keeping rooms cleaner and healthier.

Another benefit is the circulation of air, movement that relieves the "stagnant" atmosphere from rooms. And one of the chief advantages of air conditioning is dehumidification — a benefit being given more and more attention by manufacturers, health authorities and homeowners today.

To get all the service that manufacturers build into cooling equipment, it must be installed by a qualified plumbing and heating contractor. Many important factors must be assessed and evaluated before he installs the correct system.

He will consider the type and amount of insulation now in your home. By figuring this in relation to average outdoor temperatures, the contractor can tailor the cooling system to most economically deliver just the right amount of cooling needed.

In addition, the position of the house in its surroundings must be evaluated. Is it on a hill, in a valley, shaded by trees, in the path of prevailing northerly or southerly winds? Each of the variables must be weighed carefully. Each of them in some way alters the cooling requirements.

WATCH THAT TRAILER

Motorists should allow a driver towing a trailer plenty of room, since he is handicapped by greater stopping distances. Motorists also should remember that it takes greater clearance ahead to pass a car and trailer than it does just another automobile.

Keeping Cool In Columbus No Expensive Proposition

Many Columbus residents have a fear of the operating costs of central air conditioning. This is a false belief according to local experts of the Worthington Air Conditioning Company.

The cost of operating a whole-house air conditioning system in an average Columbus home all summer would be about $70.

This study is based on an average Columbus home of 1200 to 1500 square feet with a three-ton central air conditioning system, and includes mild days of 75 degrees. Dusty Rhodes, sales engineer, Climatrol Division, Columbus Branch, explained. "Even during this period the home's indoor temperature could rang up to 85 degrees — and the air conditioner will maintain a constant 75 degrees and lower the relative humidity.

"Our operating cost estimate might be higher or lower, depending on what indoor temperature is selected, construction of the home and how the family 'lives.' But it's a pretty good guide," he said. Many people have not been aware of the technology which has actually brought down both the cost of owning and operating a central air conditioning system, Rhodes concluded.

State Has Many Public Gardens

Flower fanciers will be impressed with the numerous public gardens scattered over the state of Ohio. Everyone can take advantage of the tranquilizing effect of a stroll down the garden path and not stray too far from home.

The following nearby gardens would be of interest: Adena Gardens, Chillicothe; Columbus Park of Roses, Franklin Park Conservatory and the Ohio State University Horticutural Gardens in Columbus; Orchid Conservatory at Gates Mills; Dawes Arboretum, Newark and Kingwood Center at Mansfield.

Men never get too old to learn, but can't always understand.

"We'll let daddy and the luggage go first—if they make it we'll follow on foot."

Parks Needed To Hold Increase In Trailers

Recently, much attention in government circles has been given to the business of beautifying America. Steps have already been taken to make leisure travel more appealing to the millions of Americans interested in mobile vacations. The increase in the use of campers and travel trailers has pointed out the need for more, well-equipped facilities for trailerists.

Some progress has been made on the part of government officials, but the supply of parking areas must still be constantly increased as the demand for travel trailers will soon outstrip the available supply of parking spaces. However, it would seem that this demand will dry up very quickly once this shortage becomes evident to the trailer-buying public.

New and properly planned trailer parks must be set up in sufficient number to take care of the millions of future travel trailer owners. Through the summer season public campgrounds are so overcrowded that they often cannot handle the thousands of campers and trailerists. Private parks and campgrounds, now doing business, might well be improved so that they can all be operated on a paying basis and thus offer an incentive to the building of new sites.

Since tourism is one of the most rapidly growing industries in many of our states, including Ohio, the need for trailer parks will likely be thoughtfully considered by Ohio officials. In neighboring Michigan for example, tourism will soon be a billion dollar industry. As can be seen, it will require the introduction of a huge new industry to replace the dollar volume for which the trailer industry is now responsible. Making Ohio even more attractive to visitors seems to be one method of helping increase its share of this vital industry.

Time To Update Vocabulary, Says Mobile Home Industry

Industries grow and become sophisticated and out of this new words, phrases and definitions are coined and make their way into the vocabularies.

Take for instance, the trailer industry.

In the beginning a trailer was a "trailer." Then, in the adolescent era of the industry, trailers grew longer and wider and became "house trailers," and these were generally found in "trailer parks."

The Ohio Mobile Home Association in an effort to update news media vocabularies has informed us that today, the term "mobile home" rather than house trailer is used to signify the large mobile homes (up to 20 feet wide and 70 feet long), which is hauled by a truck to its semi-permanent location. It follows, they say, that the areas where many of these are placed are known as "mobile home parks," rather than trailer parks.

The shorter, smaller "travel trailer," as it's now known, is usually pulled by an auto or truck and is used for trips, and vacations. As the image of the industry changes these travel trailers are coming to be known as "recreational vehicles." This term, in addition to "travel trailers," includes "campers," "pitch-up campers" and "bus type campers," among others.

Another innovation of the industry is the new 20 and 24 feet wide by 60 to 70 feet long mobile homes. These homes are delivered to the sites, placed on foundations and become permanent homes. These are called "manufactured homes."

Did we mention sophistication? Now we know the trailer industry has reached this plateau. This clever piece of advertising by the industry got published free—didn't it!

88 E. BROAD IS 'THE COOLEST'

EVER WONDER HOW a huge office building is air conditioned? Atop the new 88 E. Broad-st ultra-modern high-rise building is this natural gas fueled air conditioning equipment. Basically, it consists of two 150-hp Kewanee boilers and two 500-hp Waukesha engines driving 425-ton Carrier centrifugal compressors which serve three separate distribution systems within the building. One system provides hot water in the winter and cold water in the summer to fan coil units in the perimeter of the building. These units heat or cool the recirculated air within the space occupied by the units. The second system supplies 100-percent fresh outside air. The third system supplies the interior areas with a mixture of fresh outside air and recirculated air which is heated or cooled as needed. The gas-fueled equipment provides enough cooling for 260 six-room houses or, conversely, enough heat for about 150 six-room houses.

IN SUMMER, Hide-A-Way Hills' members enjoy swimming in the Olympic sized pools or water sports on one of the five stocked lakes. The giant Lake-Of-The-Four Seasons is also under construction.

Hide-A-Way Hills New Lake Adds To A Full Year Of Fun

Hide-A-Way Hills, America's showplace for leisure living, begins its fourth complete season in the sun with the construction of the huge Lake-Of-The-Four Seasons.

Developer F. M. "Don" Donelson reports that the giant lake will have four and one-half miles of shoreline. This will make waterskiing, power boating and similar "big water" activities open to all members.

Choice wooded and waterfront lots are now being sold around the new lake in addition to the other five stocked lakes on the 1500-acre, year around, resort.

Hide-A-Way Hills is a private resort community located five and one-half miles south of Lancaster, off U.S. Route 33. Membership and all of the resort privileges are obtained when the family purchases a lot.

The complete $8,000,000 resort features a golf course, $100,000 air-conditioned lodge and restaurant, six lakes for boating and fishing, an Olympic sized swimming pool with children's pool, tennis courts, complete stable and riding facilities, a controlled private hunting area and many more activities.

In winter, Hide-A-Way Hills has a half-mile illuminated ski tow and trail with snow-making equipment which insures good ski conditions all winter. Other activities include skating and tobogganing.

Members have a complete year around social program at the lodge. Weekly dances and parties highlight the social calendar and a complete teen-program is also maintained.

Located in the heart of the Hocking Hills, the natural, wooded terrain offers excellent opportunities for just "getting lost" or exploring the miles of rolling nature trails and hiking paths.

Hide-A-Way Hills is an award-winning resort development having the "Look" Magazine National Award of Excellence and has been lauded editorially in many other national magazines.

THE OHIO Canal, Millersport.

Historical Waterway Still Being Used In Millersport

The old Ohio Canal in Millersport near the edge of Buckeye Lake is one of Ohio's most beautiful scenes. This channel is a busy place today as boaters run their craft out to the open lake.

A century ago this was an even busier waterway as hundreds of canal boats used this canal on their way to Cleveland, Portsmouth or any of the mid-Ohio towns served by the Ohio Canal.

Some appreciation of the magnitude of the job of creating the Ohio Canal can be gained by looking at the deep cut below Millersport. More than a million cubic yards of earth was dug with picks and shovels and hauled in wheelbarrows and ox-drawn carts back in 1826-1828. This deep cut spanned the high ground between the valleys of the Muskingum River and the Scioto River. It was 34 feet deep at its center and it extended "for more than six miles with an average depth of 30 feet."

On the Ohio Canal there were about 70 ports or stopping places, 10 of which were toll stations: Cleveland, Akron, Massillon, Dover, Roscoe, Newark, Columbus, Circleville, Chillicothe and Portsmouth.

Owners of the canal boats let their imaginations roam as they named their craft. Some of the more famous boats carried these names: Ark, Aristocrat, Black-Strap, Banty, Blooming Youth, Cat of Camp Creek, Cupid, Corn Crib, Eden, East Wind, Flying Cloud, Ocean Queen, Palace, Paw-Paw, Pugtown, Rat of Portsmouth, Saloon of Yellow Bud, Saw Log, Shadow Catcher, Wild Horse of Mill Creek and War Eagle of Roscoe.

A boat bottom is said to have a "hook" if it is concave in the fore-and-aft direction when viewed from below. When the boat is planing, this causes more lift on the bottom near the transom and allows the bow to drop. This condition increases the wetted surface of the boat bottom and reduces boat speed.

SMALL CRAFT PERFORMANCE ALTERED BY CHANGES

Decide Use Before Buying Boat

You would think that anyone willing to plunk down several hundred dollars for an outboard motor would have a pretty good idea of what he's going to do with it.

Oddly enough, this is not always the case. Failure to have specific intended uses in mind when buying is one of several expensive quirks some motor buyers have.

Do you want to use it for fishing, water-skiing or for cruising? What sort of boat are you going to put the motor on? Will you use it in fresh or salt water? In a river or a lake? These and many other questions should be discussed with a reputable dealer before you buy. Tell him everything you can about your plans for your motor.

Some boaters who are otherwise candid with their dealer fail to mention that they want to water-ski, or do not realize they do until after they buy a motor. So the dealer sets up the rig for light loads and high performance.

Later, they try to tow several skiers, not realizing that they should have a different propeller for skiing, and are dissatisfied with their rig as a ski boat. A return visit to the dealer is called for to rectify this.

Another complaint that manufacturers hear is that "my rig doesn't give me the performance it used to." Of course, what they forget to mention is that they have added 200 to 300 pounds to their payload since they bought the boat — items like a tackle box, an extra anchor, an 18-gallon cruising tank, lights, horn, marine radio and their portly Aunt Nell. Substantial increases in payload are bound to affect the performance of a small boat.

Human nature being what it is, it's not surprising that a lot of boaters (1) lost track of the owner's guide which comes with their new outboard and (2) neglect to take their motor in for the prescribed 10-hour free checkup.

Owner's guides should not be read once and discarded, but should be reviewed periodically. In addition to giving operating instructions, these booklets typically show the locations of lubricating points, servicing requirements of various engine components, procedures for preparing a motor for winter storage, how to protect a motor in salt water, etc. The owner's guide should be the bible of the small boat owner.

The 10-hour check-up is also vitally important, yet many boaters, perhaps because their motor is "running so well," feel it's unnecessary.

A new or "tight" engine will be adjusted by the dealer who sells it, but his adjustments will probably be incorrect for what the mechanics call a "loose" engine, one that has been broken in. Consequently, the engine may be running too fast at shifting speeds. This is just one example of how the 10-hour check is of value to the new owner. During the check the dealer will adjust the points, clean the filter on the carburetor and fuel system, check the lubricant in the lower unit, check water pump operation, lubricate throttle and shift linkage, swivel pin and shifting cams and check for loose nuts and bolts.

A final recommendation: see that your motor is checked over periodically throughout its lifetime and you'll have a minimum of repair bills.

"Now that school is out and the kids are driving all day long it's up to the pedestrians to keep alert."

A Little 'Think' May Avoid Launching Sink

In one of his most famous movie sequences, silent film star Buster Keaton stood regally immobile in the bow of a boat as it was launched with appropriate ceremony, slid down the ways and promptly sank. Keaton's legendary dead pan remained fixed of course as the water swirled up about him.

That scene, which broke up audiences for years, is repeated with disquieting regularity every summer. Only now it's no comedy, but rather another case of a boater forgetting to replace the drain plug in his boat.

This is one of the most embarrassing blunders boaters make. Another one is forgetting to attach a bow line before the boat is pushed off the trailer. Result: the boater has to wade or swim for his unmanned craft.

The best way to avoid launching errors is to develop the habit of following these five recommended steps:

1. Back the trailer down the ramp, stop a few feet from the water's edge and set the car brakes.

2. Release all the tie downs, tilt the motor up and connect fuel and electrical lines.

3. Put in the drain plug.

4 Back the trailer into position to safely launch the boat.

5. Attach a line to the boat's bow and hold it to prevent the boat from drifting away once it is afloat. Unlock the bow winch and push the boat down the trailer into the water.

Painting Aluminum Boats Involves Three-Step Process

Aluminum boats are as easy, if not easier to paint than hulls of other materials. It is recommended that you start by selecting a quality paint from your local marine dealer, read the manufacturer's directions carefully, and follow these simple steps for a successful paint job.

The three main steps are thorough cleaning, surface preparation and final painting. Existing paint must be completely removed. Organic paint removers are recommended, but removers with a caustic base should never be used. The bare hull — or hull of an unpainted boat—should be cleaned by using a household detergent and warm water. Rinse thoroughly. The bare hull should then be mechanically abraded.

Remove all traces of dust and grit, and dry the hull thoroughly. Subsequent operations should be carried out in a dust-free environment to avoid ruining the appearance of the painted surface. Avoid damp or rainy days as well as very hot or cold days for painting. High humidity and extreme temperatures interfere with proper paint drying.

Wash primer or conversion coatings should be applied before painting. A wash primer is most effective when applied over an acid-etching cleaner. A conversion coating accomplishes the same end as a wash primer by means of a chemical reaction with the aluminum surface. Both preparations are single coat paint systems and can be brushed or sprayed on. Do not use both systems on the same boat. Follow the manufacturer's directions carefully.

Any quality marine paint may be used when the primer or conversion coating is thoroughly dry. Mix, dilute and apply according to directions.

Public Library Has Story Hours For Youngsters

Will you be driving your child to the swimming pool, park, picnic grounds, dancing school, Bible school or camp this summer? You will if you're a typical American housewife blessed (or cursed) with two or more cars. Through seemingly endless chauffeuring, you've already pinpointed the "must" stops along your frequently traveled routes — the service stations, the stores, the bakeries, the shopping center.

But what about the public library? Do you know where it is? Do you know what special attractions it offers for your children in the summer months? You can pinpoint the location of the closest library branch by looking in the phone book, and calling to discover whether the library nearest your home offers a story or story-craft hour, or what branch does.

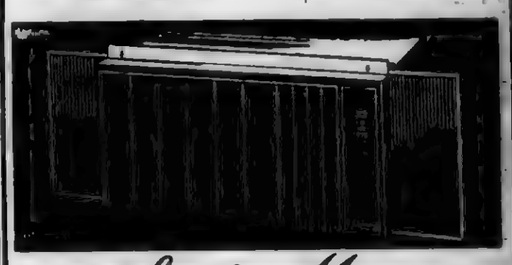
All fifteen neighborhood branches of the Columbus Public Library have a vacation reading club for youngsters seven through 12. Visit the library yourself and pick up an armload of books to enjoy during times when the children are similarly engaged in a daily "quiet hour" of reading.

Proper Fencing Can 'Dress Up' Your Property

Property planning, for an estate, a half-acre or a lot, involves the same principle: integration of site and structures.

Nothing improves the appearance of an average house more than fencing, especially if lawns, plantings and patios are not fully developed. And one of the most versatile fencing materials is tempered hardboard.

Perimeter fencing along the edges of a property should not look too solid, nor be too high. But wall-high enclosures can provide the luxury of an outdoor "living room" at low cost with the use of hardboard panels to shut off unpleasant views, break the wind and offer shade.



The wide variety of tempered hardboard on the market makes it possible to create a fence tailored to particular home needs and purposes.

The Spectator Says:

By C. C. Hartley

Maybe State Could Help!

Backers of the Sunday liquor sale bill tell us they don't really want or need liquor sales to attract conventions. The problem, they say, is that the "good" restaurants don't find it economically feasible to open on Sunday unless they can sell liquor.

If this is true, then legislators could solve the problem, we think, by offering restaurants some type of tax break for operating on Sunday. This approach is advocated to attract industry and promote industrial expansion. Why not apply it to restaurants?

Sunday liquor sale will create more problems than it will solve. And if the selection of convention sites must be determined by the availability of liquor, then such conclaves will be coming to a sorry state.

We're for well-fed conventioneers. But we also feel that their decisions are most productive when reached after sober deliberations.

On Being A Father

Comes Sunday and Dads across the nation will be receiving their annual neckties, handkerchiefs, shaving lotion and loads of love.

Perhaps it is in order that he gets a little special recognition. After all he isn't exactly a silent partner in the business of building a family.

In the first stage Dad generally takes an occasional turn at giving the bath, walking the floor, soothing a tummy ache, changing a diaper and "burping" the wee one after an early morning bottle.

In stage two Pop administers to stubbed toes, allows an extra ice cream cone when Mom isn't around, tries hard to be the man the youngsters think he is, while all the time trying to be tough enough to enforce family rules, yet not detract by being a tough old father.

At another stage Dad is important as a fishing companion, teacher of gardening, auto driving, and a guy that follows the teams, attends the school functions, and generally puts in his appearance to claim some of the credit that son or daughter has brought to the family name.

Comes the day of the big wedding and here Dad takes a very far rear seat. He has long ago learned that fathers have little to do with weddings other than pay the bills in event it is a daughter.

Over the years Pop continues to work hard and take his fair share of responsibilities in family and public life. Many of the earlier stages are reenacted as he becomes a grandpa and is called upon to be a father again.

And as he travels toward the sunset he hopes he will be respected and held in esteem. As the family gathers along with the general public for his last rites there will be many who will be so kind as to remark "He was a good father."

Yep, Dads are important people. I'm glad to be one.

TO MARCH IN 'FREEDOM FESTIVAL'

THE RAMETTES, girls' precision marching unit from Whitehall-Yearling High, are among groups participating in Whitehall's "Freedom Festival," day-long Fourth of July celebration. Sponsored by the Junior Chamber of Commerce of Eastern Columbus, the program is planned at Roblawood Plaza, Broad-st, at Roblawood, and in the field behind the shopping center. Planned events include, in addition to the parade, games and contests, a dance, rides and concessions, water battle between area fire departments, and an innovation this year — a huge amateur talent show. Anyone interested may contact amateur show chairman, Paul Knoblauch, BE. 1-9041. Groups or individuals wishing to participate in the celebration may call the chairman, Fred Frank, 237-4819, or co-chairman, Dr. Arthur Kelly, 231-0061.

'Cable TV In Whitehall By Holidays' Forecast

A "full dial" of 12 television channels may be available to Whitehall residents eventually, with eight promised sooner, "probably by Christmas."

Council Tuesday night, by unanimous vote, granted a franchise to Multi-Channel Cable Co. to operate a television system in the city, over last-minute protests from Ken Prickett, representing Independent Theater owners, and George Snyder, resident, who requested council first consider his proposed amendments to the ordinance.

The long-debated measure had been studied by council for months. Members singled out Multi-Channel as the company offering the most attractive proposal.

Paul Setters, representative of the Multi-Channel Cable Co. who has been negotiating the Whitehall contract, said residents would have, in addition to the three free channels and educational channel now available, four more. These would include a service channel offering weather, public service information and music.

Council members also passed a resolution to join the county survey for a garbage and rubbish disposal system at a cost of $870.

The city's previous plan to hire an engineering firm to conduct its own survey for the purpose of constructing its own incinerator to serve adjacent communities, was not scrapped, and one council member indicated they "still might proceed" on their own.

Cost of the independent study would be $12,000, paid by federal funds. The city would be charged only if it decided to implement the plan.

Multi-Channel Cable Co. agreed to install without charge one installation in each of the city's private and parochial schools, the Police Department and the Fire Department.

Cost to residents for the service will be $10 or less for the installation, and a monthly charge of $5 a month for the service.

An alternate proposal is for $5.25 a month for the service, with no installation charge.

The ordinance allows the cable company up to 60 days to accept the 20-year contract.

Setters said the firm would establish the Whitehall company office as soon as it was feasible. He added that the firm's top electronic men would be brought in to get the program set up, but wherever possible, local people would be hired.

Voters To Face Fall Bond Issue For Rec Center

Local teens are selling tickets at 75 cents each or $1 per couple.

Public Hearing Set On Zoning

Public hearing will be held Thursday, July 1, 7:30 p.m. on a request to rezone a tract of land on the northeast corner of Livingston-av at McNaughten-rd from residential to general commercial.

The hearing will be held in the County Commissioners' hearing room at the Franklin County Court House, High-st at Mound-st.

Request was made by Bernard Ruben of 2525 Berwick-blvd.

Entertainer Dies In Bexley Home

Requiem High Mass for Edward L. Uhrig, of 655 S. Cassingham-rd, was sung June 15 in St. Catharine's Catholic Church. Interment followed in St. Joseph Cemetery by Egan-Ryan Funeral Home.

Uhrig, who owned the entertainment booking agency Ednick Service, was a former associate of the Al G. Field Minstrels. He was also a member of the Jungle Imps, an organization for entertainers.

He is survived by his wife, Rhodora; and two sisters.

Free Refuse Pick-up Is At The Curb Only

Whitehall Service Director Joe Shannon issued a reminder to residents that the city's free refuse pick-up contract with a private hauler is for curb service only.

Four Retiring Teachers Total 154-Year Record

A combined, impressive total of 154 years and 6160 students is the collective record of service of four teachers retiring this June from east area schools.

Mrs. Ruth Oberlin, retiring from Fairmoor Elementary, leads the list in terms of service with 45 years.

From Eastmoor Senior High, Miss Clara Holtzman is retiring with 38 years' service and Mrs. Mary C. Pryor, with 36, and from Walnut Ridge High, Miss Kitty Cooper with 35.

Mrs. Oberlin launched her teaching career in 1920 at Newton Falls, went to Willowbee in 1926, and to Mentor the following year. She taught at Bexley from 1929 to 1945 when she transferred to Linden Elementary and in 1953 was assigned to Fairmoor.

First teaching assignment for Miss Holtzman, 6980 Morse-rd, was in 1927 at St. Mary of The Springs. She went to Barrett Junior High in 1939, and to Eastmoor as a teacher of history and social studies when the school opened in 1956.

Mrs. Pryor, 300 S. Weyant-av, started teaching in Guernsey County in 1929. The next year she went to Byesville, in 1942 to Talmadge, and in 1946 to Cambridge.

She joined the Columbus School system in 1955 and taught first at Deshler. She transferred later the same year to Fair Avenue, and in 1958 went to Eastmoor.

Former City Finance Chief Hits Council's Sewer Plan

M. D. Portman, who served as the first finance director of Columbus, has joined the fight against city council's plan to finance sewer expansion through exclusive use of voted bonds.

Criticizing council's Monday action in overriding Mayor M. E. Sensenbrenner's veto of the voted-bonds plan, Portman said the city, "for the second time in a year, is on the verge of a dangerous financial situation."

Portman, one of three Democratic candidates for council, leveled his main fire at Council President William F. Fornof, chief architect of council's bonding plan for sewers. He compared Fornof's actions with the Republican council leader's stand last year in favor of local dam and reservoir construction by the now-defunct Scioto Conservancy District.

"In a follow-up of last year's $50 million conservancy tax fiasco," Portman said, "Republican councilmen are about to plunge Columbus into a 40-year, $42-million debt, which will cost us about $40-million in interest.

'Bypassing Key Officials'

"In their reckless action, the president of council and his followers are promoting this bond issue for sewer improvements without the approval of the city's two key finance officials (auditor and finance director.) This is the first time this has been done."

Portman also charged that the council plan is being rushed against the advice of a consultant retained by a previous council, and also that of leading business and civic groups. Both the Development Committee for Greater Columbus and the Columbus Area Chamber of Commerce advocated a rate increase feature as part of the sewer expansion financing program.

Since leaving the city, Portman has worked in investment banking and stockbroking. He is now with Hayden, Stone, Inc.

He was responsible for originating capital budget procedure or requiring council approval for programming capital improvements. Portman also set up the treasury investment program under which investment returns from all city departments are added to the general fund.

Poses Serious Dangers

Portman said that Fornof's plan to remove such funds from the general fund would "pose serious dangers to the city's system of financing public improvements, and could weaken such vital general fund services as police and fire protection."

Council's plan for voted sewer bonds, Portman said, is "an obvious effort to get votes" by those who would "disrupt the city's financial system and hurl us into an extravagant debt.

"It is the same irresponsible group that cost us almost $1 million for the now defunct Scioto Conservancy District. The Conservancy District borrowed this money from the city and now can't pay it back. Urged by the president of council (Fornof), the scheme would have assessed Columbus taxpayers $50 million in extra taxes.

"The same president of council now wants to increase the city's debt with no down payment and 40 years to pay at a cost in interest which will equal the cost of the project," Portman said.

Portman charged Republican councilmen with "scrapping the Capital Budget plan, set up in 1958, and retained since then by Republicans and Democrats alike." He said that council has instituted, instead, "a reckless, expensive financing scheme, which all responsible citizens and fiscal authorities oppose."

School Board OK's Federal Aid Plans

Columbus School Board Tuesday affirmed its intention to sponsor four proposed programs under provisions of the Economic Opportunity Act for education of the culturally deprived for all ages.

Budgets for the adult education program, after-school study centers and pre-kindergarten total $902,984. Of this amount $796,946 is being requested of the federal government.

Columbus Schools' contribution of $105,838 will be "in kind," by the use of facilities, and the State Department of Education will make a contribution.

The pre-kindergarten proposal, to provide an educational program, medical and social services for socially disadvantaged children will be even more effective than the Head Start Program, to start in 17 centers next week.

There will be 32 centers, operating throughout the 1965-66 school year, with two sessions a day. The 255 children now in Head Start will increase to 990.

"And head start for the children," said Joseph Davis, assistant superintendent, "is also head start—a pilot program—for schools. We'll learn a lot, gain a lot in terms of experienced staff and knowledge."

The other three proposals are:

Adult basic education, to provide an educational program for functionally illiterate adults, to be conducted July 6 to Aug. 13 at Starling and Franklin Junior High Schools.

After school study centers, to offer an opportunity for socially disadvantaged students to study in an appropriate atmosphere

Adult home management, to provide an educational program for homemakers in socially disadvantaged families, to be held at Lincoln Park, Windsor Terrace, Sunshine Gardens or Riverside Gardens, and Poindexter Village or Bolivar Arms.

HEAD START CENTERS

Centers for the head start program, to be conducted this summer for socially disadvantaged children who will enter kindergarten next fall, are located at Douglas, Eleventh, Fair, Felton, Franklinton, Fulton, Garfield, Helmandale, Leonard, Main, Maryland Park, Milo, Windsor, Ohio, Pilgrim, Second and Trevitt Schools.

Location of the 32 centers for the proposed pre-kindergarten program next fall has not yet been determined, but the areas have been selected.

Suitable rooms, perhaps in churches, must be found in cases where the school is too crowded during the regular terms.

Inter-city areas, chosen for the centers, are in the following school districts:

Chicago, Dana, Bellows, Sullivant, Michigan, Hubbard, Weinland Park, Beatty Park, Eastwood, Beck, Livingston, Kent and Lincoln Park.

In addition, the program will be continued in all districts where a Head Start center is located this summer.

Four Centers Will School Retarded

The Council for Retarded Children, Inc., of Franklin County has announced the opening of its summer programs for mentally retarded children, ages seven through 21, June 21.

Parents of retarded children are urged by the council to contact them at 221-9115 for registration of their child.

Centers have been located at Olentangy, Linden, East Broad Street and Edison Elementary Schools. Hilltop residents are invited to attend the program at Edison.

Each center will be open from 9:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. Parents must furnish a sack lunch and provide for their child's transportation. There is no registration fee.

This "Summer Socio-Educational and Recreational Program" will provide arts and crafts, musical crafts, story hours, short field trips and other outdoor activities. The program will be supervised by a professional and experienced staff of teachers of the retarded.

Last year's pilot program held at Livingston and Olentangy Elementary schools provided a summer of fun and play for the youngsters, and an an an opportunity for continued growth and development.

Walnut Ridge Pupil At Seminar

John Knouff, 1469 Simpson-dr, a student at Walnut Ridge High School, attended the Ohio State University Career Institute for high school juniors considering a career in journalism.

John is being sponsored by WLW-C in the week long activities. He and fellow student, Enke King, attended a day long seminar held at WLW-C May 29.

In the recent Exchange Club Freedom Shrine Editorial contest for high school students, John was awarded third place.

LOCAL CELEBRITIES AT OPEN HOUSE

Broad-st last Saturday afternoon were, from left, "Pasquale," founder of the restaurant chain; Al Wasiolka (seated background), whose band provided musical entertainment; WBNS-TV's Filippo and TV-4 personality Spook Beckman. The opening featured free prizes, Pepsi-Cola and samples of Pasquale's foods. Ken Cave, 384 Ross-rd, Central Ohio district manager of the chain, estimated that between 800 and 900 people attended the gala event.

REDS WILL POSE

The Cincinnati Reds have designated Saturday, June 19, as "Camera Day," "Ladies and Family Day," and "Safety Patrol Day." They meet the Chicago Cubs. Camera fans will be permitted on Crosley Field from 12:30 to 1:10 p.m. to take photos or movies of Manager Dick Sisler, the coaches and players.

Der Willage Vanderer

By R. L. SCHMITZ

A LETTER FROM GERMAN VILLAGE

Slowly, ser langsam, grows der reconstruction of Frank and Elnora Fetch's someday-residence at 71 E. Deshler-av. Der Fetches have contributed many restored Hauses to German Willage. Naturalich, ve who liff in this area und enjoy the beauties and merits of German Willage, vhich der Fetches helped bring about, vatch mit interest and expectation as vork goes on at their Deshler-av haus.

In der meantime,der Fetches und Elnora's father, Mr. Royce, who has given his decorative know-how to German Willage for years, schtill live at their Grassy Acres near Gahanna. If they don't move to German Willage soon, friends had better present them mit a flock of sheep. For as Elnora said recently, while tapping her vindpipe, "I am right up to her with all that Gahanna grass."

A connection of mine just bought in der Willage. Her new tenant said to her, "Of course, you will give me a 20-year lease." His age—80! German Willage Citadel of Optimism.

Velcome to Germon Willage, John and Claudia Betack of 548 S Fourth-st. John vorks mit der Franklin County Planning Commission a short distance avay on S. High-st. At the same time is getting his master's degree at Ohio State.

Since John vorks mit a planning commission und lives in German Willage, an area that is becoming famous amongst city planners, it figures that he is getting his degree in city planning. John's frau, Claudia, vorks at Battelle Institute und you know the caliber of the people who are associated mit that famous institution.

When der Betacks moved in Bert und Jo Kleinmaier's Deutsch cottage at the corner of Fourth und Yackson all of the restoration had been freshly done, including der floors. Rather than mar them mit a heavy bed, der Betacks schlept in a blanket roll until they vere dry. How's that for esthetic consideration?

Everytime I see a sophisticated couple like der Betacks move into our Willage I say to myself „Gudt!" More desirables — I know of three interior decorators who have taken apartments in German Willage lately. Of course, decorators are the tastemakers of any community. My neighbor, Louis Yumet, bought Dr. Adam's old mansion at the corner of Beck und Third years ago und made his home und studio there. Now with the other decorators — tastemakers — following Louis' lead und moving to German Willage, there's going to be some soul searching amongst suburbanites.

Recently a Town-st doktor stormed into his office. It had taken him 45 minutes to drive from Ardmore-rd in Bexley to vork. He fumed at his secretary: "The smartest thing you ever did was to move to German Village." The doctor was right too. For my friend, his secretary, tootles from her German Willage home to vork in less than five minutes as opposed to the doktor's frustrating 45 minutes.

Dorothy Fischer — she of the magenta door on S. Third-st, yust a hop-schkip-und-yump from the Freevay—often vatches downtown vorkers make the turn at Third und Livingston, then speed east for a miserabe half hourrat's race home. Now Dorothy relates the story about a contractor named Snow, who bought a row of old Hauses next door to downtown Washington, D.C.

After Snow had made his old wrecks into distinguished town Hauses, he put up a for rent sign near the mainstream of Washington traffic. On it he wrote: "If you lived in Snow's Court, you'd be home now." Needless to say, next Sunday Mr. Snow rented all of his houses.

C.C. Crabbe's Flag Day Rite Becomes Bexley Tradition

C. C. CRABBE'S FLAG DAY observance, grown from its small beginning 12 years ago to its present stature as a tradition in Bexley, was held Monday afternoon in front of his home, 89 Bullitt Park-pl, just north of Bexford. John W. Bricker, former governer and U. S. Senator, was the principal speaker at the event. Other city and school dignitaries were on hand, including Bexley Mayor William Schneider. And a children's choir from Bexley Methodist Church sang, accompanied by a field organ.

FROM ALL OVER BEXLEY, youngsters came to observe the patriotic celebration, and march to Broad-st and back carrying a flag, a gift from Mr. Crabbe. One hundred Boy and Girli Scouts, one each for every state in the union, participated in the flag-raising ceremony in the yard of Mrs. Jerrie Mock, across the street from the Crabbe home. Each child was also treated to an ice cream bar. The event was started 12 years ago by Mr. Crabbe, a former Ohio attorney general and still a practicing attorney.

FRIENDS HEAP HONORS ON MRS. DORA LAKIN

REBECCA SCHOTTENSTEIN entertained with a program that included Jewish folk songs at a luncheon June 9, honoring Mrs. Dora Lakin for her half-century of service to Congregation Ahavas Sholom. Sisterhood of the Synagogue were hostesses at the affair.

"FOR EACH MITZVAH," a deed of charity, according to Hebrew teaching which earns honors in heaven, "a rose from a Sisterhood board member." And Mrs. Lakin had an armful at the close of the ceremony of roses.

AS A TOKEN of their esteem for Mrs. Lakin, the president and past presidents of the Sisterhood cooked luncheon. In the kitchen are Mrs. Harry Mathless, president; Mrs. Sam Greenberg and Mrs. Sol Rising, past presidents, and Don Zeldin, sexton.

FAMILY AND FRIENDS—100 of them, were on hand for the occasion. And those who couldn't attend sent messages and telegrams. Mrs. Lakin, a widow, has one son, Dr. Ph illip Lakin, and a daughter, Miss Doby Lakin at home. She is the grandmother of a boy and a girl. Her nieces, nephews, grand-nieces and grand-nephews visit her often, and she serves as a clearing house for family news.

Kids Stage Back-Yard Fete To Aid Cancer Society Fund

The Wag Fagg, a group as individual as their club's name (made up of the first initial of their last names) staged the small-fry social success of the season for the N. Merkle-rd neighborhood last Thursday.

A backyard carnival, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Friedman, 71 N. Merkle-rd, complete from spook house in the garage to fish pond, refreshments and gypsy fortune teller, was enjoyed as much by the grownups as by the youngsters.

The seven club members planned the affair, "we ran short so we let a couple of other kids help in the spook house and things.

"And they managed the whole thing — I was surprised at how well," commented one of their mothers.

"And it was so crowded," she added with amazement. "People were everywhere."

Everything was donated — cakes for the cake walk, refreshments of potato chips, punch and cookies, and prizes and items for the fish pond, pick-a-pocket, white elephant sale and auction.

The children credited grownup friends, Jerry Friedman and Leonard Quinn, for their very big help in the affair.

And when the evening was over they counted the proceeds — $50.61 to donate to the cause they selected, the American Cancer Society.

THREE KITTENS were among items auctioned off at the last Thursday night's carnival, and brought from 50 cents to $1. Judy Worly was one of the purchasers.

A CARNIVAL — it's even more fun to stage one than to attend, a group of neighborhood youngsters in Bexley discovered last week. And it's profitable, too, they found when they had totaled up their $50.61 receipts to donate to the American Cancer Society. From left are Amy Gordon, in front, Lisa Gordon, Eddie Arndt, Jody Gordon, Ellen Friedman and Randy Arndt. The group, and Judy Worly, pictured with her kitten, are members of the Wag Fagg Club, sponsors of the carnival.

CENTER OF SCIENCE AND INDUSTRY HAS 'KNOW YOUR NUTRITION' EXHIBIT

A recent addition at the center of Science and Industry is the "Know Your Nutrition" exhibit sponsored by the Ohio Dietetic Association. Located on the second floor of the Center in the Health-Science area, the nutrition exhibit attempts to ask and answer some of the more frequently misunderstood concepts surrounding food for the family and normal nutrition.

For those questions not discussed the viewer is encouraged to pick up his telephone, and dial-a-dietitian at 221-7040 anytime between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. The dietetic association wishes to stimulate a greater awareness and understanding of foods and nutrition as these relate to family life. It is further hoped that the art and science of dietetics can be shared with the general public and allied professions.

CLEANSE YOUR FACE PROPERLY!
Do you know how to cleanse your face properly? Today's clinging cosmetics require thorough methods to remove them. Just a single cleansing with soap and water was all right for the girl who never ventured near the cosmetic counter but it can't do a good enough job of removing modern makeup. You need a good cleanser selected according to your skin type, AND A CORRECT FOLLOW-UP LOTION to remove any possible cream or lotion residue from your pores. And finally, scrub your face once a day with a rough wash-cloth wet with luke-warm water but no soap. That's to hasten the skin's natural exfoliation or peeling process.

CAN WE SHAMPOO DANDRUFF AWAY?
There are now special, effective dandruff shampoos available. They fail as a rule because the average person doesn't know how to use them. A professional Cosmetologist knows that it isn't the strength of the scrub that counts, but rather, getting the shampoo onto the scalp surface. If you get it on the scalp instead of merely in the hair, and gently manipulate it around, the chemical in the shampoo will do its job. The next important thing is to be sure that the scalp is thoroughly rinsed. Don't worry about the hair squeeking. Just be sure there is no dirty shampoo residue left on the scalp. If your dandruff condition is not a medical problem yet it is persistent, you are better advised to have all your shampoos at a good beauty salon.

DO WAVESETS CAUSE DANDRUFF?
I'll answer this with an unequivocal "No!" There was a time when wavesets dulled the natural sheen of the hair and came off in fine powdery flakes. If any of those wavesets still remain I don't know of them. There are some containing emollients, so if your hair is naturally oily you should steer clear of them.

SENSIBLE SAMENESS
If there such a thing? There cerainly is. There is no reason why you should struggle with a different hairdo every week. When you find one that is becoming and comfortable there is no need to change until fashion requires it. Just be careful not to get in a rut.

Secretary of State Ted W. Brown announced the filing of articles of incorporation for Michael Farr and Associates, Inc., by Paul H. Roth, Richard S. Kauts and Michael Farr, Jr., agent, of 2439 Elmav, Bexley.

Columbus Diocesan Schools Join 'Project Head Start'

One of the five school systems participating in Project Head Start will be the Columbus Diocesan Schools which will have three Centers for the eight-week program.

Centers will be Holy Family Elementary School, 57 S. Grubb-st-st; St. Peter School, 661 New York-av, and the third will be Don Bosco Hall, 1413 Hawthorn-av. Participation is possible because of assistance made available through the Office of Economic Opportunity, Washington, D. C.

Head Start will be a free, pre-school program to those who can participate. There will be no cost to the parents or their children. Free medical and dental examinations are some of the benefits of the program.

The program starts June 21, and ends Aug. 13. Children will be in the centers for three hours each morning, beginning at 9 a.m. Project Head Start is designed to provide experiences to help these pre-school children develop an adequate set of initial skills and the disposition toward intellectual tasks required for educational progress.

The staff assigned to each center consists of a teaching team and a social-service team. A single health-service team serves all three centers.

Temple Israel Names New Assistant Rabbi

On the recommendation of Dr. Jerome D. Folkman, Rabbi, the Board of Trustees confirmed the appointment of Rabbi Edward D. Kiner as Assistant Rabbi of Temple Israel succeeding Rabbi Stephen A. Arnold whose resignation from the post becomes effective on July 1.

Rabbi Kiner was ordained at the Hebrew Union College-Jewish Institute of Religion, Cincinnati, on May 29. The degree of Master of Arts in Hebrew Letters was conferred upon him with honors.

While in New York City, as a student at Columbia Univer, he studied at the Teachers' Institute of the Jewish Theological Seminary. Then he returned to his native city, Cleveland, where he entered Western Reserve University as a full scholarship student.

His major interest is religious education and youth activities. As a student in Cincinnati, he was an instructor in Hebrew in a Cincinnati congregation. In 1964, he represented the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith at a Methodist summer camp for young people.

As a student at the Hebrew Union College, he supplied the pulpit of Congregation B'nai Israel, Williamson, W. Va., from 1963 to 1965.

THE QUEEN WAS DELIGHTED

EVEN AFTER all the surprises that have happened to Columbus' lovely Sue Ann Downey after winning the Miss U.S.A. crown June 4 at Miami Beach, she was first wide-eyed then in tears as she opened a remembrance gift from Mrs. Ivpia Nonemaker at a press reception held Monday at the Neal Charm and Modeling School. Mrs. Nonemaker, Sue Ann's close friend and adviser of whom Sue said, "You made all this possible," presented the beauty with an exquisite, yellow gold dinner ring set with pearls and diamonds. It was comparable to a ring Sue Ann had seen and admired and had always wanted. She said, "I'll never take it off!"

All Coaching Spots 'Open' At Hamilton

By JACK WITTENMEIER

In a move unprecedented in this reporter's memory, the Hamilton Local School Board paved the way for what could be an athletic department "housecleaning" at Hamilton Township High School.

The board passed a resolution Monday night declaring all coaching positions at H-T "open."

According to Supt. D'Alan Huff, it is the intent of the school board to immediately notify all Hamilton coaches of the board's decision.

The board will request formal applications for the coaching positions now considered vacant — from both present staff members and anyone outside the school district who might be interested in any of the positions.

Huff believes the assignments will be made by July 1.

A source at the school suggested that a complete shakeup of the coaching positions would be unlikely but stressed that a "status quo" situation was even more unlikely.

The source suggested that "realignment" of several coaching positions and possibly one or two changes best described the situation.

One varsity coach at the school when told of the board's resolution, admitted that he was only mildly surprised, suspecting that some type of action was brewing in the school administration for some time.

The coach, one of several at H-T on a "continuing contract" (does not have to be renewed), admitted that he has not been given his '65-'66 coaching assignment as of yet.

By the time school is out, teachers who are to be rehired generally know their upcoming assignment, the coach admitted.

Present head coaches at Hamilton Township in major sports are: Glen Hoddy, football; George Hamric, basketball and baseball; Ray O'Dell, track, and Dave Milner, wrestling.

Play Under Way In Whitehall's Slo-Pitch Loop

'Twasn't a pleasant week for either the Whitehall police or fire departments as both entries in the Whitehall Slo-Pitch League took it on the chin in openers last week.

The WBBA (Whitehall Boys Baseball Association) Coaches took an 11-8 verdict over the Firemen while Darnell dropped the boys in blue, 9-7. Elsewhere, the Whitehall Recreation Department downed Holy Spirit, 8-2.

Sunday's schedule finds Darnell battling the Coaches at 1:30 p.m. (E. Main St. Elementary School) with the Firemen arriving on the scene at 2:45 to do battle with the Recreation Dept.

Meanwhile, the police will try to corner Holy Spirit at Rosemore Junior High at 1:30.

Gregory, James Seek Repeats At Speedway

It was pretty much a Don Gregory and Bob James story this past weekend at the Columbus Motor Speedway because Gregory took both features in the sportsman division and James duplicated the feat in the late-model category.

This week they'll both return along with a host of the best drivers and cars of Ohio Indiana and West Virginia for the Friday and Sunday evening programs of seven events — topped with a feature race for both sportsman and late-models.

The South Side raceway is guaranteeing $3 thousand in purses for the two nights.

Last Friday there were 24 fans in the crowd of 2000, who correctly picked the first five finishers in the sportsman headliner and, although there was just $100 in the speedway's free game of "Total" jackpot, track officials gave each a $5 bill.

There were no winners Sunday so there'll be $200 in cash this Friday for the fan or fans, who can pick the first five, in order, in the sportsman 20-lapper.

Time trials, both Friday and Sunday, begin at 7 p.m. and the first race gets moving promptly at 8 o'clock.

Lady Golfer Ready For PGA

Twenty-nine members of the Ladies' PGA have submitted their entries for the $10,000 Lady Carling Midwest Open at Columbus Walnut Hill Country Club, July 8-11.

Heading the list is Kathy Whitworth, who made the Bluegrass Invitational at Louisville her third winning tournament on the current tour.

ROSEMORE RUNNERS COMPLETE UNDEFEATED SEASON

THIS SQUAD of Rosemore Junior High School cindermen, guided by coach Dick Kane, finished unbeaten in oval competition this past season, bettering 10 existing team marks and tying another. Team members include (seated in front, from left): Larry Hackenberger, Dave Gettreu, Walter VanGunster, Pat Nichols, Dick Van Allen, Allan Francis, Eric Flint, Tob Petty, Rick Solt, Mike Wiggington and Mark Sander. Second row: Phil Krause, Mike Winegardiner, Ed Whiteman, Bob Workman, John Dean, Walter Theiss, Vando Rogers, Carl Martin, Randy Gardner, Danny Reid and Jay Rush. Third row: Coach Kane, Dennis Whitt, Roger Justice, Rick Selvage, Mike Gillespie, Gary King, John Adams, Charles Powell, Tom Lawson and Tim Packard. Back row: Steve Pierson, Jim Bishop, Steve Southworth, Gary Martin, Clay Fuller, Ron Ricker, Glen Foltz, George Heaton, Earl Sark, Bob Schirbach and Bernard Ratcliff.

Wit 'N' Wisdom

By JACK WITTENMEIER

Home Of The Brave . . .

About the only advantage of lying flat on your back for two weeks is catching up on your TV baseball. That's what this kid has been doing for the past 15 days — lying flat and catching up.

Wittenmeier

One act we caught recently was beamed out of Milwaukee where the fact that the Braves were back in town looked like the best-kept secret since the Allied landing at Normandy.

THE FACT that the Braves were hosting the Dodgers, leading the league and the Milwaukee nine by three games at the time apparently meant nothing to the beer city's snubbed baseball public.

Exactly one week later, the same Dodgers visited the Mets (they're in last place, you know) to the tune of 50 thousand plus in Shea Stadium.

They say that hate is the closest thing to love and Milwaukee fandom's turn on the Brave's is a case in point. The "perfect marriage" has ended — not much more than a decade after baseball history recorded a love story of no equal between franchise and fandom.

BRAVE FANS feel that they've gotten the shiv in back while owners shout back fans are turning it themselves by persisting that the Braves postpone their inevitable move to Atlanta by playing to a big, wide, wonderful and empty County Stadium.

Contrary to popular belief, there are many factions holding the Braves in Milwaukee until next summer. It's not just a simple matter of a Board of Trustees.

For example, 43 local cab drivers have figures out that they'll lose approximately $3,000 next summer since they will not be able to transport out-of-town Braves' fans to County Stadium at all — much less via Racine, Madison and (in the case some real yokels) Chicago.

NO LESS than 106 Little League teams in the Milwaukee area are named the Braves and team physicians on no less than half those teams have stipulated that they will hold the Milwaukee Baseball Club responsible for any emotional setback suffered by players resulting from lost identity.

One local brewer is preparing a suit against the Braves after paying through the tap on a series of taped commercials which has each and every man on the Milwaukee roster step up to a make-shift bar in his baseball suit and say: "The best thing like about living right here in Milwaukee is being close to the home of good, golden Schultz."

(Interesting sidelight here is a countersuit against the Braves by the Little League team physicians who charge lost identity).

FINALLY, the State Department is asking the Milwaukee club to please clear up a case of some 150 teenage girls who claim to be members of the Rico Carty Fan Club, and who threaten to defect to Cuba if their idol is sent to Atlanta.

Maybe the John Bircher said it best when he spoke cryptically of Milwaukee last week: "It may still be the land of the free . . . but it's no longer the home of the Brave."

Under Buckeye Skies

By KEN MACK McCREARY

Of Guns And Gunners . . .

Many Spectatorland sportsmen who enjoy guns and shooting are sighing with relief.

Mack

A gun regulation proposal which quietly sneaked into the General Assembly has apparently died (just about as quietly). The proposal was H. B. 909, which would have required every owner of a pistol or revolver to have a license (at a cost of $15), after undergoing an intensive personal investigation. The proposal, authored by Representative William M. Feighan, would also force a gunsmith to buy a $75 license, while gun dealers would have to plunk down a $150 license fee.

The measure went to the House Conservation Committee which held the second of two hearings last week and decided to "indefinitely postpone" any further action. In practical Statehouse language, that means the restrictive bill is deader than the proverbial dodo bird.

At the same time the conservation committee approved for floor action Joint House-Senate Resolution 47, authored by Bob Holmes of Columbus. This measure memorialized Congress to defeat U. S. Senate Bill 1592; that's the so-called "mail-order gun" measure, offered by Senator Dodd of Connecticut, which would greatly restrict the sale of mail-order guns. The joint resolution is expected to go before the Ohio House soon, with good chances for approval.

Most law officers, gun experts and many others agree that restrictive gun laws aren't the best way to keep firearms out of the hands of criminals and kooks such as Lee Oswald; a better method, they feel, is to make the penalties for using a gun in a crime so rough, prison-wise, that it won't be worth it.

Elsewhere on the shooting scene, plenty of noise across Buckeye Country from now through the weekend.

Over at Vandalia, the firing began yesterday and will wind up Sunday in the 79th annual Ohio State Trapshooting Championship. Over 1000 of the finest scatter-gunners from all over the U. S. are assaulting the clay pigeons. This shoot is second in size only to the Grand American Handicap, which will resound across the same Ruote 40 trap grounds come August.

It's a different type of shooting up at the Zeppelin Rifle Range near Akron this weekend. The Ohio State Junior Smallbore Rifle championships are expected to attract hundreds of teenage (and younger) sharpshooters from all over the state. The 2-day event is sponsored by the Ohio Rifle and Pistol Association.

Elsewhere on the outdoors calendar . . . the annual state fish and game hearings will be held Thursday, June 24, in Hearing Room 2, Ohio Departments Building, in downtown Columbus. The Division of Wildlife will outline proposals for this coming autumn's hunting seasons and regulations, along with proposals for fishing laws next year. Following these public hearings the laws governing fishermen and hunters will be finalized.

Bishop Hartley Grad Makes District AA Baseball Squad

"A great honor," was the reaction of 18-year-old Steve McLaughlin, son of Major and Mrs. Eugene J. McLaughlin, to his selection last week to the 12-man All-Central District AA high school baseball squad.

The 180-pound first baseman, a member of the Bishop Hartley High School nine, was also named as an alternate for the annual All-Ohio East and West All-Star competition to be held June 19-20 at the Columbus Jet Stadium.

The selections were made by coaches of the High School Athletic Association's central district, composed of 86-member schools.

It was McLaughlin's first and last season with the Bishop Hartley squad. He will graduate this month. He came to Columbus last spring upon the reassignment here of his father from Evreux AB, France. Major McLaughlin presently serves as the 317th Troop Carrier Wing Headquarters squadron commander.

The versatile first sacker readily admits to "compiling a batting average of more than .400 this season as a switch-hitter." He has been playing baseball since he was seven years old, but took part in varsity competition only during his sophomore and senior years.

McLaughlin related, "I plan on entering college this fall, but I'm still undecided as to which school."

EASTERN SERTOMA members stopped by last week to see Otto C. Heinzerling and his charges, the 25 hopelessly retarded children cared for at the Peek O' Wee Ones at 4216 E. Broad. And they did not come empty-handed. When they left the home could count two brand new hospital cribs and mattresses, an aspirator, a blender and electric can opener and knife sharpener. Lying in one of the new cribs is Brad, the child who has longest been at the home. Little Brad came to the Peek O' Wee Ones five and one-half years ago as a three-month-old infant weighing eight and one-quarter pounds. Throughout the years, the child, whose birth and life are a stark tragedy, has changed little, although he has gained four pounds. From the left are Woody Slatzer, chairman of the Sertoma board of directors and past president; Heinzerling; Bob Stokes, director and charter president; William Ong III, director; Al Wing, president; Jim Woodyard Jr., vice-president and president-elect; and William Cady, secretary.

Things Look Brighter For Central Market

By CHUCK HAETLE

Columbus is two steps closer to seeing a continuation of Central Market. City council agreed Monday to the purchase of a two-acre site at Mound and Fourth-sts and the hiring of an architect to draw up plans.

A third step, to lease the site to the Central Market shop-owners for $1 a year, as suggested by Councilman Ronald DeVore, was tabled.

Andy Williams, Johnny Desmond, Dick Clark and other stars appearing in the grandstand shows at the 1965 Ohio State Fair are certainly assured large audiences. There will be no charge for most grandstand performances. General admission to the fairgrounds is all you pay.

Because of prior contracts, a charge will be made for performances of the Ohio Valley Jazz Festival.

• • •

The Columbus sewer bond issue will go on the November ballot. The decision came as city council overrode Mayor Sensenbrenner's veto Monday.

Now, the people can vote: Will it be bonds or something else (like the mayor's proposed 35 percent rate increase).

While the national statistics on major crimes increased two percent in the first quarter of 1965, all categories except auto theft showed decreases in Columbus. These included murder-manslaughters (down from seven to five for the period), rape, robbery, aggravated assault, burglary, and larceny.

Rehabilitation on the near North Side of Columbus is underway. The 120-acre, now to receive federal urban renewal assistance, includes 94 dwellings to be vacated for streets, construction of a swimming pool, and expansion at Doctors Hospital and Everett Junior High School.

Also included are 600 dwellings where inhabitants will be encouraged to make home improvements with federal assistance.

The OSU baseball team's charge to the top of the heap ended up one notch short. In the final game of the NCAA College world series, the Scarlet and Gray team was defeated by an Arizona State aggregation sporting a 53 won and eight lost record—best ever in college history.

A wild, 110-mph-chase north of Worthington on Route 23 early Sunday ended with the arrest of a 17-year-old boy. Worthington Police reported that a stolen car driven by the youth stopped only after one of two cruisers in pursuit swerved into it causing it to spin out of control.

The boy escaped on foot, but was apprehended an hour and a half later in a field.

Henry Rather, new general manager of the Sheraton-Columbus (formerly the Columbus Plaza), is faced with a problem similar to the divorcee who remarries.

What do you do with the silverware with the old initials on it? And, in the case of a huge motor-hotel, the initials are not only on silverware but on linens, doors, book matches, and countless other items.

Rather can give thanks to the accidental foresight of someone who gave the luxury restaurant complex on the 21st floor the name, Compass Points. The CP initials still fit way up there.

Our reigning queen has returned! Miss Sue Ann Downey, now Miss USA, came back to Columbus long enough to complete her final exams at OSU. She was greeted at Port Columbus by, among others, Gov. Rhodes and Mayor Sensenbrenner.

OSU President Novice G. Fawcett, delivering the commencement address to the university's largest graduating class, referred to the recent free speech demonstrations.

"In contrast to this epidemic of rebellion and protest," he said, "the great body of students in our colleges remains dedicated to the idea of orderly and democratic procedures."

Among those honored at the ceremonies last Friday, was playwright-actor Elliott Nugent, who received an honorary doctor of letters degree. He was graduated from OSU in 1919.

Dr. Walter H. Judd, former Republican congressman from Minnesota and medical missionary to China, told the congregation at First Community Church, Marble Cliff, Sunday, that the United States must stay in Viet Nam. He added, however, that the long-range solution to the world's many political problems must be found in Christianity.

'Safe Route' School Program Advised

Columbus Traffic Engineer John L. Gallagher will meet soon with Columbus school officials to determine their feelings on a "Safe Route" plan he advocates for elementary school children.

Using maps of the Dana Avenue Elementary school, 300 S. Dana-av, Gallagher explained the program to the Tuesday meeting of the Columbus Traffic Commission. Gallagher said such programs have been promoted in other areas by the American Automobile Association and the American Automotive Safety Foundation.

Under "Safe Route," a child is furnished a map showing the safest route between his home and his school. The child and his parents are to study the map; then a parent is to walk the route at least once with the child.

Gallagher recommended the program as a follow-up to other division child safety programs such as crosswalk marking, signing and flasher light installations.

Gallagher said he would like to see the program in operation at 20 or more elementary schools when classes resume in September. Subject to approval of the program by public and private school officials, the Division of Traffic would map the basic routes.

Reconsiders One-Ways

Commission members also revived the question of setting up one-way traffic on Rich and Town-sts between Glenwood-av and Starling-st. The change reportedly has the tentative approval of Safety Director Frederick J. Simon.

Gallagher was asked to gather information on rerouting of traffic at times when underpasses are flooded, and to discuss bus scheduling needs with the Columbus Transit Co. It was indicated that neither item would seriously threaten the plan.

Gallagher said he hopes to have the answers in time for the commission's July 13 meeting.

If approved, the one-way traffic plan will include these features:

Town-st traffic will be westbound and Rich-st, eastbound, between Glenwood - av and Starling-st. Parking will be permitted on the south side of Town-st, and the 7 to 9 a.m. restriction will be removed from the north side of the street. The 4 to 6 p.m. ban on the north side of the street will be maintained.

Rich-st traffic will face a "no parking anytime" ban on the north side of the street between Hawkes-av and Gift-st, while the normal 7 to 9 a.m. and 4 to 6 p.m. parking bans will be in effect between Gift-st and Starling-st.

Parade Of Homes Displays Newest Home Design Ideas

The 1965 Parade of Homes, one of the most successful ever according to William S. Fannin, chairman, closes its nine-day run Sunday, June 20.

Fannin said thousands of Central Ohioans have toured the parade site at Walnut Hill Park on E. Livingston-av, to view the latest in home design.

The parade, sponsored by the Home Builders Association of Greater Columbus, is featuring 26 homes in the $25,000 to $35,000 price range.

"The exciting features and designs of these homes," Mr. Fannin continued, "caught the eyes of men and women alike."

A special feature, a Plan Book, contains floor plans, illustrations and information about each home. Viewers can study the latest features in home building and adapt them for their own use.

Each home has met the rigid standards of the Home Builders Association of Greater Columbus. Every home plan was studied and approved by a special committee of the Home Builders Association and architects to assure variety and use of new ideas.

An added attraction, climaxing the Parade of Homes, is the "Parade of Money." A line of dollar bills will be awarded to some person who visited the parade.

For the remainder of the event, daily hours are 5 to 10 p.m. Saturday and Sunday hours are 1 to 10 p.m.

NEW YORKSHIRE VILLAGE CONDOMINIUM APARTMENT

Fritsche Building Town House Apartment Village In Yorkshire

Ground was broken last Thursday for a new luxury suburban town house apartment village in the Yorkshire community on Noe-Bixby-rd by Columbus developers Ernest G. Fritsche and Co.

To be named Yorkshire Village, the first unit of the new condominium apartment community will include 29 deluxe two and three-bedroom units, according to Virgil L. Heskett, Fritsche vice-president.

A possible total of 100 Yorkshire Village units will be built in the wooded area just north of Livingston-av, Heskett said.

The 29 varied one, two and three-level units will be in a court arrangement overlooking a wooded ravine and will feature a colonial styling with antique brick exterior.

Priced in the $20,000 to $25,000 range, the luxury town houses will include central air conditioning, sound conditioning, separate utilities, range, dishwasher, brick enclosed patios, complete landscaping and maintenance, garages, extra parking spaces and basements. Residents will be eligible to join the Yorkshire Recreation Club located on Big Walnut Creek.

Conventional loans with 80 to 90 percent mortgage financing will be available on the units, Heskett said.

A condominium is a multi-family dwelling where each resident owns his apartment unit, plus a proportionate share of the real estate and common areas such as walks, driveways and lawn. The owner holds a deed to the dwelling and can mortgage or sell it independently of others.

Owners of the apartment units actually have all of the joys of home ownership, including income tax deduction advantage, without the usual chores of upkeep and maintenance associated with property ownership.

Yorkshire Village is located in a quiet residential area and will be near an access to the new east freeway when completed. The York Plaza shopping center to be built on Livingston-av will make shopping easily accessible.

Ohio Appliances Introduces The 1966 RCA Color Line

The largest number of RCA color television models in the company's history are being previewed by dealers from Columbus and Central Ohio during a showing at Ohio Appliances, Inc., 1171 Goodale-st.

Thirty-seven new 1966 models, 34 solid state stereo models of RCA Victor phonographs, more than 28 models of AM and FM radios, and 31 new models of black and white television are making their debut.

Joseph A. Nauer, Jr., vice-president and general manager of the Columbus office, said that the increased emphasis on the number of color television sets offered this year is due to the phenomenal increase of color television programming by the three networks as well as an increase in local color offerings.

"More than 100 hours of weekly color programming are being planned by the three Columbus television stations for this fall," Nauer said. He also predicted that the number of color television sets in the Columbus area would soon double.

Styling highlights of the 1966 RCA Victor color television line include more emphasis on specific styles, including three Moorish styled receivers to satisfy current consumer interest in Mediterranean furniture styling.

Manpower Reports Record Activity

NET Reports On S. Africa

South Africa today is a nation caught in smoldering racial conflict.

National Educational Television, in two unprecedented first-hand reports entitled "South African Essay," explores the effects of apartheid —the political and social philosophy that calls for the separate development of white and black races.

The first of the two programs, "The Fruit of Fear," shows what life is like in ghetto townships outside major city limits and what life is like for the privileged white. "The Fruit of Fear" premieres Wednesday, June 23, at 7:30 p.m. on Channel 34.

'Bus Stop' Tryouts Open

OSU's Stadium Theatre has announced the tryouts for its production of William Inge's "Bus Stop," to be presented July 20 to 24.

Production will be directed by Roy Bowen, director of Stadium Theatre. There are roles for three women and five men in the play.

The tryouts will be held on Thursday and Friday, June 24 and 25, at 7:30 p.m. in the Derby Hall Theatre on the campus. Reading copies of "Bus Stop" are available for loan from room 205 Derby Hall between the hours of 9 a.m. and 4:30 p.m.

Fornof's Sewer Plan Sounds Good . . . But

Is there a limit to the amount of faith Columbus Council President William R. Fornof has in his plan for voted-bond financing of the city's sewer expansion program?

He and fellow councilmen have rejected the advice of a consultant hired to recommend the best financing method for meeting sewer capital improvement needs. The consultant advised a 30 to 35 percent rate increase to finance a 10-year-$62.5-million sewer expansion program. This, he said, would cost the average resident one cent more per day.

Columbus Finance Director John P. Stanley told council that the five-year sewer expansion program ($42.5 million) could be financed by an approximate 24 percent sewer rate increase.

The Development Committee for Greater Columbus has called for a minimum 35 percent sewer rate increase. The Columbus Area Chamber of Commerce has advocated the combination of a rate increase with other financing alternatives.

Each of the suggested plans incorporates the use of five-year notes followed by long-term bonding.

Fornof insists that his plan will avoid a rate increase. In fact, he has said that there should be no increase in rates for the next 43 years. Good news for the bill payer!

Fornof is equally insistent in declaring that income tax funds will not be tapped to pay off the voted bonds. Good news for all who pay city income tax, because it eliminates the threat of a hike in that payment!

And, finally, Fornof scoffs at the idea that his voted-bond plan could possibly bring about a hike in property taxes. It just won't happen, he says. This, of course, is good news to the property owner!

Fornof's main thesis is this: Future sewer division income — based on current rates — will be sufficient to meet all operational costs and meet all bond payments over the next 43 years to finance a five-year capital improvement program. Because Fornof promises no rate increase for the life of the bonds, it must be assumed that the city will also be able to meet capital improvement programs beyond the next five years.

Who could want better news than this?

BUT . . .

The very heart of Fornof's voted-bond plan is that the full faith and credit of the city is pledged to repayment of the bonds. In other words, the voter who says "yes" to this bond issue is saying, in effect:

"If for some reason sewer rental revenues aren't enough, or aren't used to repay the bonds, and if the city cannot or does not use other income to pay off the bonds — the county auditor MUST raise my property tax in an amount sufficient to meet the obligation I have co-signed."

The message from Fornof is clear. He says: It will never happen, folks, but you better co-sign this deal with me just in case it does.

Less clear, however, is Fornof's refusal to deal with the one person who could put the official stamp of truth — and approval — on his plan. We mean City Auditor John H. Price.

If Price can certify as true and accurate the income and expenditure projections used to support Fornof's plan, the loquacious council leader will win a great victory. He cannot claim political bias. Both he and Price are Republicans.

But Price has indicated that he will not lend his name to a report over which he had no control. Price has said that he would rather rely on figures he gathers. We wish he would do just that, and provide Columbus citizens with some guidance from the most logical source of such knowledge.

If Fornof's bonding plan will do what he says it will do, it should not require a vote of the people. If it won't meet the performance he claims, it may not be worth voting for. We can't help feeling that Fornof's plan offers too much good news for too many people.

Maybe we're becoming too cynical about "grand plan" promises by candidates seeking re-election.

Moment to Remember

Frosting on the Cake

BY "UNCLE DOC" ROSS — U.S.A.

Ten years ago this easy-going nation got a severe jolt . . . the discovery was made that Johnny and Mary couldn't read. Many of us who had been concerned about this lack in elementary education had just about given up.

Those of us who had been reared on the McGuffey readers gained new hope. The long-abused phonetic system showed signs of life.

Today, with newspapers doing a better job every year, more people are rediscovering the importance of adequate speech and correct use of the basics in communication.

There are still far too many youngsters in high school graduating classes each spring who just can't utter comprehensible and grammatically correct sentences.

They mumble.

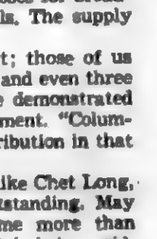
The universal use of "mikes" with amplification has hindered the practice of normal voice projection. Anyone who listens to much of the trivia now flooding radio and TV is appalled at the jibberish that passes for broadcasting, even by highly rated professionals. The supply of adequate newscasters is low.

Columbus is fortunate in that respect; those of us who can read and who can understand two and even three syllable words appreciate those who have demonstrated proper use of modern broadcasting equipment. "Columbus Town Hall" has made a priceless contribution in that regard. Ditto "Meet The Press."

On local stations in both media, men like Chet Long, Hugh DeMoss and Martin Petrie are outstanding. May their tribe increase. Nothing disturbs me more than straining to get the real meaning of what is being said. The worst offenders still seem to be big names out of Washington.

Parents, see to it that your children are saved from being "tongue lazy." Improper speech in the home can have a dangerous influence on the lives of children.

Ability to speak clearly and effectively is an important part of the "personality quotient." Having children read aloud is one of the best methods. Teachers who know how to read TO children are priceless in any school.



'THE GRIST'

Ground Out by Dusty Miller

HISTORY LESSON

CHAPTER I — Much longer than "four score and seven years ago" Thomas Watts and his wife Katharine came to Ohio from Virginia. For four decades he was the educational and cultural leader of the community.

From my youth up I knew "Aunt Katie Watts" and knew about "Uncle Tommy Watts" from my forebears who had been his pupils and who revered his memory.

Dusty

During the long life with which the Creator has satisfied me, I have known seven generations of the descendants of the talented Virginian and his gentle, soft-spoken wife.

• • •

CHAPTER II — Friends are congratulating John and Bertha Watts Mount on their daughter Marilyn's being chosen Presidential Scholar, and having honors bestowed upon her by the President in ceremonies at the White House. Who can be so ecstatic about this as Dusty Miller, for who else had a double-cousin-ish kinship with her grandfather and sat with him in a country school?

And, who, indeed, but the great-great-granddaughter of Thomas Watts could merit such high honors?

• • •

CHAPTER III — At Blanchester High School commencement, Sharon Watts, great-great-great-granddaughter of Thomas Watts, won the class honors, including a scholarship to Miami University.

Not so incidentally as factually, Sharon's brother David was high man on Miami's totem pole at the recent commencement.

FOOTNOTE — "Surprised?" No, I was expecting it.

An Editor's Outlook . . . by Jenkin Lloyd Jones

It's Time For A Look At The Coffin

During the later Egyptian dynasties it was customary for the Pharaoh, when the revelry at a palace feast was at its height, to make a small sign to his chief housekeeper. Whereupon, the golden doors were thrown open and slaves, bearing a coffin, marched in and paraded silently around the hall.

This subdued the drunken laughter of the courtiers and the squeals of the dancing girls, and served as a wise reminder that revelry doesn't last forever.

Our genial Pharaoh currently in the White House is calling in no coffins. Indeed, every effort is being made to steam up the party even more in the name of the "Great Society."

A Federal deficit of at least $5 billion is now assured next year by the Administration's insistence on cutting excise taxes in order to promote "full employment." Since the first of the year Uncle Sam has lost another billion in his gold reserves. The Federal debt now stands at 32 followed by 10 zeros and the Secretary of the Treasury has just asked Congress to raise the limit again.

In the meantime, we are committed, and properly so, to a not-so-cold war against rampaging world Communism. It is true the Communists are split, but only over the question of whether we should be strangled or beheaded. Anyway, we finally grew tired of being nibbled to death, so we hit back, first in Viet Nam, where the danger was clear, and then in the Dominican Republic, where the danger was potential.

And don't ever think our challenge hasn't been accepted. There has been no Red pull-back in Southeast Asia and we can confidently count on the pressure mounting in Africa and South America. What we are heading for is a test of will, for the wisest Red strategists realize that they have only a limited time to tip the balance of world power in their favor in view of their embarrassment at running perpetual poorhouses.

Yet, in the face of this grim reality our leadership in Washington is behaving not only as though we can have guns and butter, but guns and butter-cream-double-dipped-chocolate-bonbons. The national popsicle wagon continues rolling down the street in spite of the lively possibility that within months we may be on a semi-war economy and up to our ankles in blood.

Because the United States Government hasn't had any difficulty in financing any war since that of 1812, we forget that the ability to wage a protracted struggle depends not merely upon manpower and industrial potential, but also upon the capacity of the government to shoulder staggering wartime deficits. Two World Wars ended the British Empire, halved the dollar-value of the pound, and reduced the United Kingdom to a second-rate power.

Yet we persist in behaving as though the national debt were of no consequence, and "social gains" more vital than fiscal integrity. The booming stock market and rising real estate prices are often pointed to as evidence of our national health. Are they, really?

No nation has ever piled up debt for very long before it has been driven into inflation. If this were not so, every government since Ur of the Chaldees would have been able to achieve perpetual prosperity by perpetual borrowing.

There comes a time when every debt-sodden government is driven to paying back the real money it borrowed with baloney money — money not backed by gold or silver but only by its word. We tried that in the Revolutionary War, and the phrase, "Not Worth a Continental," is still in use. For the word of dishonest governments, like that of dishonest men, is subject to depreciation.

When such a threat presents itself, foreign holders of a currency cash it in for hard money and gold flies away. Distrust breeds more distrust and fear hastens the crisis. As a prelude to disaster people hasten to put their money into real estate, jewels or common stocks, for the old "safe" havens of cash, insurance policies and bonds which promise returns, not in real values, but only in specific numbers of dollars, are no longer safe.

It would be alarmist and premature to say that we have arrived yet at a panic point, because bond values have so far held up well. But our light-hearted commitment to higher spending and lower taxes has certainly frightened the citizens of foreign nations who, themselves, have been over the falls.

Congress has ceased to be a deliberative body and has been behaving like a group of high school rooters before a hypnotizing cheer leader. The Congressional Record still contains some solid debate but the vote is all whoop-de-do. And citizens who each week top the all-time record for installment debt are confident that the "Great Society" will fix it so their debts can never overwhelm them.

Plenty of wine. Plenty of music. Plenty of dancing girls. Now let's have a look at that little old coffin.

(T-M, WRR Gen. Fea. Corp.)

Guest Pulpit . . .

Time heals all wounds. How timely and how untrue that statement is.

Timely because it is now, in the presence of the struggle for human dignity and freedom, that time is a most important factor. We are being judged in our own generation, and the time it takes for us to become involved in the fight for man's humanity will determine the severity of that judgment. It is untrue because our own prejudices are a witness to the fact that the wounds are still there. Time is neutral. It serves to record both good and evil. Only our actions will determine the kind of story time will record for us.

Rev. Jones

How often do we hear it said that if we just wait long enough the racial situation in our land will straighten out by itself. The person who makes this kind of statement must either be living in a vacuum or be an extremely ignorant individual.

How can anyone look at the history of man's inhumanity to man and say that all will work out in time? It is only through action that the wounds of humanity are healed.

Christ didn't just sit down on a hill and say, "Just wait world. Some day, some time you'll be able to work things out."

It was not until he climbed to the garbage dump of Jerusalem and hung on a cross in the hot, baking sun, his lungs filled with the stench of decay and his life oozing out of the wounds in his body, that the world began to feel its wounds being healed.

It was not time that brought about the healing process but the love of God which allowed Christ to be wounded for the sake of humanity.

The wounds of racism, poverty and war are still with us. The healing process is not complete. As members of the Body of Christ we are in the process of healing. Laymen and clergy alike are called to the business of healing the wounds of humanity.

A physician cannot heal a wound until he examines, probes and feels it. Likewise we cannot heal humanity's wounds until we examine with our minds, probe with our senses, and feel the infection with our bodies.

Christ involved himself with the struggles of men and was wounded in an attempt to heal. As members of his body, the Church, we can expect nothing more. We must be involved and in the process we will be wounded.

But to remain uninvolved, to say that everything will work out in time is to remain unfaithful to our Lord and to speak blasphemy in the presence of our God.

FISCAL RESPONSIBILITY

The farther we go in 1965, the more some of us give a thought to national political affairs. Perhaps an off year is better for thinking than an election year.

Not yet has all the dust settled after the 1964 campaign. The Republicans are still trying to repair the damage and heal the grievous wounds acquired in internal and external contention. The President, now on his own after a time of tragedy, is trying to carry out what he believes is his mandate. Also, he is trying to keep the peace in his own party and keep an eye on some obvious younger ambitions in New York and possibly Massachusetts.

There are differences in political philosophies, as there should be, between the two great parties. But also there are things in common, some of them good, some bad. One of them, potentially disastrous, is the problem of fiscal responsibility, particularly in our national government.

Since 1917, and especially since 1933, under both Democrats and Republicans, we have had too many deficit years and too few surplus. One of the chief causes is foreign aid, necessary or not to prevent the spread of communism. Domestic programs, always apparently more and more costly, are a part of the picture, too.

The Republicans accuse the Democrats of practicing Robin Hood government, taking from the rich to give to the poor. Some Democrats seem to think the Republicans have played Scrooge with public funds to give their friends a better chance to risk resources to reap rich rewards in private enterprise. So goes the pluralogue.

It says here . . .

From here it looks as though we've had too much credit card government for too long. How much longer can we afford it?

What DID You Do, Ed?

The spaceman's words were loud and clear
For the anxious people on earth to hear.
What was this historic dialogue?
"You smeared my windshield, you dirty dog."

We hope the historians will duly record that Astronaut Jim McDivitt chuckled as he delivered the now-famous message to space twin Ed White. The words "dirty dog" are, to most of us, a playful expression. But not so in some other parts of the world, where such a phrase would be pure profanity.

It's a darn shame when a fellow is more than 100 miles away from home (straight up) and still must guard his every word. But alas, such is the plight of an astronaut in flight.

Should a similar situation occur with our next two-man space flight, we suggest the command pilot say something like:

"Sir please cease and desist whatever it is you are doing to cause my windshield to become smudged."

We would like to graphically detail our excitement at watching pictures of the space walk and listening in on the Gemini 4 "party line." But, for obvious reasons, we cannot report our exact exclamations.

OUR READERS' Views

Letters to the Editor on topics of public interest are always welcome. They should be written or typed legibly on one side of the paper only and limited to 350 words. Keep The Central Market

To The Editor:

Suggestions on the Market Question:

It takes a long time to undo mistakes in cities in which the citizens are the victims.

Much thought must be involved in any project if it is to benefit all the people and not just the few.

Thinking things out has become obsolete. It takes time and time is one thing we don't seem to have at present.

In Germany, where the custom originated, wealthy citizens designated money in their wills for certain projects that would benefit all the citizens.

The Market Place was willed to the city for a market and for nothing else.

In future years the good citizens of Columbus so inclined, will no longer do this if the money or property is not used for the purpose designated.

We need competition in business. Business controlled by just one type tends to become top heavy. These businessmen will be able to raise prices at will and the citizens will be at their mercy.

Ohio farmers bring their produce to the Central Market, while other interests get them elsewhere, taking money out of Ohio.

Some of these merchants are appearing, who get their products from the West.

These products are not as fresh or palatable as the home-grown ones. You usually get what you pay for.

The farmers around Columbus spend their money in Columbus. Give them a square deal and enjoy fine fresh products!

To The Publisher:

We wish to express our appreciation for the excellent feature article on Miss Isabelle Wallace as it appeared in the South Side Spectator.

Miss Wallace has devoted a half century to public education. As a result of this article, public response to Miss Wallace has been most gratifying.

We wish to further commend Mrs. Jane Robinson for her efforts in this project as well as her outstanding cooperation in printing our "school news".

'Happier Living' Contest Winners Had Happy Trip; Glad To Be Home

Imagine, for a moment, you have lived in quiet retirement for a number of years. Although age has touched both you and your wife kindly, as still, you are active members of the Golden Wedding Club.

You have never seen New York. You have never flown above the clouds, except perhaps in spirit.

Suddenly, you are caught up in a great adventure. You have won a newspaper contest. Your picture and your story are front page news.

You have the opportunity to visit the World's Fair, tour the Atlantic seaboard's Aladdin City, stroll the Great White Way rubbing elbows with celebrities.

And the magic carpet that will whisk you there is not only a silver flash in the sky which neither your wife nor you have ever ridden but it is one of the jet age's newest short hoppers — an American Airlines 727 Astrojet.

Would you be young enough, still adventuresome enough, to start packing your bags? Or would you . . .

Well, here is what the Radcliffes, Elzie and Hazel decided. The Radcliffes, who reside at 749 S. Richardson-av, were the winners of the recent "Happier Living Contest" sponsored by The Spectator.

A Spectator reporter met them Friday at Port Columbus as they deplaned from their "Happier Living" vacation. This is their reaction, in their own words:

"To those who had never been on an airplane, the trip to New York and return on an American Airlines (727) Astrojet, is an experience that will never be forgotten.

"Our ship had about 85 passengers aboard, and in one hour and 13 minutes we were landed at LaGuardia Airport, N.Y.

"Cruising along at 29,000 feet, the ride was remarkably smooth and comfortable. The top side of the clouds looked like huge mountains covered with snow.

"Dwight Persons (American Airlines district sales manager) who came in on the very ship that we went out on, wished us lots of fun and happiness, and assured us that the weather in New York was clear and hot; however there was some overcast and slight rain Wednesday.

"We could not have had a better place to stay than the Commodore Hotel, whose courtesy, hospitality and appointments generally were A-1.

"The World's Fair is truly that; it is so big, so diversified, so remarkable that one can hardly believe it, even after seeing it.

"The docks, the huge liners, the Queen Mary and the United States; the circle trip around Manhattan Island (the $24 worth of land, bought by the Dutch from the Indians in 1626) now worth billions were in themselves quite an education.

"I should say that one of the most interesting features of New York City is its people — the most cosmopolitan city in the world.

"And one could never forget the venture along the "Great White Way" — 42nd and Broadway — Times Square — aand the thousands of people going and coming — truly a city that never sleeps.

"We wish to thank C. C. Hartley, Mrs. Glenna DeWitt and the Hartley Publishing Co. for their wonderful courtesy and generosity which made this trip possible and so enjoyable. Also to "Doc" Campbell and "Mac" McDermott for their arrangements and photography.

"Sincerely

Mr. and Mrs. Elzie Radcliffe"

"WE WERE REALLY 'flying high — and fast' weren't we, Captain!" Mrs. Radcliff congartulates American Airlines Capt. C. E. Seal who jetted them from New York's LaGuardia Field in 82 minutes on their return trip from their World's Fair Spectator Holiday. "Why, it takes us longer than that to go to the supermarket," added Elzie Radcliff. Capt. Seal, a 25-year veteran with AA, is based in Dallas. It was the Radcliffe's first "airplane ride," their first trip to New York and their first visit to a World's Fair.

Lake Central's new prop-jet NORD 262

The competition to develop a worthy replacement for the old reliable DC-3 went on a good long time. As you can imagine, the U.S. Civil Aeronautics Board looked at many a plane before it commended one for its specific capabilities. The winner—by a good long Gallic nose—is the new French prop-jet NORD 262, to be flown first by Lake Central.

Anything the DC-3 does, the NORD does newer. It gets you there faster, and more comfortably. It's air conditioned. Pressurized. Boards on the level. In short, the perfect short-haul carrier to the fifty mid-central U.S.A. cities Lake Central flies to.

News Travels Fast In This Household

By ADELINE BAILEY

Since my children are too young to have been influenced by such immortal radio newscasters as Gabriel Heatter and H. V. Kaltenborn, both retired from active broadcasting, I am at a loss to figure out why they sound so much like these particular announcers who possessed the ability to make every news event seem earth-shaking in importance.

I am referring in particular to the manner in which my kids relate the day's news to my husband when he arrives home from work. He needs only turn the corner onto our street whereupon he will be flagged down by one of them, eager to be the first to recount every disaster that has hit this household since his departure.

They also feel that a complete analysis of my [illegible] should be made available to the public as they shout, "Boy, is Mom mad. You're a half hour late for dinner, you know."

I can think of better ways of saving our marriage. Such as adding a potion of hemlock to his drink.

I find it rather unusual, too, that a good portion of the items refer to mishaps for which I am to blame. Somehow, they don't reveal such newsworthy events as the fact that their report cards came out today. And that while playing with the tape recorder, they broke it.

"Guess what!" they cry. "Mom almost drove into a truck this morning. We could have all been . . ."

"Well, now, it wasn't QUITE that serious," I hasten to interrupt, as my husband rushes to look at the fenders.

But hardly is this "catastrophe" resolved when another of my children will choose this time to disclose that I lost my wristwatch. "It's probably around," I offer in rebuttal, meanwhile asking the kids if they'd like to go outside and play awhile. Like for the next three days.

While listening to a rundown of these calamities, plus a description of how the dog chewed another leg off the coffee table, my husband will have failed to notice that one of the kids has an arm in a sling. I must explain hurriedly that a Band-Aid would have been sufficient, but our kids love to wear slings. They also feel that a bandage wrapped around their heads is more dramatic and effective than a dab of iodine on a scratch.

Actually, I think they believe that it makes them look more like correspondents covering a war. And they may be right.

WICS Give Unwed Mothers Key To Door Of The Future

By JANET MICHAEL

The war on poverty was joined by the fairer sex last week when members of four local church groups left their tidy kitchens in search of girls in poverty.

What they found made them heartsick and full of compassion . . . and most spent some sleepless nights.

When the War of Poverty Bill was passed and training centers set up, it offered an opportunity for poverty stricken men and women to learn a skill. Money was appropriated for the centers and for Job Corps directors, yet nothing was set aside for WICS.

WICS (Women In Community Service, Inc.) is a national group of volunteer women, inter-faith, inter-racial, who are under the agreement with the Office of Economic Opportunity to recruit and screen young women for the residential Training Centers of the Job Corps.

It is comprised of members of the National Council of Catholic women, the National Council of Jewish Women, the National Council of Negro Women and the United Church Women.

In February a handful of local women visited Washington, D.C., in hopes they would be permitted to establish a screening center in Columbus . . . on a strictly volunteer basis.

Washington advised that Columbus was in too high an economic bracket and permission was denied.

Flooded With Requests

Undaunted, the women returned, printed cards explaining the training program and distributed the cards in the settlement and slum areas.

The poverty pockets in Columbus quickly came to light.

Washington was "flooded" with cards from Columbus girls telling of their case histories, problems, needs and interest in centers.

Permission for a screening center was granted.

Now it became a case of "full steam ahead" for Columbus WICS. Having no money for the big job ahead, they began wheeling and dealing. The Catholic Center at 80 S. Sixth-st, donated office space. Dr. Ollie Goodloe, the county health commissioner, agreed to make provisions to have the applicants given physical interviews. The City Police Department stated it would be happy to co-operate and Columbus Board of Education has furnished the names of underprivileged girls.

Plans were made immediately to send two local women to Washington to attend a school for directors.

Volunteers were sent into the slum areas and told, "Should the man of the house be lying on the floor, half naked and in a drunken stupor, leave your material and say you will call again."

Girls between the ages of 16 and 21 were contacted and invited to come to the office for an interview. The volunteers didn't have to wait long.

When the WICS opened the door of the office they also opened another door . . . one that would mean a whole new world to underprivileged girls.

Somewhat timidly, but eager for this opportunity, the girls opened the door. They came dressed in perhaps the only dresses they had, but they were clean, believing the fact that they are largely unemployable because they lack the education and job skills to move ahead.

Many Unwed Mothers

Most came because they have two mouths to feed . . . their own and that of their illegitimate baby. But all of them came because they want something better than they have.

One Columbus high school submitted a list of 60 high school drop-outs. All were unwed mothers. One girl's case history revealed that she had been molested three times by her father.

Wearing their hearts on their sleeves, the WICS volunteers explained the program to the girls, arranded physical interviews and submit the case histories to the Job Corps headquarters in Washington, D.C., for final selection of enrollees.

Those selected will be on the basis of acute need and will be sent to the training centers in Cleveland or St. Petersburg Fla. Three more centers are near completion, two on the East Coast and one in Los Angeles. A girl may learn to be a typist, office clerk, secretary, dressmaker, beauty operator, practical nurse or sales clerk. She will be taught attractive grooming habits, how to manage the family budget, child care skills, and how to plan balanced meals. She will learn to speak and write well and how to make a good impression when applying for a job.

Training Period Varies

The training period may take anywhere from 10 months to two years, depending on the vocation she chooses. While there, she will be given a uniform and her room and board. She will be paid $30 a month so she may learn the value of money and how to handle it. Fifty dollars a month will be set aside for her as a "nestegg" and will be given to her when she has completed the course. Expenses will be paid for one trip home a year.

But what will become of the girl who is not accepted? The girl, who according to headquarters, has a high school diploma and should be able to find work?

WICS volunteers have not forgotten her. WICS are in the process of contacting local community service organizations such as Goodwill, and will place her where she is best suited.

But this is only the beginning . . . and the end is nowhere in sight. The project is gigantic in scope. It will take the co-operation of many compassionate women, who are willing to work and work hard. The pay envelope is nonexistent but the rewards and experience will be priceless.

That number is 228-2453, extension 39.

"MY SISTER will keep my baby while I'm away," said this unidentified girl as she talked with Mrs. Walter B. (Jane) Harris, administrative assistant of WICS. Being an unwed mother and a high school dropout, this young girl has found the door to a new world through WICS.

WICS List Charter Program Directors

Spearheading the newly formed Columbus unit of Women in Community Service, Inc., is Mrs. John R. Holden, project director, assisted by Miss Irene Patterson. Mrs. Walter B. Harris is administrative assistant.

Others of the administrative committee include: Mrs. Joseph Horchow, secretary; Mrs. Sober Stahl, treasurer and Mrs. George DeNucci, office manager.

CARD OF THANKS

It is with heartfelt gratitude that we desire to thank all those who helped in any way after the untimely death of our beloved husband, father and brother, Herbert L. Pfaltzgraf. It has been coisoling to receive the many floral offerings, calls, cards and visits. Our sincere appreciation to the Synod of Ohio of the Lutheran Church In America who started a living memorial by a contribution to the building fund at his beloved Hilltop Lutheran Church. Our sincere thanks also go to members and groups of the church, and to his friends who are contributing to the memorial fund.

A hymn he wrote in May, 1963, is printed here as exemplifying his life and his desire for each and everyone to build Christ's church in this world:

GOING AND GROWING WITH CHRIST

Our Church today is reaching out,
A house of love to build;
A witness to those all about,
Our love is not yet stilled;
We best can serve our Lord on high,
When this His Church we build;
Our toils begun shall testify,
We do what he has willed.
Church will rise to Her new day,
Her growing not yet done;
We go with Christ the only way,
We grow with Christ, Thy Son;
Strong in the love which Thou inspired,
To help us work as one;
Willing to give what is required,
To wrought what is begun.

Mrs. Jane Pfaltzgraf, daughter, Nancy; son, Charles, and brother, Earl T.

Gardens And Flowers

By JIM GRUETT

ONCE AGAIN — As summertime draws near, many home gardeners are enjoying the first crop of fresh garden vegetables. Oakleaf lettuce and green peas are particularly good this season. Complementing our bright sunshine this week are brilliant red clusters of climbing blaze roses and purple clematis flowers. What would our world be like without beautiful flowers such as these?

LAWNS — Time to put the water hose to work again. Weekly mowings should now be sufficient to keep lawns wellgroomed. If your lawn appears to develop a brown cast immediately after mowing check to see if the tips of the grass blades are frayed. If so, have your rotary mower sharpened. Dull cutting surfaces on a rotary mower blade rip rather than cut. Dull-reel mowers leave a series or yellow parallel stripes across the blades. Both types of injury are easy to detect.

TREES, SHRUBS—If you haven't already fed your favorite trees and shrubs, do so yet this month and give them plenty of water. Bagworms are now evident on many varieties of evergreens. These insects cause injured evergreens to brown rapidly. Control is difficult once in the so-called "bag" stage. If you suspect insect injury, but are not positive, call Charles Buck, manager of Torco Landscape Maintenance Service at 889-1988. Mr. Buck is a real pro in the proper care and maintenance of plant material around the home. He will be happy to identify any insect problems and give you a free estimate on any phase of landscape maintenance you might be interested in. He will gladly answer any questions about new trees or shrubs for your property also.

GROVE CITY FLORIST — Completely remodeled from bow to stern. Manager Ella Ware is busy arranging a vast new array of interesting floral and giftware items for her big open house June 18 and 19. I visited her Grove City shop recently and highly recommend a drive out to 3726 N. Broadway in Grove City. It will be a drive well worth while.

EXAMS DATED

Will Remain As Advisor

HARTLEY RESIGNS AS SPECTATOR PUBLISHER

C. Carlton Hartley, 57, announced his resignation this week as publisher of the Spectator Newspaper chain. It became effective Monday, June 21.

Robert W. Reider has been named president of the new corporation with Hartley remaining as a member of the chain's board of directors. Controlling stock in the newspapers was recently purchased by Ohio Radio, Inc. That corporation includes former Ohio governor Michael V. DiSalle who serves as chairman of the board.

A 40-year veteran of the newspaper business, Hartley stated that he will remain as publisher-owner of the Daily Times at Greenfield, O., the daily Madison Press (London, O.) and the weekly Plain City Advocate.

He will also continue to be active in the management of Hartco Printing Co., West Jefferson, O., owned by him and his son, Carlton W. Hartley.

In a statement issued this week Hartley said: "My retirement from the active management of The Spectator publications does not mean that I am not going to be active in the community. I have numerous business responsibilities and fully intend to pursue these as well as my various civic activities locally.

"I am deeply appreciative of the very fine cooperation I have received from the business interests of this area in the publication of our newspapers over so many years and I am likewise grateful for the very fine response we have enjoyed from our reading public.

"Such expressions have at all times served as an inspiration to be of service to the community and I sincerely trust that the public can continue to expect this type of service. It is my belief that The Spectator newspapers will continue to grow and fulfill a much needed place in journalism in Central Ohio.

"It has been my great privilege to work with an outstanding and dedicated group of people in the Hartley Newspaper organization. To them and to the community generally, I say thanks."

Reider paid tribute to Hartley this week, saying:

"Under Mr. Hartley's leadership, The Spectator has become one of the most respected newspapers in Ohio and its eight editions are rated among the outstanding suburban newspaper groups in the nation.

"It is our intention to maintain The Spectator's high journalistic standards. We are indeed fortunate that Mr. Hartley has made himself available in an advisory capacity as we execute plans for further growth of The Spectator consistent with the rapidly-developing area now being served."

Reider said that Wes H. Kreger, who has a long background in the newspaper business, will be general manager of The Spectator.

R. H. Rogers of the Hartley organization has been named Business Manager and Marcus T. Orr, a 10-year veteran, remains as Managing Editor of the eight-paper

C. Carlton Hartley: The Magic Touch

By JOHN AUBLE, JR.

It was 1932 and finding a dollar was tough. A man named C. Carlton Hartley scraped together 700 of them and went out to buy a newspaper in a town called Greenfield, which is in Highland County. He took the $700 out of his pocket and paid $500 of it down on a weekly newspaper called the Greenfield Times.

It was a weekly newspaper then but C. Carlton Hartley had a vision that he could make it grow into a daily. He had a journalism background on the Huntington (W. Va.) High School "Tatler" and $200 in working capital and he was going to take this newspaper and make a daily out of it and everyone said he was crazy.

He nearly starved to death in 1932 keeping that paper alive. He'd sit back in his chair and put his hands behind his head and wonder why he was there in Greenfield, O., doing what he was doing. His mother wanted him to be a doctor and when his working day ran into the small hours of the morning she would think that she might have been right.

'PUBLISHER' SOUNDED GOOD

But there his name was in the masthead: "C. Carlton Hartley, Publisher," and it did something to him, reading that. It did something that a sign saying "C. Carlton Hartley, M.D." would never do, but you can't explain that to a mother sometimes. He wasn't even sure he could explain it to himself.

While the going was rough on the eve of the big bank holiday and during the attending depression, Hartley recalls that he had been well trained in how to stretch a dollar because he had worked four years while attending Ohio State University to provide funds for his schooling.

Upon entering OSU in the fall of 1926 he was faced with the need of a job. He got the job — as a reporter for The Hilltop Record — net earnings $5 per week.

During those four years he learned the publishing business from A to Z under the competent tutoring of Roy D. Hastings, owner. He stayed with the organization as editor of the paper until October, 1932, when he went into the business world on his own as publisher of the then weekly and "weak" Greenfield Times.

Later, when he changed the Times to a daily in 1935, he made frequent visits to his old boss in Columbus and together they decided that if a daily could be successful in Greenfield perhaps it could be equally successful on the Hilltop.

So Hartley agreed to try and it wasn't too long before The Hilltop Record was a daily newspaper and people were starting to wonder what magic C. Carlton Hartley had.

But it wasn't easy at the Record. Trouble began to develop with the printer's union, which didn't help a nervous condition that Hastings had, so he asked Hartley to buy the paper. And Hartley laughed at Roy D. Hastings, because in those days when you didn't have money it helped to laugh. But Hastings wanted out and he leased the paper to Hartley. In one year this 28-year-old man assumed option and owned two daily newspapers.

THEN, PROGRESS

When Hartley took over the management of The Hilltop Record in 1936 he soon thereafter reverted it to weekly publication to avoid further labor troubles.

From then on Hartley Newspapers snow-balled. They grew because, like the Greenfield Times, C. Carlton Hartley made them grow. In some 30 years the Hilltop Record was only part of a chain of eight publications in greater Columbus. That's why many people felt a twinge of shock when he announced on June 17 that he was resigning as publisher.

He sat in his office on W. Broad-st, took out a prepared statement and read it to his department heads. It stated that he had recently sold controlling interest of The Spectator newspapers and now he was resigning as publisher. Things went silent. It was like someone had said the boss died.

Thirty minutes after he met with his department heads he walked to an empty apartment above The Spectator building and made plans to set up an office. From there he would continue to direct the activities of his three printing operations, The Greenfield Daily Times, The Daily Madison Press at London, O., and Hartco Printing Company, West Jefferson.

After that he looked at a file he had looked at many times before and C. Carlton Hartley knew he wasn't through building because the Hilltop YMCA needed a swimming pool.

Bexley Ponders Charter Revamp

WEATHER AIDS FREEWAY PROGRESS

WHILE MOST LIVINGSTON-AV motorists, who inch to work and back an inch at a time, find it hard to believe, construction of the East Freeway (responsible for the congestion) continues at a rapid pace, helped by the weather. Concrete for both east and west bound traffic has reached Ohio-av where workmen (above) are welding the Ohio-av bridge across the freeway. Power for the welders is generated on-site by the four truck-mounted generator sets which can be seen below the bridgework near the bottom of the picture. With construction on Livingston-av east of Nelson-rd being speeded, an additional traffic lane may be opened this week, partially relieving the bumper-to-bumper line of perspiring motorists.

ALTHOUGH THE EAST FREEWAY is not open to traffic, a recent Spectator traffic count indicated that few motorists are aware that a S. 18th-st ramp connecting with I-71 North is open and provides quick connection with Olentangy-rd, Dublin-rd, Rt. 40 West, I-71 North and I-71 South. Nearest exit after entering I-71 at 18th-st is E. Broad-st near Parsons-av, followed in turn by the Leonard-av and E. Fifth-av exits. Presently, many motorists in the east and near south areas who commute north and northwest bypass the 18th-st ramp and enter I-71 North at the E. Broad-st entrance, adding to the traffic congestion. Quickest access to the relatively unknown 18th-st ramp is west on Mound-st then south at 18th. Entrance to the 18th-st ramp is at the extreme right center in the photo above. The 18th-st bridge over the freeway is open to traffic.

Amendments On Fall Ballot, Study Commission Proposed

A dual proposal for revisions to Bexley's outmoded charter — the first for amendments to be offered to voters in November, and the second for a complete updating of the charter — was presented to council Tuesday night by president, Charles Kurtz.

If the suggested amendments to sections defining the duties of mayor and succession to the office are to be placed on the ballot in November, council must take action before the end of July.

On his second proposal, Kurtz will move immediately to appoint a citizens' committee to conduct a long-range study of the charter and the present structure of city government, and draft amendments to be submitted to the voters possibly by the election of 1967.

Kurtz termed the 34-year-old charter "a good one when it was adopted in 1931, but . . . parts of it are cumbersome . . . unrelated to the city as it exists today."

Urging immediate attention to the matter, he added, "If it has creaks now, there will be more groans later as it becomes more and more dated."

Under present provisions of the charter the office of mayor, should it become vacant, must be assumed by council president until the first of January following the next regular election.

Also, the duties of service director and safety director are performed by the mayor.

Motivated by concern for the city's welfare and the knowledge that he would be unable to succeed Mayor William Schneider, 81, should he resign, with the duties the office now entails, Kurtz has proposed that these two sections be amended.

To Sever Offices

He suggests that council be given the power to separate the offices of safety director and service director from the mayor's duties should circumstances make it desirable.

And he further proposed that council might by majority vote fill the office of mayor from one of its members, or even from qualified electors of the city, to serve until the next regular election.

Kurtz invited council members and City Solicitor Howard Park to consider the proposals, add their comments and ideas. He added that he hoped Park would have an ordinance ready for consideration at the next regular meeting, July 13.

Since council traditionally vacations during August, the amendments for the Nov. 2 municipal election must be approved by the end of next month in order to be placed on the ballot the required 60 days before election.

Form Commission

The charter commission, to consist of representative citizens of the community, will be appointed by Kurtz with the assistance of the mayor and council.

Kurtz suggested the range of the commission could be without restriction. "For example," he said, "it might wish to consider the nature of the city government, and make recommendation regarding selection of public officials."

The possibility of a city manager, council president serving as mayor, "or any other of countless alternatives" might be considered, he said.

This study of matters of concern to Bexley as it becomes an increasingly mature city would, in Kurtz's opinion, require a long-range study. "I cannot see these revisions being submitted to the electors before 1967," he said.

He concluded with, ". . . while we have the opportunity of choice we would be foolish not to examine the alternatives open to us. Bexley will have tough problems. So what we do must have the widest possible citizen support and participation."

Teenagers Picketing Carousel

The Carousel Sweet Shoppe on Yearling-rd was picketed by Whitehall teenagers Tuesday night as being "unfair to teenagers."

The young people checked first with the Police Department and the city solicitor, Paul Haytcher, to see if any special license or permit was required.

Augustine Roberts, spokesman for the group of about 50, said they had been made to feel unwelcome by the owner, Jack Rosen.

"We want only to be able to patronize the place, buy food and soft drinks and stay long enough to enjoy it," he said. "We also expect to behave in an acceptable manner," he added.

The group announced its intention to picket each day, in groups of five, from noon to 8:30 p.m., "in an orderly manner." They will also make no attempt to keep anyone from entering the place, [illegible] added.

'FOURTH' IS FIFTH FOR BEXLEY FETE

"The Fourth" will be celebrated on the fifth in Bexley this year, with the parade, sidewalk art exhibit, swimming meet and evening program scheduled Monday, July 5.

In Whitehall, the day-long program, to be held at Robinwood Plaza, Broad-st at Robinwood, and in the field behind the shopping center, is slated for Sunday, July 4.

However, in the event of rain, the celebration will be postponed to the following day.

Amateur acts may still be entered in Whitehall's big talent show, slated in the evening, before the fireworks display, by calling the chairman, Paul Knoblauch.

Democrats Plan Ward Meeting

GLADS Club, Good, Loud, Active Democrats, will meet Thursday, June 24, 8 p.m. at the Buckeye Federal Building, 4380 E. Livingston-av.

All 28th Ward Democrats are invited to attend.

Law Says 'Fireworks Are Illegal'

The approach of the holiday prompts officials to issue their annual reminder that it is not only illegal to sell fireworks, but also illegal for citizens to purchase, transport, have them in their possession, and to ignite them.

Anyone violating the state law is liable to prosecution.

Whitehall Fire Chief Arthur Reddy and fire inspector, James Soteriades, point to the danger of amateur handling of fireworks — loss of hands and eyesight, or other serious injury.

Although fireworks are not available for public sale in Ohio, they may be purchased in other states and vacationers sometimes bring them home.

Community fireworks displays are planned in Bexley, Whitehall and at different locations in Columbus.

State's Employment Forms 'Illegal . . . Will Be Changed'

An official state employment application was termed "illegal" by Leonard L. Holland, regional director, Ohio Civil Rights Commission last week, when certain items on the form were questioned by Whitehall officials.

The matter came to light when Holland was questioned on why the same item that drew a strong protest from the commission when it appeared on Whitehall's employment form was included on the state's application for working permits for minors.

Holland said that any question, such as place of birth, that might indicate an applicant's race, creed or religion "is illegal."

And "illegal" is the term he applied to this and other questions appearing on the application challenged by Whitehall. He promised that the form would be corrected to comply with the law.

Requiring applicants to list their place of birth when applying for a city job was protested by the commission on the grounds that indication of race, religion or creed might conceivably influence hiring, according to Whitehall's former civil service commission chairman, Joseph Shannon.

Shannon, now service director, said the city scrapped all its application forms after the protest was registered in January and printed new ones asking for only the date of birth.

"We are now hiring high

U-R Bond Issue Won't Go Nov. 2

By FRANK RYAN

Columbus City Council's plan for voted bonds to finance the five-year sewer capital improvements program has claimed its first "victims" even before the voters have their say on its merits. Mayor M. E. Sensenbrenner has decided against placing any other money issues on the Nov. 2 General Election ballot.

Sensenbrenner met with top administration officials Monday to discuss proposed bond issues—particularly for urban renewal and improvements at the Columbus Zoo.

Administration officials were reluctant to place any bond issue alongside council's measure. They say the $42.6 million bond plan for sewers is unnecessary and will jeopardize other needed capital improvements bond proposals.

Chiefly affected by the mayor's decision was the planned $6 million Urban Renewal bond issue. Although the issue was favored by a majority of voters last November, it did not gain the necessary 55 percent plurality.

It was considered "almost certain" that the matter would be resubmitted to voters this fall. Passage of the urban renewal issue is necessary to secure $12 million in federal matching funds.

Phelan Sees Crisis

Urban Renewal Director Patrick Phelan predicted that his department will face a "serious" money crisis "early next year—maybe sooner."

"The city will have to find the money to continue urban renewal projects from other sources," Phelan said. He said he city is committed to contracts with both the federal government and local developers.

Sensenbrenner, obviously unhappy about a decision he felt was forced upon him by council, said he was acting "in the best interests of the citizens of the City of Columbus to protect the integrity of necessary voted bond issues." He said he would not send needed measures to almost-certain ballot defeat because of what he considers an unworthy bond issue (council's sewer plan).

In referring to council's proposal as a politically inspired move, Sensenbrenner said:

"If I never get elected again, I'll never sell my city down the river for a vote."

'Simplifies' Decision

The decision by Sensenbrenner will ease the task of the Metropolitan Committee in deciding its stand on bond issues. The civic group has promoted bond issues over the past 20 years, but never before had it faced the prospect of deciding on an issue where the city council and city administration were divided, as they are on the sewer issue.

The mayor's action eliminated the prospect that the Metropolitan Committee might be forced to support the administration's bond proposals, while denying support to a bond plan by council. It now appears that the committee will have only council's plan to consider.

Council President William R. Fornof and City Auditor John H. Price were scheduled to meet with the Metropolitan Committee today (Thursday). Price said he is attending because "I understand that Mr. Fornof arranged a meeting and wanted me to be there."

Price has declared himself "neutral" on council's voted bond plan. He said he was "not on the inside" when supporting statistics for the plan were gathered. "I haven't changed by mind as of now," Price said.

Informed sources predict that the Metropolitan Committee will adopt a "neutral" position on council's plan Traditionally, the committee does not oppose bond issues, both withholds suport from those issues it does not consider worthy. In the case of council's plan, the committee's stand may hinge on the lack of unanimous support for the issue.

STANLEY RAPS FORNOF ORDER TO PRICE

Cut Estimates, Auditor Told

Columbus City Council has been accused of instructing City Auditor John H. Price to reduce his estimate of income to the city for the years 1965 and 1966.

In a letter to council, Finance Director John M. Stanley said that he could not present a complete picture showing the financial effect of proposed salary increases for city employes because Price's general revenue estimates were arbitrarily altered.

Stanley told council that Price's estimates for the past two budget periods were realistic, and that the administration had used [illegible] figures "without reservation." He said he would use the most current estimates furnished by the auditor if they had been the product of the auditor alone.

"This has not been the case," Stanley reported to council. "The city council, represented by its president (William R. Fornof) has now expanded its operation to revenue estimating . . . The city auditor advised me that in preparing the estimate for 1965 and 1966, he was instructed by the council to understate investment earnings by at least $1 million."

Stanley said he could not give council a complete financial analysis of the salary ordinance effect without an estimate of city income. "If it is the intent of the city council to cast doubt on the city's ability to finance the new salary ordinance," Stanley reported, "then this can be done by using the estimates given me by the auditor last week."

Stanley said that as a result of council's arbitrary adjustment of the auditor's estimates, "the general revenue estimates for 1965 and 1966 reflect the same financial juggling that we have been exposed to repeatedly as part of the council's proposal (voted bond issue) for sewer financing."

BERNARD BARUCH . . .

By MICHAEL V. DISALLE
Former Governor of Ohio

It was late in 1950.

The President had asked me to assume the rather onerous responsibility of stabilizing prices.

It was important to learn as rapidly as possible. The men who had first-hand experience would prove invaluable. The first person contacted on my brain-picking expedition was the first of the American stabilizers — Bernard Baruch — who served during World War I.

He accepted my call immediately with the greeting: "Young man, you have a tough job." My reply: "I know it — that is why I am calling on you for help. Can I come up to New York and talk with you?" He said, "You are busy. I'll come to Washington tomorrow."

The next day we met in his suite in what was then the Wardman Park Hotel. He had chartered a plane, since his size didn't lend itself to easy commercial travel. He was an extremely tall erect man who belied his 81 years. He seemed in excellent physical condition, with one defect — his hearing. This was compensated for by a rather large hearing aid which was prominently displayed on his chest.

He told me of his experiences and the mistakes of the years which had contributed to the nation's inflation. He offered many ideas, including that the U.S. purchase the entire import of coffee and then return it in the regular channels of U.S. trade at a subsidized price in order to help the American housewife with her fight against the constant rise in the cost of living.

Here I ventured the thought that Congress might not like this approach, and the State Department might have problems with our South American neighbors who saw an opportunity to increase the dollar value of their exports. He took hold of his hearing aid and shook it at me, saying, "Young man, sometimes I think this d—— thing is broken. I seem to hear the same things over and over again!"

After several very rewarding hours we broke up, and I apologized for the time I had taken and the expense I had put him to. Again his expression was typical, as well as generous. He said, "The plane cost me $1,800 . . . there are a few more 1,800 dollars where that came from. I owe this and much more to my country. Call on me at any time."

This was the beginning of a friendship which lasted through the years. He always was kind, always considerate.

The last time I saw him was in 1962 in New York's Central Park. His health was failing, his hearing was worse, but he was generous to come personally to visit —because I was receiving an award.

I will miss hearing from him, but the world will long remember his genius and long miss his sound advice.

Reynoldsburg Jaycees Plan Holiday Ox Roast

Gilbert Whalen, president of the Reynoldsburg Jaycees, has announced that plans are complete for the July 5 Ox Roast. More than 1,000 pounds of beef have been purchased in anticipation of serving 2,000 people.

The proceeds will be used for community development projects. Financing of the newly-built tennis courts was made possible by last year's ox roast.

Ronald W. Keske, general chairman, has said that serving by the Jaycee Wives will begin at noon, immediately following the parade. Everyone is invited by the Jaycees to share in the betterment of Reynoldsburg by participating in the July 5 Ox Roast.

Non-Public Fund Promoted Levy

Where did the Columbus Public Schools get financial support for the levy?

Expenditures for promotion of the levy total about $5900. The Columbus Education Association contributed $2500, the Columbus Council of PTA's gave $1000, and numerous smaller donations came from schools.

All funds for promotion of an issue must be non-public.

The CEA and local PTAs strongly endorsed the levy and promoted it throughout the school district.

Columbus Federation of Teachers supported the levy and secured endorsements from union organizations.

More Flexible Police Should Stymie Crime

By CHUCK HAETLE

Passing the corner of Broad and High-sts when the stores are just closing or visiting the Columbus Gallery of Fine Arts on a quiet Thursday hardly seems to be an activity that would lead you to the scene of a crime.

But, if your timing had been right, it would this past week as brazen criminals burglarized Ed Bailey's Hole in the Wall shirt shop at 6 N. High-st and stole a painting off the wall at the Art Gallery.

Symptomatic relief from such afflictions of society is promised by improvements in our Columbus law enforcement potential this week. Fifty-one new policemen are graduating from the new police academy and a class estimated at 65 is ready to begin.

Many of those will go on foot patrols bearing two-way portable radios to speed apprehension of criminals.

On the traffic scene, where a mounting death toll is alarming everybody, assignment of motorcycle patrols to the freeways should reduce violations and thus hold down accidents.

However, 10 times as many policemen will not prevent crime and accidents when so many people are willing to violate laws themselves, and overlook those of others.

A trend is reversing itself. Columbus once had seven breweries. Then the number dwindled until only August-Wagner, brewers of Gambrinus, Augustiner, and the new Mark V. beers and Robin Hood Ale remained.

Now, Anheuser-Busch has taken an option on a 260-acre site north of Worthington for a proposed $50 million brewery. The plant is scheduled to employ 500 persons.

Location of the proposed brewery is land scheduled to be annexed to Columbus, according to agreements reached between Columbus and Worthington City Councils.

Worthington will expand its boundaries to the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway on the west, to Park-rd or the Delaware county line on the north and to Huntley-rd on the east.

Columbus will take in the surrounding territory, including the new brewery land. The Worthington School district is expected to reduce the area it covers to the proposed new municipal boundaries.

While most elementary and high school students are free to spend these summer days playing or working at a job, more than 8,000 boys and girls will toil on in school. Columbus school enrollment for summer classes which began Monday is at a record high.

Summer school for 60 OSU biology and zoology students consists of spending the season on an island in Lake Erie. The students are enrolled in the Franz Theodore Stone Laboratory on Gibraltar Island.

Another contingent of college students began studies this week in the Far Eastern Language Institute. This is the third in a series sponsored by a cooperating group of midwestern universities. Previous institutes were held at the University of Michigan and Indiana University.

Columbus Council Monday night voted to authorize the city to negotiate a 50-year lease with the Central Market Association on the proposed site for a new market at Mound and Fourth-sts.

Capital University was overrun this week with 1,257 high school junior girls attending Buckeye Girls' State. Teri Hiatt of 4204 Chandler-dr, was elected to head up the Federalists, one of the two political parties battling it out for election victories.

A $2.5 million, 15-story nursing school and residence is planned for the corner of Sixth and Town-sts, according to Grant Hospital officials.

Buckeye Boys' State last week chose two of its number to attend Boys' Nation at the University of Maryland in July. One was Omer Cordial of 312 Ziegler-rd.

Jimmy Dean has been added to the list of entertainers who will headline the free shows at the Ohio State Fair in August. Compensating for the "gratis grandstand" is a 25-cent increase in gate admissions. From the age of 12 up, everyone will pay $1. Children 6 to 12 will not get in free this year as before. They'll need to have two bits (or a good friend).

school boys for the summer for grounds work at the park," Shannon said, "and asked the state for work permit applications as required for 16 and 17-year-olds.

"These applications," he continued, "not only ask for the place of birth but also require that, if a baptism or confirmation certificate is submitted as proof of birth date, the name and location of the church and the name of the officiating person be furnished.

"And furthermore," he noted, "the state employment form asked the applicant to indicate his 'complexion—fair, dark, medium or black'."

Holland praised Whitehall's willing cooperation and prompt action in correcting the city's own employment applications, and said the state forms would also be corrected.

He said he had not been aware of the illegal questions on the forms until informed by Shannon. "This is merely a matter of calling it to attention," he explained. "It will be corrected."

German Village Expecting Company

YA! YA! IT'S TOUR TIME

SPOTTING A KITCHEN with wall-to-island carpeting, the home of John Serrott and Don Clapham, 549 S. Sixth-st, will be one of those on display during the annual Haus Und Garten Tour. John Serrott is shown at the griddle with his famous, made-from-scratch, buckwheat cakes. The original kitchen of the house which the owners gutted after its purchase in 1962, is paneled with cherry, and uses early American accessories to contrast sharply with its ultra-modern utilitarian aspects. This room, as the entire house is one that ingenuity and not "jack" built. The brick of the island is reclaimed from the Market-Mohawk area; the cupboard at the left was one retrieved from Clapham's father's garage where it had been used as tool storage for years and an picturesque, pull-down oil lamp once owned by his grandmother was also rescued from oblivion.

There's German music in the air.

Do you hear it?

It's coming from German Village as residents are rolling up their sleeves and whistling as they work.

They are getting ready for company.

The sixth annual Haus Und Garten Tour, the open house in which villagers show the world what "do-it-yourself" urban renewal can accomplish, will be held from 10 a.m. until 6 p.m. Sunday, June 27.

While the Lederhosen Band roams the village and artists display their wares on the streets, anyone holding a $1.50 ticket will be free to prowl the village and visit the exhibition homes and gardens at will.

Buses Free

CTC buses will wind through the village and tourists may use them without charge as they go from home to home. Free parking will be available in the parking lots of the Clarmont Restaurant and the Grange Mutual Insurance Company, both located at Sycamore and High-st.

Village churches as well as restaurants will be open throughout the day. Antique cars will be on display and the Whetstone folk dancers will perform on the Third-st grounds.

The second oldest school in the city, Stewart Avenue, will be open with Mrs. Rita Balcum, principal, and the PTA playing host. The Senior Citizens will have an exhibit in the school yard.

At the end of the day the Maennerchor will sing at the band concert in Schiller Park.

According to Frank Fetch, president of German Village Society which spearheaded the historical restoration, literally thousands are expected for the tour. Already, he said, word has been received that several busloads of tourists are expected from Cincinnati where a German language newspaper has promoted the trip.

The 10 home and their owners (and tenants, if not the same) are: 39 Blenkner-st, owned by Bernard and James Albert, rented to Donald Scully; 522-522½ Pearl-st, owned by Douglas R. Goodsell, rented to Mrs. Dorothy Nissley; 545 City Park-av, owner by Mrs. Orville Newton; 858 City Park-av, owner by Mr. and Mrs. Thomas E. Darby, rented to Lt. and Mrs. James Ryan.

1023 City Park-av, owned by Mr. and Mrs. William Thompson; 566 S. Fourth-st, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Schmitz, rented to Mr. and Mrs. Harold A Link; Kaiser Platz at 617 Mohawk-st, owned by Robert and Sam Shamansky and Tom Mainone, rented to Julian Krupnick; 745 S. Fifth-st, owned by Lawrence D. Shaffer; 263 Jackson-st, owned by Mr. and Mrs. Robert Southard and 549 S. Sixth-st, owned by John A. Serrott and Donald Clapham.

In addition to Beck Square between Fifth and Sixth-sts on Beck, five privately-owned gardens will be open to the public. They are those of Mrs. Ruth McCarthy, 693 City Park-av; Ralph Long, 601 Mohawk-st; Dr. David Morgan, 574 S. Sixth-st; Mr. and Mrs. Robert Schmitz, 129 E. Beck-st and Bob Rutherford and Steve Eneil, 935-37 Mohawk-st.

Tickets are available from members of the Society, at the German Village office, 624 S. Third-st, at each of the homes on tour and on the tour buses.

WITH THE FIRST breath of spring entertaining at 549 S. Sixth-st moves to the walled garden on the south of the house. The patio is the particular pride of Clapham who laid the reclaimed brick. Truly a garden spot of the South Side, with its bubbling fountain statues, flowers and trees, and piped music reminds one of the famous courtyards in the French Quarter of New Orleans. Here, as throughout the home, in the skillful mingling of the old and the new lies much of its charm.

THE VICTORIAN kerosene chandelier casts a soft glow over the formal living room of the Serrott-Clapham home. Rather painfully, Serrott recalls that it took nine gallons of paint removed to free the aged and beautiful woodwork in the living and dining rooms alone from the 10 layers of paint that had been used to obscure it through its ninety years of abuse. The gentleman on the wall is somebody's revered ancestor, but the owners are deep on the research trail to learn just whose.

OSU Conducts Finance Seminar For Teachers

Twenty-five high school teachers from various parts of Ohio are attending the Fifth Annual session of the Teachers Seminar on Financial Institutions at Ohio State University, June 21 through July 2.

The teachers are given an opportunity to learn the nature and roles of different financial institutions. Three credit hours will be awarded teachers completing the course and the credits may be applied toward an undergraduate or graduate degrees.

Teachers from the Columbus area attending are Shirley E. Davis of Brookhaven High School, Sister Agnes Jerome McCort of St. Mary of the Springs, Mrs. Ruth Neel of Walnut Ridge High School, and Sr. M. Deborah Shepack of St. Marys High School, Marysville.

CALLING FOR M-F ALUMNI

There's been plenty of school spirit down at Marion-Franklin High School, but with graduation the old school ties have been severed.

This is all slated to change with the founding of an Alumni Association by the officers of the class of 1965.

At the urging of the senior class advisor Robert Holderle and principal Mike Lower, the group has started the spade work that will lead to an August membership picnic at the South Side YMCA park.

To get the society off the ground, Lloyd Harmon, 218 Delaney-av, 1965 class president, and his fellow officers are concentrating on their classmates, but will gradually work through the files that go back through 1958. Those graduating in the first six years of the school's operation (1952-58) are especially asked to take the initiative in contacting Harmon. (Name, address, telephone number and class are facts needed).

The first fall social event will be a basketball dance. Dues for the new organization are 50 cents a year.

Harmon is working with Essie Hobgood, 1975 Winslow-dr, class vice-president; Ronnie Young, Rumsey-rd, chaplain; Ramona Weston, 227 Callahan-rd, treasurer and Jacqueline Faulkner, 3102 Wierton-dr, secretary.

EVER HEARD OF THIRTEEN WOMEN WHO COULD REALLY S-T-R-E-T-C-H TEN DOLLARS?

NO? WELL WE HAVE! When the 13 members of Buds to Blossoms Child Conservation League decided to turn their annual husbands' party into a luau . . . they came up short on the money end. But, their imagination made up for the coin shortage. Each of the 13 gals took off in different directions, borrowing and making props, scrounging around for Hawaiian recipies and enlisting their husbands in some of the heavy work. When they met back at the Herman Falter Packing Company on Greenlawn-av, (where the party was held) they began transforming a large and bare basement office into a typical Hawaiian setting. At left are Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Daily (Norma) having a pre-party drink in the "hut." The authentic looking star fish is in reality good enough to eat . . . since one ingenious member fashioned it from cereal. Chow time found the members and their husbands seated on cushions on the floor (center). A full course meal was prepared and served by the gals. Roast beef and potatoes were shelved for when the "tourists" get "back in the states." The menfolk were invited to try something a little different, such as . . . egg flower soup, chicken Hawiian, and lime pie. More traditional dishes included baked sweet potatoes, green beans with mushrooms, sweet and sour pork, fruit and vegetable relish trays, bread sticks and rum punch. Seated at the left are Mrs. James Bridenbaugh (Edie) and Mrs. Carl Falter, (Betty). Across from them are Tom Littleton and Mrs. Jack Wise (Ginny). Gathered around the waterfall (right) are Mr. and Mrs. Robert Cocanour (Barbara) and Mr. and Mrs. Tom Littleton (Marge). A close look at the waterfall revealed that it was a stepladder and that's where Jack Wise came in. Jack took a ladder, covered it with clear plastic, placed stones on the steps and presto . . . a waterfall. He also rigged up a hose at the top and a tub at the bottom and surrounded his creation with palm trees. Craig Stickel, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Stickel made his contribution to the party in the form of a tiki, which he made from soap barrels. All in all, it was an evening to be remembered and the gals overshot their budget by only a dollar and a few cents. Members of the group include Mrs. James Bridenbaugh, past president; Mrs. Ray Cavendish, past president of Columbus Federation CCL; Mrs. Robert Cocanour, Mrs. Bruce Daily, Mrs. Carl Falter, Mrs. John Fasold, president; Mrs. Frank Gettles, Mrs. Thomas Littleton, secretary; Mrs. Jay Mulbarger, treasurer; Mrs. Edward Perrini, Mrs. Charles Stickel, vice-president; Mrs. Charles Tippet and Mrs. Jack Wise. Mrs. Wise and the rest of the group are storing their props for the time being, but hope that anyone interested in having a luau will call 866-8311 for suggestions or to borrow their props.

CANDLELIGHT ESTABLISHES MEMORIAL SCHOLARSHIP

A scholarship in memory of the late Mrs. Harold Paris has been established by Candlelight Chapter 888, B'nai B'rith Women. When completed, the Mickey Paris Memorial Scholarship will total $500 and will be awarded to a student attending a college or university in the District Two area.

This is the first named scholarship to be established by Candlelight Chapter, although the program, unique to this district, is in its 35th year. The scholarships are given on a loan basis and are repaid by the recipients as soon after graduation as they are able. The funds are then made available to provide further aid to deserving students.

A devoted wife and mother, Mrs. Paris is survived by her husband and three children. Although a native of New York City, she resided in Columbus for 10 years and was an active member of Candlelight for most of that time. She served in various capacities on its general and executive boards. Another of her prime interests was serving as a leader to the Bluebird Troop to which her daughters belonged.

Contributions may be made to the Mickey Paris Memorial Scholarship Fund in memory of a loved one, or in honor of any happy occasion. Anyone wishing to contribute may contact Mrs. Eli Gold, scholarship chairman, 31 N. Ashburton-rd.

Reynoldsburg Awaiting Circus Day Wednesday

Circus Day means waltzing horses, trumpeting elephants, trained dogs, proudly prancing decorated ponies and chimpanzees on the flying trapeze.

The 26th annual edition of the Mills Brothers Three-Ring Circus will appear in Huber Park for two performances under the Big Top at 2 and 8 p.m., Wednesday, June 30. The show is sponsored by the Truro Township Volunteer Fire Department to help build the firemen's uniform fund.

Many area boys and girls will be on hand for the matinee performance with tickets purchased by local business and professional people.

The gaily painted fleet of nearly 100 motorized units will roll into town shortly after dawn Wednesday morning and transform Huber Park into a fantasy land of billowing white canvas. Early rising spectators will see elephants unloading and erecting the center poles that hoist the canvas into position. The menagerie housing the variety of huge animals will be set up simultaneously.

Highlighting the two performances will be opening pageant spectacle of "Arabian Nights," a mixed group of camels, llamas and ponies, the celebrated elephant herd and an all-girl aerial ballet.

Firemen are calling door-to-door each evening with advance-sale tickets which cost less than those purchased on Circus Day and the fire department derives its heaviest profit from these sales. School children tickets are 60 cents for the matinee performance and those under 12 years of age $1 for the evening performance. Children over 12 are $1.50 in the evening which is the adult price for both performances. Parking will be available on the circus grounds.

Those not contacted may purchase a ticket from any fireman or by calling the fire station at UN. 6-5370.

AREA BASEBALLERS PLAY FOR WEST STARS

EVEN THOUGH the East All-Stars swept the three-game All-Ohio high school baseball series last weekend in Jet Stadium, area representatives on the West Squad gave a good account of themselves. The seven Spectator area diamond stars who competed in the Jaycee-sponsored series are pictured above with West Coach Ron Shay of Watterson. From left are: John Herins and Steve Prater of West, George Fannin of Pleasant View, Coach Shay, Dave Williams of Hilliard, Dave Feyh of Walnut Ridge, Brian Campbell of Carroll and Mike Morris of Watterson. 'Rip', James Get Win For Shadywood

Charlie James singled home the winning run in the eighth inning as Cooper's Shadywood slipped past the Southside Merchants, 2-1, at Marion-Franklin in a Southeastern Pony League game.

James' single, one of two hits he collected in the game, provided victory for Shadywood pitcher Gary "Rip" Van Winkle, who hurled a brilliant one-hitter at the Merchants.

Bill Quinn also had two hits for the winners while John Byrum struck a double. Chuck Bland and Danny Keene accounted for Shadywood's other safeties.

Gregory, O'Day Continue Roles On CMS Oval

Better than 3400 paid customers were in attendance Sunday night at the Columbus Motor Speedway to see sportsman speedster Don Gregory rack up his fifth straight feature, his eighth of the year and his 21st in the last 22 programs on the South Side oval (including the final 13 in 1964).

At the same time they saw the "Flying Irishman" Ralph O'Day who was jinxed the early part of the season, take his second-straight headliner in the late-model division.

THIS WEEK another $3000 in prize money is being guaranteed for the Friday and Sunday night programs of sportsman and late-model races with $1500 in purses being assured each night.

Last week, $3000 was guaranteed, with $3250 being paid because of the large Sunday night crowd.

Time trials each night start at 7 p.m. and the first of seven events gets moving promptly at 8 o'clock.

Last Friday, Sonny Pencil looked like he might bring an end to Don Gregory's monopoly but Gregory moved out front on the 20th and final lap to earn his fourth straight win in the sportsman category

FRIDAY'S late-model feature was just about Bob James' but a head-gasket blew and O'Day forged ahead for victory.

In the free game of "Total," six more fans hit on Friday and divided $200. There were no winners Sunday, so there will be another $200 in the jackpot this Friday if they can pick the first five, in order, in the feature.

YOU OUGHTA' KNOW BETTER, DAVE!

ON THE OTHER FOOT — That's where the shoe was Saturday for Hartley coach Dave Savely, right, questioning a call by umpire Pat Whitehead in a Saturday League doubleheader between the Hawks and Reynoldsburg. Savely who doesn't lose many arguments while serving as a popular whistle-tooter during basketball season, found the odds just as heavy in favor of the umpire. Hartley split the twin-bill, winning the opener, 15-14, before losing the night-cap 3-2.

Wit 'N' Wisdom

By JACK WITTENMEIER

No one was happier with the space success of America's newest astronauts, Ed White and Jim McDivitt, than the U.S. Olympic Committee.

Its happiness was contained in the fact that now the great Russian challenge for the '66 Olympic games has been answered — the U.S. will be able to compete with Russia in the first "extra vehicular activities."

Wittenmeier

THE FACT that only two countries can compete in the event doesn't appear to be too much of an obstacle for the two countries to overcome because nobody ever wins the Olympics except either Russia or the U.S.

The only opposition in sight is France and General DeGaulle is smart enough to realize he can't put his rocketry where his mouth is.

Both teams have quite a bit of work cut out for them before either can claim to be an odds-on favorite in the '66 competition.

SO FAR, all the Russians have been able to do is exhibit a decided proficiency in the art of somersaulting.

On the other hand, Lt. Col. White has displayed far more versatility in such areas as saluting and smearing windshields.

Probably the most difficult part of the training for both teams is deciding just what type of performance will pile up gold medal points.

SINCE THIS is an entirely new form of competition, the rules of the road, so to speak, are pretty much undecided.

Already rumors have leaked out of Russia that the next Soviet space "walk" will include an attempt at rope (lifeline) skipping.

A slip of the tongue at Cape Kennedy last week supposedly revealed that a strange web-like structure, remotely resembling a badminton net, is being constructed as part of Gemini Five.

COMPETITION at the Olympics being what it is, many surprises are expected from both sides.

The only apparent hitch preventing a wave of optimism for a U.S. victory is the fact that McDivitt is aligned with the NCAA and White calls the AAU "home."

IT MUST have taken some real computer-ing to work it out but officials at the World Series of Golf are sure to have four well-qualified representatives gunning for this summer's $50 thou pot.

The 36-hole golf spectacular, now officially recognized by the PGA at its annual climax event to pick the golf champ of the year, will again take place at Akron's Firestone Country Club course Sept. 11-12.

Winners of the major four link events of the season — Masters, National Open, PGA and British Open — qualify for each of the four slots.

HOWEVER, should someone "double up" (eg — win both the Masters and PGA), the defending champ gets the open berth (this year that would be Tony Lema, the '64 winner).

But what happens if last year's winner should win a couple of the eventh this year? Here is where the complications come in.

First choice, according to the PGA, is the loser of a play-off in any of the four qualifying tourneys. If there were playoffs in two or more of these tourneys, a special 18-hole play-off will be held at Firestone between the play-off losers to determine who gains the vacant spot.

IF THERE was not a play-off in any of the four qualifying tourneys, an 18-hole match will be held at Firestone for the runners-up of the four major tourneys — the winner entered in the World Series.

Incidentally, any play-off among the play-off players will be decided by "sudden death" play.

IN WHITEHALL:

Darnell, Recreation Dept Share Slo-Pitch Lead

The Recreation Department and Darnell showed up deadlocked in first place when the dust cleared last Sunday on play in the Whitehall Slo-Pitch League.

Three home runs by Larry Gornall (also had three in first game) helped the Recreation crew pour cold water on the Fire Department, 26-8.

GENE McENDREE rapped out five hits in six appearances for the winners and Don Sapp socked a homer. John LaCorte won his second game of the season on the mound.

In a big rivalry game, Darnell downed its counterparts —the WBBA Coaches, 11-3, as Hughes Dorset had two hits, including a homer.

Bill Darnell also hit a four-bagger for the winners, who got four-hit pitching from Jerry Gilmore. Carl Harmon and Chuck Miller each got a pair of hits for the WBBA sluggers.

IN THE other game, Paul Cordle rapped out three home runs as the Police Department "arrested" Holy Spirit, 16-9.

Second week standings find Darnell and Recreation deadlocked at 2-0, Police and WBBA Coaches standing 1-1 and Holy Spirit and the Firemen winless in two tries.

Here's Sunday's schedule:

Fire Dept. vs. WBBA Coaches (1:30 p.m., at E. Main Street School)

Holy Spirit vs. Darnell (2:45 at E. Main Street School)

Recreation vs. Police Dept. (1:30 at Rosemore Junior High)

H-T Screens Applicants; Decision Likely Thursday

The scrambled coaching situation at Hamilton Township should be cleared up within the week as Superintendent D'Alsa Huff's recommendations to the Hamilton Local School Board are scheduled to be made at a special board meeting July 1.

Last week the board declared all coaching positions in the school system (22) "open" and asked for applications — both from the present coaching staff and anyone outside the system who was interested.

Huff told The Spectator earlier this week that to date 30 telephone inquiries regarding the positions had been received and 14 appointments had been made to interview applicants.

Huff also reported that, to his knowledge, applications had been received from all members of H-T's existing staff with the exception of head wrestling coach Dave Milner, who is reported out of the area at the present time.

Each hole-in-one wins the player $100, also donated by Lex Mayers and makes him, or her, eligible to compete in the play-off. Prize is a set of golf clubs donated by Bush. Entry fee of $1 purchases a bucket of 10 balls, with a percentage of the proceeds going to the Heart Fund. Tournament is open to everyone who can swing a golf club.

Jets Home, Prep For Vital Set With Toronto

The exciting Columbus Jets, battling to stay alive in the '65 International League pennant race, conclude their series with Buffalo tonight at 8 p.m. — barely catching their breath before diving into a vital five-game set with Toronto.

BVD Team Captures AK First Round Title

With one game left, the BVD team of the Jewish Center A.K. softball league, clinched the first round by winning its fourth straight game with a 15-13 victory over a stubborn Ontario team.

Jack Gaiser led the way for BVD with five consecutive singles. Ontarios almost pulled off the upset of the season—ironically enough—using two borrowed players from BVD.

A THREE-WAY tie exists in the second position as Friedmar, Cummins and Stern Insurance beat Martin's Market 7-6. The game was won in the bottom of the last inning as lead-off batter Mel Kent boomed a home run to right field.

Helping Mel to the close victory was Harvey Roth with two home runs. Aaron Dachner was the leading hitter for Martins with a double and two singles.

In the other game of the evening, Len Immke won its first, as it dashed Hackman's last hopes of winning the round with a 17-14 victory.

TWO LEONS — Mark and Margulis—paved the way with four hits each for the winners. Ike Cohen, Bernie Shapiro and Buzzy Kanter had three each for the losers.

Next week features the final game of the first round. The schedule is BVD vs. Leo Immke Buick, Martin's Market vs. Ontario, and Hackman Realty vs. FCS Insurance.

Play Areas Organize Ball Teams, Pet Shows, Horseshoes

Summer is here — and that means the 85 playgrounds, supervised by the Columbus Recreation Department are brimming with activity. Until Aug. 28, the play leaders will be on hand Mondays through Fridays from noon until 8:15 p.m.

Local Schnauzer Club Lists Coming Activities

Would you like to be a member of the "Zwergschnauzer Klub?" Joining is easy . . . learning to pronounce and spell the club name is the only task involved.

For those unfamiliar with German, "Zwergschnauzer" is derived from the words "zwerg," meaning "dwarf," and "schnauzer," which comes from the whiskered muzzle or snout.

No, it's not a group of little-nosed people . . . actually, the club is composed of all kinds of people who own little dogs, specifically miniature schnauzer dogs.

Club members closed this year's activities with their annual picnic June 20 and are already making plans for next year. Elected to head the group for the coming year are Roger Beany, president; Mrs. Larry Rande, vice-president, and Mrs. Judy Ballenger, secretary-treasurer.

Beginning in September, the club will meet monthly on the third Wednesday. The meeting place is the Cerebral Palsy office, 1036 E. Hudson. Any persons interested should call Roger Beany, 263-3069.

Included on the coming yesa's agenda are courses in obedience training, care of new puppies, when and how to breed your dog, advance preparation for showing dogs and a special guest speaker who will show films of a miniature schnauzer drill team organized in Cleveland.

Gardens And Flowers

By JIM GRUETT

SUMMERTIME — June 21 was the first day of good old summertime. A time when all of us are busy getting ready for the family vacation or puttering around the yard. It's good just to be outdoors doing something.

LAWNS — Don't let anyone pull your leg about when it's best to water a lawn. I know a number of theories very well and most of them are just not practical for home lawn situations. The best time to water your lawn is plain and simple - - - when it needs it. You can tell by the loss of color and by footprints left in the lawn. Wilted grass mats underfoot and fails to spring back immediately leaving a slick appearing print in the lawn.

Water morning, noon or night whenever you can spare the time to do the best job of it. Remember, the average sprinkler applies from one-third to one-half inch of water per 20-minute setting in one fixed location. Good lawn maintenance calls for one inch of water by rain or sprinkling each week.

Heavy clay soils in this part of the country make watering in fixed locations for long periods of time impractical. Water that is not absorbed runs off and often is wasted. Water more frequently so that the water is put to good use, along with the time spent to do it.

BLOOD

The hero of this story is YOU

To the sick and injured, your blood can be a matter of life and health. Everyone knows the Red Cross collects and distributes whole blood. But did you know about the important contributions Red Cross has made in blood research? The Red Cross helped develop blood derivatives that prevent measles, combat shock, control hemorrhaging and cure severe vaccination complications. And it's seeking new ones.

Red Cross research also is forging ahead with experiments in long-term storage and preservation of blood.

This vital Red Cross program depends on you—on your donations of blood and money.

Dams Are On The Way!

Now it's official. The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers will handle construction of both Alum Creek and Mill Creek dam and reservoir projects.

The welcome news came from Washington last week when the House Appropriations Committee recommended budgeting for both important jobs. The committee added $50,000 to President Johnson's budget request for Alum Creek, bringing the total to $200,000.

The Mill Creek appropriation of $175,000 was a new item added to the President's budget. A united Columbus area delegation — backed by congressional representatives from the affected areas — convinced Congress of the need for these projects.

There are many local people who can take a deserved bow for the successful efforts to secure these local projects for the Army Engineers. The Sensenbrenner administration, the Development Committee for Greater Columbus, the Columbus Area Chamber of Commerce and the League of Women Voters were certainly in the forefront.

Ohio Congressman Michael J. Kirwin, in particular, and Congressmen Robert E. Sweeney and William E. Harsha were more than a little responsible for carrying the message to fellow legislators. Our 12th District Congressman, Sam Devine, was converted to seeking the projects for the Army Engineers. He had supported the Scioto Conservancy District plan until the ill-conceived and ill-fated property assessment plan was brought to light.

And while we are handing out bouquets for notable performance, we include a large one for Col. Harrington W. Cochran, Chief of the Huntington District of the Corps of Engineers. When the Colonel was asked to appear at public hearings in Columbus, he presented some of the most lucid, coherent testimony on the subject of local flood control and water supply projects.

It was Col. Cochran who most effectively delivered the message that both the Corps of Engineers and the Congress would respond only to a strong, united local voice. He let it be known that his district was not out job-hunting; that they had plenty of work. But he made is equally clear that the Army Engineers would respond where the need was apparent and the people united.

The Alum Creek and Mill Creek projects are vitally important to the Greater Columbus area. These projects are now under way because local leadership determined what was needed and then joined to push in one direction — forward.

The Alum Creek-Mill Creek controversy has been resolved to the benefit of the people affected. The hope now is that the same degree of dedication and resolve will be put in play to solve this year's most pressing problem — how to finance the Columbus sewer expansion program.

CATV: A Decision

Whitehall council has had its say on Community Antenna Television (CATV) by passing an ordinance making the service available to those residents who want it.

Readers of The Spectator know that Whitehall councilmen did not "ramrod" their CATV ordinance. Alternate proposals and model contracts were studied for more than three months, and there was no attempt at secrecy about deliberations.

We don't expect the council action to still the CATV controversy. Proponents will continue to praise the service, while opponents will condemn it.

While the merits of Whitehall council's decision may continue to get argument, no one can argue the fact that council acted in an open and aboveboard manner.

At Least On The Highway They Have Traffic Lights

Support 'Safe Route' — It Should Save Lives

Columbus Traffic Engineer John L. Gallagher has proposed a "Safe Route" program for Columbus elementary school children. We hope he meets immediate, positive response from local school officials and potential co-sponsors.

Children would be furnished maps designating the safest route between home and school. Parents will be asked to study the map and make at least one trip over the route with the child.

Columbus public schools now use a modified version of the "Safe Route" plan by encouraging parents to familiarize their children with the way to school. The suggested innovation would not be hard to add to existing safety programs.

Gallagher says that the city's traffic division can do the basic map work. The schools might get some help from sponsors in the cost of further work on maps at the neighborhood levels. Perhaps the job of "local" routing could be worked into mechanical drawing classes in the high schools.

In other areas, automobile clubs and the American Automotive Safety Foundation have sponsored similar programs. It should be easy to get wide and solid support locally for this plan to increase safety for our school children.

The plan is to grub up the billboards and make a high fence around the junkyards. Neat, eh? Aw, sure, wear your new red-white-and-blue shorts; it'll start a trend, maybe, and he'p get the Great Society off the ground and into orbit. And, say—bring along a bag or two of your wooden nickels; we're gettin' shy on the metal kind. "I'll meet you at the bus. See you Tuesday."

Here's the Answer

An Editor's Outlook . . . by Jenkin Lloyd Jones

Cut-Rate Christianity Can Sour One's Soul

It was the sort of June day about which Lowell sang: "When Heaven tries Earth if it be in tune and over it softly her warm ear lays."

I had knocked off 100 miles since breakfast across a sea of yellow wheat. The sun smiled broadly on the great plains and I thought that never had I seen this wonderful western land so beautiful. The Lord had shed his blessings on these people and their soil, and, by coincidence, it was the Lord's Day—10:30 a.m., in fact.

Jones

So I resolved to go to church; and in a few minutes, at the end of the ribbon of concrete there appeared a black water tower, two white grain elevators, and several spires rising above a small forest of cottonwoods and elms.

The little town had the usual mid-American choice of five or six denominations. Starting at the Rock Island depot I inspected each, and, being a pragmatic Christian, I chose the church with the windows closed, for it was a warm morning and that meant air-conditioning.

The service got under way well with a rousing old-time hymn. The responsive reading was based on one of the finest psalms, and the woman soloist had a mercifully inaudible soprano. Then the wispy young preacher with the nasal voice and the mechanical gestures arose to ruin the day.

It took a while for the enormity of his message to get through to me. I could see he was doing some highly selective editing of the epistles of Paul, but it wasn't until he blurted out his conclusion that I almost slid off the seat.

His thesis was this: There are no good works outside of Christianity. Unless a person has been baptized, unless he or she has "taken Christ," there is no charity that is not filled with self-seeking and evil. Not only does the Lord look upon the philanthropies and love-labors of non Christians as abominations, but He's also pretty choosy about Christians. The young man had some acid words about "idolators," which, I gather, were designed to take care of the Catholic, and about "free thinkers," which should have sunk the Unitarians.

All the time I was wondering about the hospitals, the museums and the parks all over America bearing the names of their Jewish donors. These, presumably, had been given in sin. I thought of my friend, Madame Rama Rau, the Hindu, who could live in wealth and ease, but who has spent her life trying to help the baby-burdened peasantry. I remember ladies in Red Crescent uniforms laboring over the sick in an Isfahan infirmary, and an old Buddhist monk on the road out of Rangoon, digging a well for thirsty travelers. These were abominations?

Bigotry and smugness are no respectors of sect or faith. The late Cardinal Segura of Madrid hadn't moved two inches beyond the Inquisition. The young man in that prairie pulpit has his counterparts in the bearded conservative rabbis of Tel Aviv who anathematize the "goyim." I have seen an imam spit at my shadow. The world is still full of people who are preparing their Hells for everybody else.

But the real tragedy is that people of faith can no longer afford these recreations. The world is moving too fast. The problems are mounting too quickly. The cynical challenge of dialectic materialism is always alert to direct the attention of youth to the idiocies practiced in the name of organized religion.

"Holy wars," even if they are wars only of the mind and speech, are now prohibitive luxuries.

That was what Pope John XXIII was saying when he called for ecumenical communication, not only among Christians, but among people of faith everywhere. That's why Pope Paul's arm has embraced a Jew and his hand has been raised in blessing toward Jains and Sikhs. This is the time to consider our common ground in the face of a common enemy.

Late at night over the Mexican border radio stations you can pick up some fine examples of cut-rate Christianity—Christianity that touches neither the heart nor the soul, but appeals to greed, superstition and smugness. For a dollar the screaming preacher will send a "prayer cloth" which will give potency to your prayers, even those for money. How many college kids have snickered over the hawkers of plastic-covered mustard seeds and concluded that Christianity is a farce?

Yet the essence of Christianity, the tough, hard-to-live-up-to, soul-searching Christianity that demands what Schweitzer calls "respect for life," was never more germane. It is only sometimes clouded.

Clouded in that little town on that lovely June morning, the young preacher concluded his sermon with a poem that sounded as though it had been written by Eddie Guest. The communion tray was passed. I waved it gently away. I didn't think the body and blood of Christ were anywhere around there.

And I drove out of town, grinding my teeth and exceeding the speed limit.

As A Man Thinketh In His Heart, So Is He

There is no need of a lengthy discussion to prove that our lives are largely determined and controlled by our beliefs and ideas.

Before you invest in any venture you want to know something about the people who manage the business—what kind of people they are, and what the fiscal policies are. Carlyle said that if he were renting a room, the first question he would ask the landlady would be: "Madam, what is your total view of the universe?"

Dr. Weid

What has that got to do with the making of beds, sweeping of floors and cooking meals? Perhaps the same as you want to know about the young man taking your daughter out on her first date. You are concerned about his background, his home, his family, his church. What are the ideas, beliefs and principles he lives by? "As a man thinketh in his heart so is he," says the prophet.

We have often heard people say: "It doesn't matter what a person believes so long as his life is good." We might as well say: "It doesn't matter what kind of tree it is so long as its fruit is good." Jesus' answer to that is that no fruit is good unless the tree is good. It does make a difference whether the pilot of a plane believes in his compass, his navigational charts and instruments. Ideas and beliefs are the forerunners of behavior.

When Jesus said, "I am the way, the truth and the life," he announced a basic principle for man to be guided by. We could, no doubt, solve our human relations problems at home and abroad if we sincerely believed in and followed the teachings of Christ and the prophets.

The race problems, for example, in our land and other lands, will not be solved entirely by law. The solution lies within the heart and soul of the people. The law is like a pump that will produce only if there is water in the well. The law can produce no more in terms of a good, decent order than what is in the nation's soul.

It is only the response of the people to the demands of the law that makes the law effective. What the people believe, what the people are deeply within their souls, determines the goodness of a nation.

Some years ago a little church on the English coast was destroyed in a hurricane. The congregation did not think themselves financially able to rebuild. One day a representative of the British Admiralty came to the clergyman to ask if they intended to rebuild the church.

The clergyman explained why they could not do it. "Well," said the representative of the British Navy, "if you do not rebuild the church, we will. That spire is on all our charts and maps. It is the landmark by which the ships of the seven seas steer their course."

Never more than now, when the peoples of the world are searching for solutions to many problems, is a strong, sustaining, empowering faith needed as a guide to a better world.

A DREAM PERPETUATED

"Dreams long dwelt on, amount to prayer, and prayers wrought in faith come true."

Mabel Wagnalls Jones wrote those lines. Her dreams and prayers came true on Memorial Day, 1925, with the dedication of the village library in Lithopolis, O., in memory of her parents. Now they, she, and her husband all sleep on the family lot in the nearby cemetery.

Adam Wagnalls, a Lithopolis native, was co-founder of Funk and Wagnalls, publishers of the old Literary Digest, a dictionary, and other works.

The Tudor-Gothic structure of the library was built of native freestone over a period of more than two years at a cost of half a million dollars. Local labor was employed as much as possible.

The larger of two auditoriums seats 428. On its walls hang many autographed photographs of noted people, including Canal Winchester's own beloved Oley Speaks, accomplished musician and composer of the lyric "Syivia."

The library houses 12,000 volumes, paintings by John Ward Dunsmore, original longhand manuscripts of Edwin Markham's poems, and a unique collection of O. Henry letters valued at $10,000.

The library loans books to residents of Lithopolis and surrounding Bloom Township, regardless of race or creed.

College scholarships also are available to Bloom Township children who can qualify in scholarship and character.

The library is operated by a permanent board of trustees. It is free of all debt.

It says here . . .
Money is a blessing when used in the right time and place.

Frosting on the Cake
BY "UNCLE DOC" ROSS — U.S.A.

Sixty years ago, when I was a typical small town smarty-pants kid up in Fayette, O., we had no juvenile delinquency.

Everyone was so busy from daylight to dark scratching for a bare living that they had no time for raising cain.

Then too, parents were really onto their jobs as parents and they were backed up by a town marshal who knew every kid in town. Those of us who remember Charley Sheriff look back upon his performance with respect.

Charley was six feet tall, weighed 200 pounds and didn't have an ounce of fat on him. All day long, six days a week, he was head sawyer in the old Allen Sawmill. Then after supper, he was out on the streets until 10 p.m. Things stayed under control, because every kid knew he had better not fool with the marshal.

Our so-called "modern" society has failed to produce Charley's equal.

But there were other forces operating in those days that gave moral support to the program of handling kids. Most of them had chores to do from daylight to school time and until dark after school. Saturdays, they cut corn, sawed wood, cleaned out the barn stalls and perhaps had a little time left to play One O'Cat before dark.

Today, in the city—we have but one substitute for all those regulatory factors—a newspaper route. Kids who carry the early morning papers get up at the required hour, have breakfast, deliver their papers and are off to school.

For 20 years here I have been a second-hand Pops to every kid who has carried my papers. Some of them are now grown, have fine families, and their boys have paper routes. WORK IS STILL THE BEST POLICEMAN!

Under Buckeye Skies

By KEN MACK McCREARY

Now that the summer season has officially arrived (as of mid-morning Monday), the massive migration of Spectatorland residents into the sunny outdoors in quest of relaxing recreation is in full stride.

While we're counting on many hours of outdoor fun, the next couple of months will also result in some mighty painful and uncomfortable hours for thousands. A majority of this misery will be caused by a pair of summertime hazards — poison ivy and sunburn.

Mack

Poison ivy is a sneaky menace which lurks almost every place that's green. If you've been a victim, you know that those irritating and itchy blisters can drive you almost insane—you know all about the lotions, the creams and the nights of sleepless scratching. If you haven't had poison ivy, be on your guard—it can ruin your summer fun.

One odd (and frustrating) trait of poison, ivy-style, is that while some people can literally eat it without ever catching the rash, there are some of us who can't even look at the vine without being in trouble.

ALSO, some years you may catch it and the next year be completely immune. But for most of us who are susceptible, poison ivy can be contracted by even walking on the windward side of it, or by touching a dog, clothing or garden tool which has been in contact.

And every bit of the plant can give you the poison, even the roots and the berries . . . so don't touch any of it.

If you should accidentally or by necessity come into contact with poison ivy, don't delay — immediately wash the area with warm water and laundry soap.

IF A SEVERE rash of the troublesome summer malady should break out, don't try to beat it by using home remedies; see your doctor to save many hours of misery, plus possible serious consequences.

Actually, poison ivy isn't hard to spot. Most of us are familiar with the three shiny leaves to a stem, a characteristic shared by ivy's equally dangerous cousin, poison oak.

However, while poison oak is usually an upright bush, poison ivy is a vine, found low to the ground or clinging to trees, fences and other greenery. Wherever you find it, don't fool with this miserable fun-spoiler.

ANOTHER FOILER of summer fun is sunburn, which is just about as easy as poison ivy to come by. How? Just stay out in the sun too long on your first outdoor jaunt.

Ironically, even though most of us strive for the psychological lift of a deep tan, the only actual benefit of exposure to sunlight is the formation of vitamin D (which foods generally supply amply).

The American Medical Association says that "the physical benefits of tanning are almost nil, and there is strong evidence that continued exposure to the sun weathers and ages the skin."

In fact, the AMA continues, "continued tanning brings gradual changes in the blood vessels of the exposed surfaces," and can sometimes lead to the beginning of skin cancer.

In addition, sun bleaches the hair and can leave it brittle and unmanageable.

In spite of the adverse physical indications, chances are you'll still try for that impressing sun tan this summer—but do it right. The experts suggest gradual exposure as the safest and simplest method of acquiring your attractive tan.

Generally, they start with only 15 minutes the first day and increase your time by about one-third on following days.

Remember, though, that the time of day is important and midday sun is much more likely to give you that miserable burn than early morning or late afternoon.

Our suggestion — have fun in the sun, but watch both it and the poison ivy.

4 City Parks Receive Fish From Quarry

More than 1,500 fish have been removed from the Marble Cliff Quarry on Dublin-rd and have been transferred to four city park ponds, according to John Z. Pelton, supervisor of the fish section of the Ohio Division of Wildlife.

The stockings included bluegills, crappies, bullheads, carp, channel catfish and other species. Ponds stocked were Schiller, Linden, Franklin and Goodale.

He said the fish were removed in cooperation with the Columbus Department of Water and the Department of Parks and Recreation.

Pelton stated that Marble Cliff Quarry had been recently purchased by the City of Columbus and was going to be used as a sludge dumping area. This means that all of these fish ultimately would have been killed, hence, the decision to salvage them and plant them elsewhere.

Gain College Scholarships

Ever wonder how much in demand starters on a state championship basketball team are after graduation?

South High, the "AA" state champ this past cage season, did fine by its first five — all of whom will attend college via scholarships.

Bill Bullock and Roger Harper will attend Cameron State College in Oklahoma on athletic scholarships this fall. Lloyd Pate will call the University of Cincinnati home via an athletic scholarship.

Marion Iverson will attend Hiram (Ohio) College on an academic scholarship and the fifth member of the starting five — Mel Thompson — will head for Cameron State College to join Bullock and Harper, after serving a two-year Navy hitch.

COFFEE BREAK

Hey, Come On Over— There's An Empty Bed!

BY ADELINE DALEY

I have been toying with the idea of buying one of those neon signs motels use to indicate "Vacancy" or "No Vacancy" and installing it in front of our house.

I'm not trying to compete with the Travelodge people (although I might have a difficult time convincing anybody otherwise), but it would end some of the confusion we have over the number of guests our kids would like to have stay overnight.

Needless to say, we do not have too many extra beds so competition for them is keen. Moreover, should one of our own kids "check out" for the night to stay elsewhere, it is an absolute necessity that the vacancy be filled. My kids don't want me "rattling around" in an empty house.

In desperation, if their friends failed them, I believe they would stop passing autos on the highway and inquire if there are any kids their age who could spend the night.

One of the most fought-over-spots is the vacancy caused whenever my husband is away, because the kids figure that two of our smaller children can move in with me, leaving not one, but two open beds elsewhere. Some reorganizing is necessary, of course, and kids are shifted around the house in a sort of "musical bed" game — with me sometimes winding up on the living room couch.

I don't mind, but I can't say that my husband is enchanted with the idea of sleeping on the chesterfield—at any time. But that's what happens when he doesn't check out as scheduled. It happens in the best-run hotels.

He complains, too, when I don't fill him in on how many guests are sleeping where. What does he want me to do, have the kids sign a register? Nor will he let me forget the night he had to work late and I forgot to inform him that Elaine was having a "slumber party." The sight of 30 teen-aged girls with their hair in rollers convinced him we were being invaded by Mars.

However, I have been forced to limit "slumber" parties to special occasions. Otherwise, I'm afraid we would have to start dividing up the vacant floor space.

In all fairness, I must add that my kids are just as anxious to sleep at a friend's home and can pack a suitcase in 30 seconds, should the opportunity arise. Sometimes, I must admit, I help them pack.

Going to church may not be your habit, but it would be a good habit for you to have.

The Wonderful World of ANIMALS

By Frank Miller, D.V.M.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Is a terrarium 2½ inches deep by 7½ inches across big enough for two turtles?—B.L.

DEAR B. L.: That depends on the size of the turtles. It wouldn't be big enough, even for infants, for very long. While turtles are not overly susceptible to claustrophobia, this set-up would certainly bring out any tendencies in that direction.

• • •

DEAR DR. MILLER: Juneau, aged three, is a normally playful dog around us, but never with other dogs. She chases them out of the yard viciously. She has just finished another heat and, as usual, won't have a thing to do with any dog! She attracts males by the dozen but won't let them near her. Is there something abnormal about her, or is she just a psycho case? Friends with female dogs are quite envious.—V.G.

DEAR V.G.: If Juneau was adopted as a very young orphan her behavior would be understandable. A puppy separated from all dogs in the first few weeks of life may grow up unaware that it is a dog. Robbed of any socializing influence with its kind, such an orphan may remain permanently aloof. Juneau is living (?) proof that hormones aren't everything.

• • •

DEAR DR. MILLER: Are bugs good for pet birds? Will they eat them? Which ones are best? Is there any danger in feeding them?—A.B.

DEAR A. B.: There are few birds that won't enjoy something "buggy" once in a while. The canary may appreciate a meal of aphis. The soft bills, from the Pekin Robin to the Mynah, enjoy spiders, beetles, moths and flies.

Live food can be overdone, especially if the bird isn't used to it. A far greater hazard is collecting insects or spiders that contain pesticides. Be sure no poison has been used in the area where you are collecting these animated tidbits.

• • •

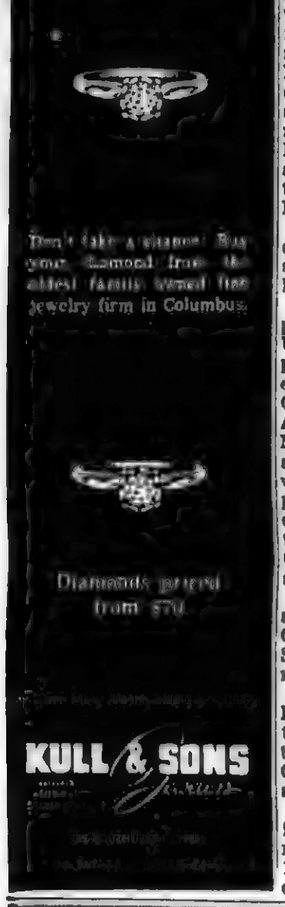
DEAR DR. MILLER: I would like a straight-out answer to this question. Is a good dog food all a dog needs to be fed?—A. K.

DEAR A. K.: Yes.

• • •

Does your favorite animal have problems, physical or emotional? Dr. Miller will answer all letters sent to him, care of this paper, provided a stamped, self-addressed envelope is enclosed.

June day: a sun with arson in its heart.



Buckeye Girls' State Turns Capital Into Political Center

Campaign slogans, songs and promotions of all types have been the scene at the Ohio American Legion Auxiliary's 19th Annual session of Buckeye Girls' State. The Federalists and Nationalist Parties, the mythical two party system, has set the campus of Capital University in motion as elections and appointments of city, county and state governments have been conducted.

Miss Barbara Ritchie of 5609 Hayden Run, Amlin, has been elected to the office of mayor. Miss Ritchie, resides in the city of Sullivant, Rarey County belonging to the Nationalist Party of Girls' State.

By practical participation she with 1250 other girls are facing the functions and problems of government as well as rights, duties and responsibilities of American Citizenship. Each of the girls holds an office on one of the three government levels actually carrying out her specific duties.

As the 1965 Girls' State session ends Sunday, June 27, a total of 13,968 girls have actively participated in the Ohio American Legion Auxiliary's largest project which is designed to introduce and educate the citizens of tomorrow in our form of Democracy.

CTC Keeps Same Fare

Mayor M. E. Sensenbrenner has made an announcement that there will be no increase in fares by the Columbus Transit Company, even though the company's investment return was below the minimum allowable under the franchise.

According to the franchise, the CTC is entitled to earn not less than 3¾ percent for each rate base period, however, the rate of return for the period ending June 30, is only 3.25 percent. Based upon these figures, the CTC would have been entitled to increase its fares for the succeeding rate base period.

After several conferences between CTC officials and Utility Director William H. Brooks, the company agreed to continue the present fares now in effect for the next rate base period.

The projected investment return for the period ending next December 31, is calculated at 3.77 percent midway between the minimum and maximum return allowable under the franchise.

New Homemaker Agency Offers Specialized Service

New to the Columbus scene is the recently incorporated Visiting Homemaker Service of Franklin County, Inc., with offices at 775 E. Broad-st.

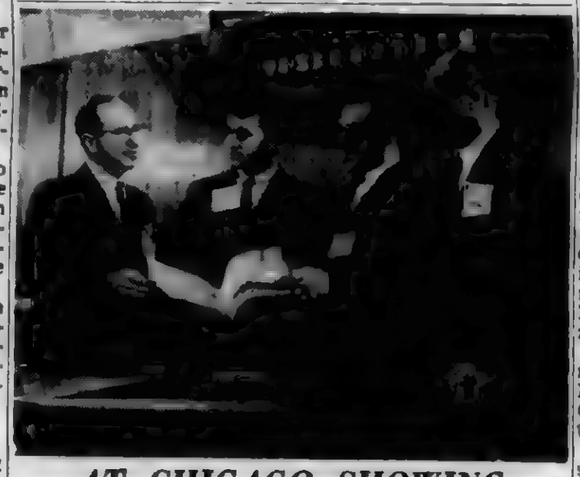
The Homemaker Service, a non-profit organization, offers the services of trained mature women to families requiring home aid due to illness, unexpected disablement of some member of the family and other circumstances.

This is a private service and is not affiliated with government agencies, according to Lulah Maass, executive director. "Homemaker Services are recognized by broadly representative community groups," she said. "We are a participant of the National Council on Homemaker Services."

Homemakers provided by the service are carefully screened and selected for their competence in household management, reliability and their interest in serving their fellowmen, according to Mrs. Maass.

In outlining the service provided she pointed out that in addition to usual housekeeping duties, homemakers when requested maintain the family marketing budget, plan and prepare special diets, attend to important errands, give essential care to young children, encourage the well members of the family to carry their share of the responsibility and encourage disabled members to participate in the life of the family.

Where requested homemakers may also work under the supervision of a doctor or registered nurse.



All homemakers, Mrs. Maass said, must pass rigid qualifications. This includes background, personality, health, ability, and appearance. They must be able to drive their own car, and are under continuous supervision of an administrative officer.

Homemaker service developed in the United States about 30 years ago out of concern for the needs of children in motherless homes. Today, it is a recognized form of community service to the whole family during periods of unusual stress.

The new local service is similar to those operating in New Jersey, Florida and other states. Mrs. Maass, who also holds the office of president, has been a practical nurse in this area for more than 40 years. She formerly operated Dial Nursing Service at 255 S. James-rd. More recently she supervised a Homemakers Service organization in Hollywood, Fla.

Other officers of Homemakers Service are Mary E. Rappold, vice-president and Charlotte Linn Gray, secretary-treasurer.

In addition to the E. Broad-st office, the service maintains an operations office at 34 N. Ashburton-rd, Mrs. Maass said additional information may be obtained by dialing 221-6050 or 225-2078.

THE STEPS TO THE CHURCH ARE SHORT

But Who Shall Show Us The Way?

By JANE ROBINSON

Twenty-six years ago a West Coast minister came to one of those crossroads which fixes a man's course — and sometimes maps those of others.

The highway he was on was wide, well-marked and familiar.

But his heart yearned to explore the path running, not away from the ministerial artery, but parallel with it.

What was the answer? Where was the star to guide him?

Rev. J. Irvin Overholser is matter-of-fact about it.

His "divine guidance" came in the mundane and blotchy disguise of the epidemic proportions with which a common childhood disease hit his large family.

Before one tot was free from quarantine, another one or two broke out.

He tells, "The Lord literally penned me up with the Bible."

When Rev. Overholser left his personal "wilderness" he brought with him what he considers his God-given decision to establish "Child Evangelism."

Thus was founded the international inter - denominational organization to bring children to Christ!

Unchurched Are Vulnerable

Now this evangelical work is sweeping Franklin County with the missionary zeal of James O. Cheatham and those working with him.

He believes that thousands of children are growing up without the knowledge in God simply because their parents have drifted from the church.

"The child cannot find his way there alone," Cheatham added.

It is this unchurched or "unreached" child to whom the ministers and teachers of CEF hold out their hand.

"Uncle Jim," as hundreds of children call him, sees a child without a church as vulnerable as the world sees a child unprotected in a storm.

He believes that thousands of children are growing up without the knowledge in God simply because their parents

The Fellowship does not look at itself as an end, only as a means of attaining an end. The end is simple — to win the child to Christ, to help him grow in Christ, and then to channel him into a fundamental Bible - teaching class.

Form Good Will Clubs

The instrument used is equally simple and draws the usual youngster like a magnet.

It is the Good Will Club, meeting after school in the home of a neighbor to sing, learn, pray and play.

The good news is that "Christ Died For Me."

Cheatham is continually buoyed by the enthusiasm of the students with whom he works.

"They WANT the answers," he cried. "All we must do is bring them."

His own enthusiasm is contagious.

He spiels statistics indicating that religious training is a deterrent to delinquency, quoting, among others, a study of 8,000 juvenile offenders which showed only 42 attended Sunday School and that none was from homes of parents who regularly went to church.

To him the permissive attitudes of the home, the community and the courts are contrary to fundamental word of God.

With genuine concern he told of a little girl in a class who volunteered that she has never done anything wrong in all of her five earthly years.

Upon questioning, Cheatham learned that her parents cared so little that she had never been corrected and thus had grown to believe there was no wrong for her.

All Levels Have "Needy"

Cheatham claims there are no economic barriers between those who need Christ.

He indicated that a busy banker determined to get 18-holes in before the Sabbath noon could neglect his child's spiritual training as easily—and completely—as the welfare client sleeping off a Saturday night binge.

Capitalizing on the eagerness to learn a child has once his interest is aroused, the Fellowship finds little difficulty in guiding the child to the shepherdship of a conventional Sunday School.

Two little "firsts" from children brought "Uncle Jim" the assurance that two more youngsters were ready to accept Christ and His teaching.

One was when a little boy, not - overly supplied with worldly goods, asked his mother for a "Bible for Christmas." The second was the handmade cross, painstakingly made in his father's workshop, brought by a lad to whom a month before God had been a stranger, except "damnit."

"STOP!" cries Rev. James Cheatham, 933 Kelton, to the children who come to him, and they do. They are eager to hear (the first time for most) the story of God's love. The thrill of having this love brings them back time and time again, the local director of Child Evangelism Fellowship explained. He said that first each must learn to be a Christian, and then a member of the church of their choice.

WHEN SCHOOL is over and summer begins, the "Chapel on Wheels" begins to roll. All summer long Rev. and Mrs. Cheatham hold classes along the Franklin County countryside. Here, week-long Bible study is offered the children, and the parents learn how they can become "Good News" teachers and hostesses during the winter. Above, "Uncle Jim" holds open the illustrated hymnal while Mrs. Cheatham plays the miniature organ in the chapel. Their son Jonathan sings.

THE CAREFULLY PLANNED teaching of Mrs. Cheatham stirs the hearts of the children as she tells the story of Jacob and Esau, while the vivid flannelgraph figures capture their imagination. The Child Evangelism Fellowship is unique, Rev. Cheatham explained—"its constituents can't support it." The entire program which is now reaching over two million "unchurched" children, is supported by Christians who give and pray for its continuance and the volunteer hostesses and helpers at home and abroad. The group shown above, in foreground, from left, are Sylvia Davidson, 906 Kelton; George Bess and the Cheathams' son, Jonathan. In the back are Charles and Steve Bess, Nancy Cheatham and Donna Perkins, 866 Kelton. The Bess boys all live at 1826 E. Kossuth-st.

Four Youths Visit Newark On Bicycles

Four Columbus boys hit the dusty road last week for a one and a half day bicycle trip to Granville and Newark, covering 125 miles before returning home.

Michael Moore, 15, of 84 McMillen-av; Robert Young, 15, of 458 W. Eighth-av; William Mollett, 15, of 1425 Hunter-av, and Robert Swift, 14, of 1455 Hunter-av, were the four boys.

They started out June 16 and rode to Granville where they set up camp on the property of John Hill, principal of the Granville Junior High, with whom they had made previous arrangements. The boys then rode on to Newark the same day, where they visited the works of the Mound Builders and the campus of Denison University.

They then rode back to Granville where they stayed the night and returned to Columbus the next day. The boys plan to take another trip, this time a week long, shortly before school begins next fall.

DOUG SEEKS TROPHY ENCORE

DOUG LILLY, 15, son of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Lilly of Grove City, is pictured above with his 4-H horse project "Miss Her Hank", receiving the trophy for Halter Showmanship at the '64 Mid-Western Horse Show and Rodeo from Bee Hart of Delaware. Doug, working now as a counselor at Teays Valley Summer Ranch near Ashville, is grooming and working his new project — Cotton Sue Bar — during his spare time for the 17th annual Horse Show and Rodeo, set for the Ohio Exposition Center Coliseum, July 1-5. Doug, a member of the Triple T 4-H Horse and Colt Club, is a student at Grove City High and has been in 4-H for four years. He has won high point honors, making him one of 225 out of 7900 4-Hers eligible to compete at the Ohio State Fair for the past three years. The Horse Show and Rodeo (wild brone and brahma bull riding, calf roping and cattle cutting) will be staged for four night performances (July 1-4 at 7:30) and three matinees (July 3-5 at 1:30). Classes for 4-H Horse Projects will be held both morning and afternoon on July 1.

Summer Camp Offers Fun

Sixty-six local handicapped children are having a chance to spend two weeks in the out-of-doors as the Franklin County Society for Crippled Children is again sponsoring summer camp at Camp Greenwood Lake at Delaware, O., from June 21 through July 2.

The camping program is made possible by funds supplied by Easter Seal contributions and campership given by clubs and organizations. It is among the more than 100 such camp programs sponsored by Easter Seal Societies across the nation for about 12,000 crippled children.

Camp Greenwood Lake provides for handicapped boys and girls the same comradeship, recreation and outdoor experiences acquired by able-bodied children who attend summer camps. On crutches, wearing braces and even in wheel chairs, many of the youngsters are at camp for the very first time. Camping puts the handicapped child on his own for perhaps the first time in his life.

FOOD MARKETS THIS WEEK

Fruit Crop Outlook Is Good

THIS WEEK LOOK FOR:

Fruits — Watermelons, bananas, cantaloupes, Winesap apples, red tart cherries.

Vegetables — Greenhouse tomatoes, salad greens, cabbage, carrots, cucumbers, potatoes (new red), head lettuce.

Meat and Poultry — Beef "specials," ground beef, cured pork products, broiler-fryers, eggs.

Other Foods — Frozen: orange juice, lemonade, milk and dairy products.

Fruit Prospects Good

Prospects for overall U.S. fruit production are good this year, according to U.S. Dept. of Agriculture reports.

Nationwide, production of peaches, apricots, plums and prunes is expected to be greater than last year. Decreases from last year are indicated for apples, pears, sweet cherries, sour cherries (Western States), and nectarines. The most extensive freeze-losses occurred in the Northwestern States, with most severe damage to peaches, apricots, cherries and pears.

Mrs. Franks

The 1965 apple crop is expected to be below last year but slightly above the 1959-63 average. The yield will vary greatly in different parts of the country.

The nation's peach estimate is up 12 percent from 1964 and 11 percent above average. The forecast for the nine southern peach states will triple last year's freeze-damaged crop. Most of the increase will be in the Carolinas, Georgia and Alabama.

The plum crop in California is estimated to be 27 percent larger than the five-year average. Fresh plums and peaches will headline July's plentiful food list. Sour cherry production will likely be down in all states except Idaho; California's sweet cherry crop is less than last year but much better than average.

Citrus production for 1964-65 will be about 23 percent above last year. Lemons are the only citrus crop with smaller volume. Almond and walnut crops appear at this time to be better than average.

House Will Decide Fate Of School Bus Bill

JENY REYNOLDS, exhibit chairman for Bexley Art Guild's upcoming "Sidewalk Show," will exhibit many of her paintings, including the unfinished one at her left which she has titled, "Driving By." In form and colors it captures summer's burst of burgeoning nature as seen from a passing car. Jeny said the painting would be finished in time for the show.

By FRANK RYAN

Backers of legislation to provide school bus service to children in state-accredited private and parochial schools now have the Rhodes Administration behind them.

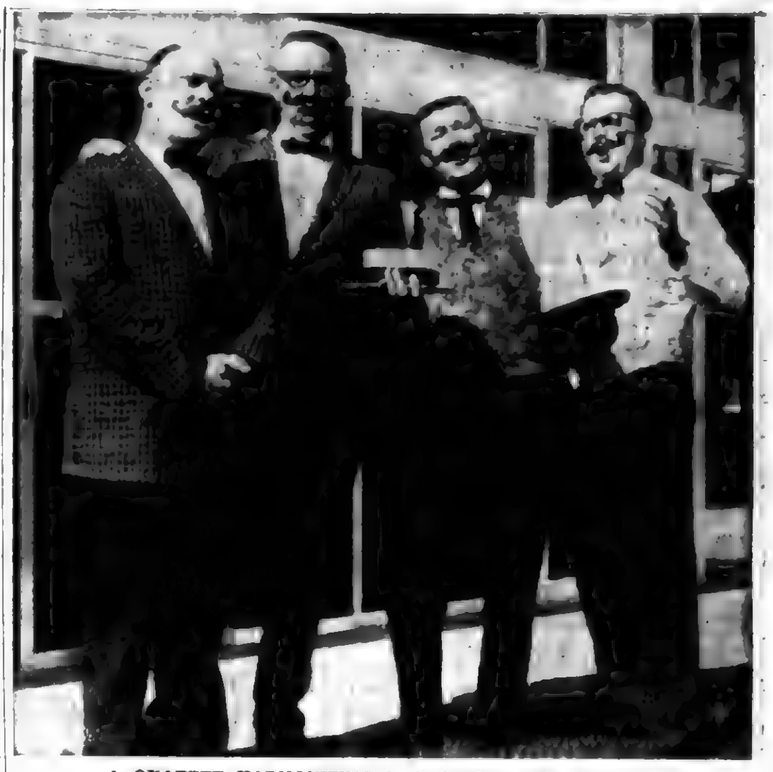
An administration-backed bus bill requiring school districts to provide equalized bus transportation easily passed the Senate Monday night. The vote was 25 to 5.

The measure now goes to the House, which has bottled up several bus bills in committee. Bill sponsors and administration sources now see a "good" chance that the measure will pass in the House prior to the scheduled adjournment of the legislature about July 15.

The measure follows closely the mandatory "Fair Bus Bill" originally introduced in the Senate. It specifies that the local boards of education "shall" provide bus service for elementary school children to the school "which they attend" if they live more than two miles from the school.

Bus transportation for high school pupils remains permissive, but includes private and parochial schools by use of the language "School . . . which they attend," provided it is a state-accredited school.

The proposed law governing transportation for elementary school pupils is effective "except when, in the judgment of such (local) board, confirmed by the state board of education, such transportation is unnecessary or unreasonable."



The bill does not provide for compensation to parents who must transport their children when the "unnecessary or unreasonable" ruling applies.

The measure directs the State Board of Education to appoint transportation co-ordinators at the local levels. The bill makes each co-ordinator responsible for assuring transportation in a "safe, expedient and economical manner using public school collection points, routes, and schedules wherever practical."

Cost estimates for the additional bus service and hiring co-ordinators range from $2 to $2.5 million.

Optimism for the bus bill's changes in the House stems from the fact that the Rhodes Administration was responsible for pushing the measure through the Senate. Said one backer of the measure: "This means that Governor Rhodes has committed himself to the

A QUARTET HARMONIZING in barbershop style, dance specialties, magic show, novelty acts of all sorts—all are welcome to enter the amateur show to be held at Robinwood Plaza, E. Broad-st at Robinwood, as part of the community's Fourth of July celebration. Three members of the sponsoring Eastern Jaycees and Harry Epp, currently appearing at Howard Johnson East, donned fake mustaches and assumed the approved "barbershop" pose to welcome all amateurs in the East Columbus, Whitehall and Bexley area to compete in the show. From left are Thomas Studebaker, retiring president Jaycees; Whitehall Firefighter Paul Knoblauch, internal vice-president; Harry Epp and Roland Gilbert, director of the club. Anyone interested in registering may call Knoblauch, show chairman, at 231-9041.

PART OF JULY 4 CELEBRATION

Sidewalk Art Show Monday In Bexley

An interesting part of Bexley's Fourth of July celebration this year will be the Bexley Art Guild's third annual "Sidewalk Show" which will exhibit the works of 20 or more guild artists.

The exhibition will be held Monday, July 5, from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m., in front of the First Federal Building at 2450 E. Main-st next to the post-office.

Jeny Reynolds, exhibit chairman, said artists wearing red, white and blue sashes, giant firecrackers and other colorful touches thematic of the holiday will give the art fair a gala air.

Several hundred exhibits in all media are expected to be on display.

Among these will be the work of Leland McClelland, Mary Drake, Marjorie Rickev, Richard Bauer, Jane Cook, Helen Elberfeld, Mrs. Alvin Gibbs, Mary Jackson, Byron Kohn, Richard Phipps, Fay Ruben, Mrs. Guido Salvato, Jack Nowacki, Cornelia Downs, Mrs. Arthur Kellner, Lois Sorgen, Harry Schwartz, Dow Graham, Mable Vogel and Jeny Reynolds.

Most of the paintings exhibited may be purchased by the public. A number of them will be selected from the Sidewalk Show to be exhibited at the Festival of the Arts to be held July 15 through 18.

Officers of the Bexley Art Guild are Fred Dutcher, president; James Merkle, vice-president; Mrs. David E. Westwater, secretary, and Mrs. J. Roth Crabbe, treasurer.

Berwyn To Hold Pre-4th Parade

The Berwyn Civic Association is sponsoring a pre-Fourth of July parade Saturday, July 3.

Featured in the parade will be the 3-5-7 clowns, and Tex Wheeler and his bull whip.

Participants are asked to wear costumes and bring decorated bikes, wagons, scooters, or buggies. Prizes will be awarded for the best decorated vehicles.

The parade will assemble at 12:30 p.m. Saturday, July 3, at the corner of James-rd and Scottwood, across from Redeemer Lutheran Church.

There will be free refreshments for the children after the parade.

BARBECUE SET MONDAY IN GAHANNA

Gahanna Lions Club will hold its fourth annual chicken barbecue Monday, July 5, at the Gahanna Lincoln High School on Hamilton-rd.

Serving will be 4 to 7 p.m. with carry out orders available.

There will also be a band concert and fireworks in the football stadium, starting at 7 p.m.

Jaycees Light Fuse Under Community Celebration Plans

A "bigger than ever" parade, an amateur show, a concert by Harry Epp and his Muskat Ramblers, and an art exhibit by area high school students are among added attractions to this year's Fourth of July celebration, to be staged by Eastern Columbus Jaycees Sunday at Robinwood Plaza, E. Broad-st at Robinwood.

In the event of rain all the events scheduled throughout the afternoon and evening will be postponed until Monday, July 5—same time, same place.

And sitting in the "Bozo" dunking seat at the Plaza, ready to be dunked into a tank of water by anyone who hits the target with a baseball, are members of Whitehall Police Department, led by Chief Ralph Walker, and the Whitehall mayor.

Also taking their turn in the seat will be Police Lt. Glenn Clark and Detectives Kenneth Swanson and Harry McBride.

Whitehall Lions, sponsors of the "dunk-em" device, will also serve as targets, with Mayor William Holzhause, retiring president; Bob Summers, new president; Dr. Don Plotnick, Dennis Zody, Wesley Sanders and Wylie Reed taking their turns.

Antique cars from as far as Zanesville and Grove City will take part in the parade, to start at 1:30 from Whitehall High School, travel north to Broad and east to Robinwood.

The high school band, Ramettes, fire department units and dozens of decorated bicycles, escorted by Jayeees in clown costume, will also parade.

Harry Epp and his Muskat Ramblers will participate in the parade and, at 3 p.m., present a concert of their special brand of Dixieland music.

Whitehall, Mifflin and Reynoldsburg Fire Departments will stage their annual water battle, prizes will be awarded for the best decorated bikes and to winners in the silly olympics.

Art students of East Columbus area high schools will exhibit their work, and there will be a model car road race at Hobbyland in Town and Country Shopping Center, and a semi-pro ball game at the high school.

Main Street Traffic Considered

Whitehall council is expected to act favorably next Tuesday on an ordinance calling for installation of two traffic signals on E. Main-st — a caution signal at Fairway-blvd and a traffic light at Manfeld-dr.

Police records show a total of nine traffic fatalities over the past three years in the 3,970-foot stretch between the city's east corporation limit and Manfeld-dr. Reportedly, speed was a factor in each of the accidents, including two triple-fatal crashes.

Main-st in Whitehall is posted for a 35 mph speed limit, and police say the speed limit will be rigidly enforced. Police feel that installation of the traffic signals will help to keep traffic within the speed limit without impeding normal traffic flow.

Councilman Gilbert H. O'Shaughnessy, chairman of council's safety committee, introduced the legislation for traffic signals.

COUNCILMAN GILBERT H. O'Shaughnessy points to the word "enforced" on the 35 mph speed limit sign near the city's east corporation line.

SUM AND SUBSTANCE

A New Taste Thrill – Algae-ade!

By CHUCK HARTLE

Going for a drink of water has not been a dull, commonplace event around some parts of Columbus this past week.

The would-be drinker approaches the fountain with apprehension, wondering if the clear, colorless liquid spouting forth will be plain old H_2O, or the new and exciting algae-ade.

In spite of its unique flavor, water officials tell us that algae-ade has no added food value, nor does it represent any hazard to health. So, you can drink all you want.

It is reported that people who live in unaffected parts of town (North and East) are bringing home buckets of algae-ade from downtown and the South and West sides. (Or is it the other way around?)

In any case, City Water Superintendent Frank Wright is adding copper sulfate to the Scioto River in hopes of returning it to blend tastelessness. He also has permission to use Delaware Dam water, if necessary.

Speaking of water, there seems to be plenty on hand. Even without rain, no short supply would exist for months to come.

It's a comfortable feeling to know the nation's leading lady pistol shooter is a member of the Columbus Police Department. Policewoman Jeanne Bray successfully defended her title in matches at Indiana University.

The Columbus department also scored second in both men's team and men's individual competition.

A bespectacled Upper Arlington 17-yera-old knocked the "age and experience" theory into a cocked hat when he won the District Amateur Golf Championship.

Winner Ross Bartschy, Jr., took the honors by defeating three-time winner, Art Todd, in a 36-hole match Sunday.

KIDS NOTE THIS: Fifty high school English teachers are going to school this summer at OSU. They're attending an eight-week Summer English Institute financed by a federal grant. Isn't it kind of fun to think about their working away in a classroom on these hot, sunny days?

Battelle Memorial Institute is building a $700,000 animal laboratory, to be finished later this year. Perhaps the first residents could be some of those rats displaced by East Freeway demolitions now trying to make new homes in Whitehall

Phone booths are getting more glamorous and more ubiquitous all the time. The glamor: new gold-finished aluminum exteriors. Four hundred of them are being installed downtown over a five-year period.

After one brief, upsetting misfire when problems concerning freeway exits threatened to hold up construction of the $10 million post office at the Spring-Sandusky interchange, contracts were let Friday and construction was promised to take 730 days.

Columbus Day U.S.A. Association representatives delivered a $1,000 check to our sister city, Genoa, Italy. It will be used for a scholarship at the Institute of International Communications in Genoa.

Summer school and summer work go hand in hand this year at OSU as construction starts this week on new buildings valued at $10.5 million. Included are engineering, chemistry, pharmacy and aeronautics buildings.

Being invited to repeat again and again as a speaker is the sign of real acceptance. So it is with Mrs. Christine Y. Conaway, dean of women at OSU, and Dr. Nicholas Nyaradi, director of the School of International Studies at Bradley University. Both were invited speakers at Buckeye Girls' State, Capital University, for the "umpety-umpth" year.

John McElroy, administrative assistant to Rhodes, confirmed the governor's support of the measure, and said he expected favorable House action on the bill.

Lanyard-making was the crafts project last Friday afternoon, with long plastic strips looped on teeter-totter handles for braiding. Included in the group are Rick Wells, Amy Gingrich, Paula Marie Bohn, Marcie Rehmar, Johanna Eisenberger, Leslie Joseph, Janis Rehmar, Linda Nyland, Debra Hale, Danny Wells, Shelley Kaufherr, Shawn Griffin, Nancy Nowacki and Mike Stevens.

Friday In Whitehall Pet Shows Planned

Pet shows will be held Friday, July 2, 2 p.m. at all five Whitehall playgrounds—Beechwood, Etna Road, East Main Street, Kae Avenue and Norton Field.

Children should not report to the playgrounds with their pets before 1:30 p.m. All dogs must be on leashes, and children must be responsible for their pets.

Winners will be selected in categories of biggest, smallest, funniest, most beautiful and best behaved.

Softball teams are being organized on each playground, crafts programs are under way, and coming events are being planned, including horseshoe and tetherball tournaments.

Kae Avenue . . .

Kae Avenue recreation leaders have recorded a record number of participants for playground activity—137 boys and girls have signed up for the program.

Mrs. Griffith (the former Miss Bowen) who is a third grade teacher at Kae Avenue School is instructing in arts and crafts as well as many other game activities.

Mr. Richards is in charge of sports instruction on the playground.

Kae Avenue is offering a large number of attractions and challenges for the younger set, including softball leagues for girls and boys, a horseshoe tournament on the playground during the week of July 5 with winners playing in the city-wide tournament July 14 at Norton Field, and also during the week of July 5, a bicycle rodeo.

E. Main Street . .

Playground supervisor for the second year at East Main, Phil Cooper, has completed registration and the first playground meeting was held.

Pet Show committee is made up of Dave McDonald, Wayne Church, Cora Riehart and Bob Schroyer.

Softball teams for both boys and girls are being organized. Anyone interested should contact Cooper at the playground.

Etna Road . . .

During the week of June 28, Etna Road boys' softball team will play Kae Avenue.

The girls' softball team will play East Main Street.

Norton Field . . .

Last Monday marked the opening of the playground season at Norton Field.

Juanita Williams and Don Sapp were welcomed back with a cake baked by Patty Darnell, Veronica and Vaness Meade. Janet Federer also brought some cold cuts while Craig Purns made Kool Ade.

Registration for boys and girls softball is now under way. Anyone interested should contact Juanita or Don at the playground.

Coming events are the tetherball and horseshow tournaments. The city-wide horseshoe tournament will be held at Norton Field July 14, at 2 p.m.

Beechwood . . .

Beechwood playground leaders, Phil Allen and Marjorie Bixler, registered almost 200 children during the first week the playground was open. Girls' and boys' softball teams are being organized.

Beechwood boys' team in the 13 to 15 age league played practice games with Etna Road and Norton Field.

The crafts program is being held every afternoon at 2. The projects will be varied throughout the summer to include weaving, braiding and other activities.

Shepard Library Suggests Novels For 'Slow Pace'

Now that summer is here and the pace has slackened, many patrons are coming to Shepard Branch Library, 2185 E. Fifth-av, to read all the novels they have missed during the busy winter months.

Mary Stewart's "This Rough Magic" measures up to its predecessors—romatic, exciting and vivid, set on the sparkling island of Corfu.

Afghanistan is the remote and appropriate setting for Michener's adventurous novel, "Caravans."

The French court, during the reign of Louis XV, rife with opulence, decadence and intrigue is the era borrowed by Evelyn Anthony in which to weave her story of a marriage of convenience in the book "The French Bride."

"The Rector of Justin" by Auchincloss, "A Song of Sixpence" by Cronin, "The Fortress" by Catherine Gavin, "The Spire" by Golding, "To Catch a Spy" by Eric Ambler, and "The Ambassador" by West are just a few more of the excellent fiction books to be found at the Shepard Branch.

Harold Schwartz, Shopping Center Developer, Dies

Funeral service for Harold L. Schwartz, 65, 1293 Crestwood-rd, was June 27 in the Snider Memorial Chapel, followed by interment in New Tiffereth Israel Cemetery.

Willis Park . . .

The playground season is well under way at Willis Park and promises to be a successful season with over 300 children registered for the summer.

Horseshoe Tournament was held June 23, with Bruce Jones winning the junior boys' competition.

Arts and crafts are held in the school each day at 12:30. The children make pot holders, butterflies and lanyards.

Junior boys softball team lost a practice game that had to go extra innings to determine the winner.

In Friday's contest Chris Michael and Bill Rose did exceptionally well.

City Planners OK, Reject Rezoning Bid

The city planning commission approved one application for rezoning on the east side, disapproved another and continued until later meetings three other applications at a meeting of the committee, June 23.

Approved, subject to the dedication of property for the continuance of a service road and planning strip, was an application filed by Bernard R. Ruben for the rezoning of 3069 to 3079 E. Livingston-av from two family residential to one to four family residential. The proposed use is for commercial storerooms.

Disapproved at the meeting was a rezoning of the southwest corner of Bexvie and Zettler-rds from suburban residential to commercial, submitted by George Zanes of 1714 Zettler-rd, who wished to build a community building with party rooms.

Continued until July 16 meeting was an application filed by Edward M. Dawson, Jr., for the rezoning of the rear of 3715 E. Main-st from manufacturing to apartment residential so he can build a multi-family apartment on 16 acres, and a request for change in zoning on the south side of Livingston-av west of Burlington-av from single family residential to apartment and office by Lillian Marks Bloom, 107 Chesterfield-rd, who wants to use the land for medical offices and apartments.

Continued until Aug. 11 was an application submitted by Frank Kauffman and Max Glassman to rezone the southwest corner of Groves and Hamilton-rds from manufacturing to commercial in order to build a service station, medical building and bank.

Zoning Decision Made

The City Planning Commission approved last week the usage at 473 E. Rich-st for law, insurance and real estate and rejected a request for community buildings and party rooms at the southwest corner of Zettler and Bexvie-rds.

"BY AGE 50 THE AVERAGE AMERICAN WOMAN . . .
. . . has lost 11 teeth, has developed brownish age spots on her skin, her hair has taken on either a faded or a dyed look, and she has added an extra chin. Altogether she has acquired a most undistinguished look deterioration. What is worse, she then grows discouraged and spends less instead of more money for professional grooming assistance. Often she gives up and neglects her appearance entirely . . ." That is a quote from Madame Anna Pegova, Director of an Institute established for the purpose of conquering the effects of age, situated in Paris and London. She goes on to say that her studies have proved that a woman does not have to settle for that "back-row look." There is a quality of loveliness that is ageless.

METTEZ LA TOUCHE FINALE, A VOTRE CHARME
It's the final touch of professional know-how that makes the difference! that transforms merely satisfactory hairdressing into something special. We have a little game we play with our patrons from time to time. Come in and try it. Perhaps you will be amused too. After we set and dry your hair we will ask you to comb and arrange it the very best you can. Then we will recomb it for you. It will interest you to see what a difference is in that professional "touche finale."

ENJOY YOUR FEMININE FANCIES
Why not? Everything that is feminine is a birthright privilege of every woman. If you like hats, wear them by all means! We have some charming hairstyles that will look equally well with or without your hat. Have you seen the Teeny Toppers that have been created for the big head hairstyles? I especially like the one that looks like a small straw dinner plate with a rose falling over the edge.

OUR BIG NEWS IS—WE WORK FOR YOU
Every few weeks we travel all over for more instruction and more fashion information to be sure that we are doing the best possible job for you. Everything is changing. Sometimes it is just that we learn new methods to use well-known tools. For instance, once we thought that scissors were required to give one haircutting effect and razors for another. Now everyone knows what we suspected all along, that a good hairstylist can get the same effects with either or both. The art is in the heart and the fingers.

Of interest to Women

By JANET MICHAEL

Fan-shaped white gladiolus and mums, backed with palms and fern amid seven-branched candelabra decorated the chancel of Freeport Methodist Church for the June 20 wedding of Miss Corley Anne Norton and Mr. George Stephen Byras.

Rev. Robert Meyers officiated at the 3:30 p.m. double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul W. Morton of Freeport. Mr. Byras is the son of Mrs. Louis Murphy of Bowdoinham, Me., and the late Mr. John Byras.

The bride chose for her wedding a traditional style bridal gown of silk organza trimmed in Swiss embroidery. The dome-shaped skirt ended in a square chapel train bordered with Swiss embroidery.

The bouffant coronet veil of imported silk illusion was trimmed with pearl crystal accents. She carried an arrangement of white butterfly roses with cascades centered on her OES Bible.

Mrs. John Kitz of Lancaster was the bride's matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Miss Eleanor Nasca and Miss Susan Cashman.

The attendants were identically gowned in floor length dresses of powder blue shantung in sheath style. The gowns were accented with royal blue floor length trains and matching headpieces of royal blue Dior bows with circle veils.

The honor attendant carried a powder puff arrangement of talisman roses and shattered carnations. The bridesmaids carried powder puff arrangements of pink and blue carnations.

Mr. James Varner served as best man. Seating the wedding guests were Mr. John Byras, brother of the bridegroom, Dr. Paul S. Morton, brother of the bride, Mr. James K. Manross and Mr. Dennis Benorden.

A reception in the church dining room followed the ceremony. Hostesses were Mrs. Jack Coy, Mrs. John McElhaney, Mrs. James McCartney, Mrs. Dwight Floyd, Mrs. Donald Framer, and Mrs. John Clark, cousin of the bride.

The bride is a graduate of Freeport High School and Muskingum College. She has been employed at Rosemore Junior High School in Whitehall.

Her husband was graduated from Lisbon Falls High School in Maine and the Airborne Radar and Radio Navigational Repair School at Scott Air Force Base in Illinois. He is stationed at Lockbourne Air Force Base.

Following a wedding trip to New York, Niagara Falls and the New England states, the couple will reside at 412 N. Virginia Lee-rd. In August they will move to Ernest Harmon, Newfoundland, where Mr. Byras will be stationed.

MRS. GEORGE STEPHEN BYRAS

The Wonderful World of ANIMALS

By Frank Miller, D.V.M.

DEAR DR. MILLER: We have had so much discussion about feeding raw beef to our cats. You mentioned it was good for them so we will go along with that. But is it their natural food? — T.D.

DEAR T.D.: Cats are carnivorous and their natural food is raw meat, but not, of course, beef. Millions of house-cats in this country have been neglected or abandoned completely. Many have managed to survive by eating whatever prey is available. The bulk of this prey is rodents, which are usually completely consumed. By eating the entire animal, minerals are consumed which are not present in adequate quantities in the muscle (meat).

* * *

DEAR DR. MILLER: We have never been able to raise anything in our garden because of the dog. Now he is making up for it by raising a crop of his own, indoors. FLEAS!! We kill them but more keep coming. Is this because he keeps bringing in more? Or could it be they come from the house? — J.B.

DEAR J.B.: Could be both. Once fleas become established on the premises, you must keep at them until all the potential offspring have reached a stage where they are susceptible to sprays, powder or whatever is being used. Under ideal conditions, fleas may complete an entire cycle in less than three weeks. On the other hand, more lethargic generations may not complete their development in much less than a year.

* * *

DEAR DR. MILLER: I have heard that it benefits both fish and plants (helps the fish grow, the plants stay green) if the aquarium light is left on in the daytime but turned off at night. I have also been told the reverse story: It is wiser if the fish have ordinary daylight in the tank, but the light is left on all night to keep the fish active. Which is correct? — P.P.

DEAR P.P.: The location of the tank is important. If you have natural, strong daylight, then the plants will be stimulated sufficiently, and not require any additional light, day or night. Otherwise some artificial light is desirable in the daytime. You can use it at night to watch the goings-on in your aquarium, but plants and fish can get by nicely without night lights. (Fish need their rest, too.)

The exception is where the plants are providing needed oxygen in a tank overcrowded with fish. In this case, an adequate night light to keep the plants working might be necessary. (However, an air pump is a much more reliable source for tank oxygenation.)

* * *

DEAR DR. MILLER: Which is a better pet for my child, a dog or a cat? — B.A.

DEAR B.A.: This depends on (among other things) amount of room available and your child's age and temperament. An introverted child, for example, often prefers a kitten. The extrovert more often chooses a puppy.

* * *

DEAR DR. MILLER: My dog will always be confined to the apartment. Does he absolutely have to have any shots? I hate shots. I know he will too. — S.R.

DEAR S.R.: Confinement does not protect your dog from distemper and hepatitis, so vaccination for these diseases is essential. In most areas, rabies inoculation is required by law.

* * *

DEAR DR. MILLER: My cat, who is nine months old and part Angora, has just started making the funniest noises. She purrs a lot and has a very strange meow. It doesn't sound like her at all. Sometimes she sounds like a baby crying. Along with this, she has started to roll around on the floor as if she itched or something. She has a hearty appetite so I don't think I have to worry. But these funny noises that she makes puzzle me. — D.R.

DEAR D.R.: That baby-like voice of hers may be misleading. More than likely her voice could be described as the "cat's meow" . . . at least any Toms in the neighborhood probably think so. Itching? Perhaps — itching to get out and tour the town with the "gentlemen" cats who must (by now) be ready and waiting.

* * *

DEAR DR. MILLER: Can my cat or dog catch my cold? — L.K.

DEAR L.K.: Probably not. (Pets are not susceptible to most human viruses.)

* * *

DEAR DR. MILLER: I have some bullfrog tadpoles. Is it true it takes up to three years for them to develop into frogs? I hope not because I'm in a hurry. What should I do? — D.D.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Do dogs ever need tetanus shots? I know I have to get them but never remember any of my dogs getting them. Why? — G.A.

DEAR G.A.: While dogs are not immune to tetanus, they are very resistant to it. The chances that a dog will actually develop an active case of tetanus is so slight that vaccination is not recommended.

* * *

Does your favorite animal have problems, physical or emotional? Dr. Miller will answer all letters sent to him, care of this paper, provided a stamped, self-addressed envelope is enclosed.

WHAT IS PROJECT HEAD START?

It Is A Voice That Says, 'Come Take My Hand'

ANYONE WHO has ever had more than a nodding acquaintance with little boys well knows that they aren't born particularly civilized. But yet, by the time they enter school, each must at least half-heartedly accept the notion that a bloody nose solves little. Getting this idea across to the young man above is but one of the jobs at hand for Miss Annette Cope, teacher at Project Head Start, Hamilton Central. Here one of the three classes in Hamilton Local is being held four hours a day until the middle of August under the eye of Dan Fulkes, project director.

NOTHING CAPTURES the interest of children faster than an unfamiliar object. The mobile in front of the desk at Hamilton Central is something that just isn't seen in the average home and attracts little girls like flowers beckon bees.

SHYNESS IS TOUGH for an adult to cope with, but for the child barely out of infancy it can be crippling. This little girl is the "loner" of the class, keeping as much as possible on the edge of the classroom activities. However, in only four days the wee lass has learned to trust Mrs. Eidsmoe and, if not becoming a chief, was ready to try being an Indian.

FOR EACH OF THE classes a woman of the community was recruited to help the professionally trained teacher who is in charge. At Hamilton that help is provided by Mrs. Shirley Eidsmoe of Hamilton Meadows. Authorities realize that it takes only a loving heart, not extensive training, to read to children, help round up clothing for those who might be kept from school by such a lack, and help them with their table manners and supervise their play. The personal attention each child receives is often the key to his feeling for the first time that he is a "rather important person." With self-respect won, it is but a step to learning the respect for others.

LUNCH TIME IS A happy time for Head Start children. Meals are planned not only from a nutritionist's viewpoint, but also to appeal to a child's palate. Last Thursday the menu would tempt any youngster—Sloppy Joes, potato chips, apple sauce and a mouth-watering spice cake featured. The lunches not only answer a definite need for some children where food is sometimes pretty scarce at home, but offers them the chance to take place in a "party" situation every day.

45 Children Can Mean 45 Sets Of Problems

BY JANE ROBINSON

What is Project Head Start?

It is the catchy name for the program that Mrs. Lyndon B. Johnson describes as "the most exciting, productive and practical project any government can embark on."

It is the project for the pre-school age child who for one reason, or another, is being lost in the shuffle.

Last week Hamilton Local School with three other districts in Franklin County (Mifflin, the Diocese and South-Western Schools) joined the nation-wide effort to change the situation that defeats some youngsters before they even begin school.

Although it is part of the War on Poverty, it is not limited to children of the destitute. With a $3,000 ceiling established for a family of four and $500 allowed for each additional child, some families taking part are actually fairly well-heeled.

But in each tot in the program there is a need professionals believe should be filled before he or she tackles the challenge of formal schooling.

These needs and the circumstances from which they arose vary from child to child, and usually, no one can point an accusing finger at the parent.

The mother in a fatherless home, who is not only the breadwinner but the chief cook, bottle washer, laundress, cleaning woman and seamstress for a large family has little time to acquaint her children with nursery rhymes.

To the father who is barely keeping his head above water the charge for admission to a zoo, a picture show or gasoline for a Sunday outing is a luxury he simply can't afford.

The most loving of parents have only so many hours a day and, in a very large family, babyhood is all too brief.

And again, some parents never had a chance themselves and unable to read or in some cases even express themselves very well, can do little to help a child become aware of his ever-changing world.

Physical and psychological factors also can create a child who needs a helping hand

Some children are frightfully shy and only professionally trained teachers and social workers can crack their little shells. Others, dismayed at the world they are trying to learn to live in, strike out defensively with the only weapon they know—a clenched fist, a surly attitude or habits which if not curbed, could foreshadow delinquency.

Often it has been revealed that the child who was thought to be dull is handicapped, not by lack of intelligence, but by undetected deafness. And, similarly, the perpetually cross little girl may have a toothache she has kept a dark secret.

No, the child who has been found to need what Head Start has to offer cannot be [illegible].

But these needs have been recognized.

It is easy to agree with Mrs. Johnson who believes there is no more important task in our communities than for the child whom circumstance has "stranded on an island of nothingness" to hear a voice say, "Come, take my hand."

SPELLBOUND by what was the first "live" entertainment most had ever enjoyed, the children joined a group from the Recreation Center at Lockbourne AFB to watch the dress rehearsal of Barnstock Theatre's production of "Cinderella." This field trip is but one planned this summer which will introduce the children to zoos, farms, museums, art galleries and other local attractions which many do not even know exist.

ENCIRCLED BY HER CLASS, Miss Annette Cope worked to familiarize the little ones with colors and shapes and sizes. While she separated the "blues and reds and the purples," a psychologist, who spends half her time in the Hamilton project, quietly observed. She noted for examples, the child who fumbled, the child who was most responsible, or the child who was inattentive. The program also offers medical and dental care, with the knowledge that a child whose energy is sapped by poor health or inadequate diet has two strikes against him. The importance of Head Start is clarified by statistics that show the culturally deprived child is often two years behind his peers by the fourth or fifth grade.

City Auto Club Inspects Court

A new basketball court at the Methodist Children's Home north of Worthington was inspected by members of the Orphans' Picnic Committee of the Columbus Automobile Club Wednesday, June 30, at 11 a.m. The court has been built by contributions of members of the automobile club.

Similar courts have been added at St. Vincent's, Columbus, and Delaware Children's Homes. Recreational improvements also will be made at other homes in Columbus auto club territory — all in celebration of the 60th anniversary of the club's Orphans' Picnic.

The picnic is scheduled for Columbus Zoo and Zoo Park Tuesday, July 13, with Robert O'Brien, automobile club trustee, as chairman of the sponsoring committee.

Steve Howell Sparkles In South All-Star Win

A good part of that big smile on OSU cager coach Fred Taylor's face Saturday night at Marion could be attributed to the fine showing of Eastmoor's Steve Howell in the South All-Star's 98-84 win over their opponents from the North.

Howell, the 6-5, 230-pound recent Warrior grad, has selected OSU for college and will report to the Buckeye frosh crew this fall.

As for Saturday night, big Steve dropped in nine of 20 field goal attempts, cashed in on three of four free throw attempts for a game-high 21 points and threw in 16 key rebounds for good measure.

It's No Joke!

Remember all those jokes about the game warden arresting the guy fishing without a license. A goodly number of Central Ohioans aren't laughing these days. The Ohio Division of Wildlife reports that 147 arrests have been made in 13 Central Ohio counties during the past 30 days.

Here's the punch line — 95 percent of the arrests were made for "fishing without a license."

'TWAS ALL DANNY NEEDED!

HARTLEY'S John Jenkins races home from third on a perfect squeeze play by teammate John Derrer Saturday in Summer League play for the lone run in the Hawk's 1-0 win over Arlington. UA catcher Brian Kitchen watches helplessly as his third baseman (right, background) fields ball and throws Derrer out at first. The run was all Hartley pitcher Danny McKeever (three-hitter) needed to win. Loose-fielding Hawks dropped opener, 8-0.

ONTARIO and Hackman Realty tied for second (3-2). Ontario won this position by winning a marathon contest with Martin's Market 25-19.

Highlight of the game was the 10-run first inning put together by Ontario. Of the first nine batters, seven had hits and two reached base on errors. Big guns for the winners were Harold Fenner and Dave Sinai with four hits each.

Hackman Realty earned its runnerup position in a closely contested win over Friedman, Cummins and Stern Insurance 15-9. Leading the Hackman attack were Sig Wasserman, Mort Rising, Ike Cohen and Bernie Shapiro with three hits each.

FISHIN' FACTS

If you want to add spice to your bass fishing, switch from regular casting or spinning gear to that deceptive, fish catchin' wand commonly referred to as a flyrod.

Most bass fishermen consider this equipment too fragile to whip ol' bucketmouth. And, besides, they argue, it's just too much trouble learning how to use it.

Not so, counter some fishing experts. A good flyrodder can snub down just about any lunker that crosses his path. They also dismiss the idea that flyrod handling is complicated. It worries only those who haven't tried it.

The only question mark lies in the gear itself.

The big "secret" is not the angler, but the equipment he uses. A properly matched rod and line are a breeze to handle — a mismatched rig will give anyone trouble.

If you're new to this bass buggin' game, the first thing to do is obtain a rod with stiff, slow action. Rod manufacturers have different labels to describe this action, and it may take some careful study of catalogs to figure out "what's what." A few of the old established brands still carry the notation "bass action," which is precisely what you're after.

Choosing the proper line is even more fun. Generally you'll want a "weight forward" design, for in fly casting the line — not the lure — is cast. The bulk and additional weight of bass bugs requires a heavier torpedo-style line to carry them.

It used to be that you could walk into a sporting goods store and ask the clerk for a GBF or GAF line. Now you'll call for a WF8F or WF9F. Choose the former for a short rod, the latter for a long one, and let it go at that.

Get "geared" for buggin' and a summer of new fun lies ahead.

There is little or nothing to be remembered on the subject of getting an honest living. One would think, from looking at literature, that this question had never disturbed a solitary individual's musings.—Henry David Thoreau

Recreation, Darnell Maintain Deadlock

Darnell and Recreation Department remained in a tie for first place in the Whitehall Slo-Pitch League Sunday with identical 3-0 records.

Recreation toppled the Police Department, 12-8, while Darnell won via forfeit after Holy Spirit had clobbered the loop co-leaders, 19-9.

DON SAPP'S four-for-four performance, including a two-run homer set the pace for the Recreation Department, who overcome a 4-0 Police lead.

The co-leaders poured across all 12 of their runs in the first three frames to decide the contest. Top stick for Police was Darrell Todd, who rapped out four hits in four appearances, including a double.

Outstanding defensive play was turned in by shortstop Eddie Nash and first baseman Geno Kaska for the Recreation team and second baseman Tom Trace for the Police.

JOHN LaCORTE won his third straight on an eight-hitter.

Ron Harris paced Holy Spirit with a homer, triple and single while Dick Petty (three-for-four) and Phil Paulson (three-for-four, including homer), were top hitters for Darnell.

Fire Department recorded its first win of the season with a thrilling 11-10 victory over the WBBA Coaches.

HEWITT McIVER (three hits including a pair of doubles) and Don Harrison (three-for-four) paced the firemen while Chuck Kenner (two-for-three) and Bob Dillon (two-for-three) led the WBBA hitting attack.

There will be no games scheduled this Sunday due to the July 4 holiday.

Here are the standings:

Der Willage Vanderer

By R. L. SCHMITZ

Grosse Gott: Young Bill Kraner is restoring his two doubles at the corner of Willow und Lazelle so fast grey heads throughout der Willage are shaking doubtfully. Although I haven't heard Bill referred to as a young whipperschnapper, the rebuke is implied in the carping of some greyheads.

To me it is refreshing to see a young man schtill in his tventies drop into our Willage, buy up not one Haus, but two doubles, then say by his actions, "Watch my dust." Perhaps vhat is really griping Bill's critics is the fact that, with completion some vay off, Bill is reschtoring so vell und tastefully he has already rented one side of a double und has a strong nibble on the other.

The odd schape of many Willage buildings causes speculation amongst inquisitive Willagers. Not speculative but factual is information provided by Col. James Allen about the provocative schtructure on the back of his rental property at 35 Sycamore-st. (This can best be seen from Pearl-st). Col. Allen asserts that this schtructure vas vonce a bake Haus.

In the old days fuel vas expensive und Germans notoriously frugal. So inschtead of every voman lighting her own fire, the Hausfraus of der neighborhood pooled resources once a veek und baked at 35 Sycamore-st. Vhile their breads und goodies vere browning in the big oven, the Hausfraus held a Kaffee Klatch. Can't you just heard the gossip?

Parents, however judicious and wise, are always — for their children's development — like slightly out-of-date textbooks.—Louis Kronenberger

'TWAS THE BEST YET

WITH CROWNING of a queen and with more art exhibits than you could shake a paint brush at, the sixth annual Haus und Garten Tour sponsored by German Village Society drew thousands to the historical area Sunday. Over 4,000 visitors were clocked at one house "on tour" alone, that of John Serrott and Don Clapham. At noon six bus loads and countless private cars of tourists arrived from the Cincinnati area, complete with their own queen. In the picture above Queen Martha Conrad is shown moments after the tiara was placed upon her head by Bill Fornof, left, president of Columbus City Council. To her right is Frank Kuboski, chairman of the Ohio Nationalities Association, who emceed the crowning. In the lower picture, Mrs. Barbara Villalobos, 1580 Falcon-pl and her son Derek, await the welcome cool drink her brother David Kosig, 3132 Hilgate-rd, is drawing on the patio of the Lawrence Shaffer home, 746 S. Review Of Costs Asked By Mayor

A rate reduction for customers of the city's Division of Electricity was posed as a possibility Tuesday in a letter from Mayor M. E Sensenbrenner to Service Director Warren J. Cremean.

Sensenbrenner noted that Utility Director William H. Brooks is currently negotiating for a lowered electric rate from the Columbus and Southern Ohio Electric Co. "We need also to look at our own rate structure in the Division of Electricity," the mayor wrote to Cremean.

The city negotiated a gas rate reduction in 1964.

The mayor asked Cremean to review the city electric rates "at once," and to report findings to him no later than June 29.

Mayor Signs Council U-R Bond Proposal

Columbus Mayor M. E. Sensenbrenner has signed City Council legislation to place a $6 million Urban Renewal bond issue on the Nov. 2 ballot. But, in a Monday letter to council, the mayor said he still feels council's sewer bond issue on the same ballot "can seriously jeopardize the Urban Renewal bond issue."

The mayor also reminded councilmen that, even before the November election, they will be called upon to provide "supplemental Urban Renewal funds to keep existing projects on schedule." He said the money crisis was known when it was decided to re-submit the bond issue this year.

A similar bond issue failed by a small margin in the General Elections of 1964. Although a majority of the voters approved the issue, it did not gain the required 55 percent of the vote. Submission of the question at a primary or special election was ruled out because passage would require a 65 percent affirmative vote.

Sensenbrenner told council he signed the Urban Renewal bond proposal because "my overwhelming desire to do everything possible to assure the success of the Urban Renewal program prohibits my taking any action which would be inconsistent with my past support of Urban Renewal."

Just two days before council initiated action on the bond issue, Sensenbrenner announced that he would not sponsor the matter on the ballot. He said he feared council's sewer bond issue would create a negative attitude toward the Urban Renewal measure.

But council was called into special session Wednesday afternoon to pass emergency legislation in another area. Just prior to the meeting, William R. Fornof, council president, decided to expand the meeting to include the Urban Renewal bond issue.

Neither the administration nor Urban Renewal Department officials were given advance notice that the subject would be considered by council. The measure passed unanimously.

Mayor Sensenbrenner is expected to contact the Metropolitan Committee soon to seek that group's support for the Urban Renewal bond issue. Council's sewer bond plan also is being studied by the committee, and Sensenbrenner has asked the committee to oppose the $42.6 million proposal.

The Metropolitan Committee, representing a wide range of area industrial, business and civic leadership, has been the coordinating force behind virtually every voted bond issue over the past 20 years. Committee Chairman Paul R. Gingher said council's proposed sewer plan marks the first time his group has been asked to take sides on an issue where the administration and council disagree.

In denouncing council's plan for total bond financing of sewer capital improvements over the next five years, Sensenbrenner said:

"I think it (the voted-bond plan) will serve to destroy community confidence in bond proposals not only this year but, perhaps, for years to come."

Beverly Manor Properties, Inc., 374 Virginia Lee-rd W, has permit 13339 for the alteration to a masonry building at 3824 Chesterfield-ct at a cost of $4500 and permit 13340 for an alteration to a masonry building at 313 Kellner-ct at a cost of $600.

RESTORES SIGHT

DR. BURTON M. LOUIS, optometrist, with offices in the Walnut Ridge Medical Center, 4395 E. Livingston-av, checks special contact lenses which are used to restore sight to keratoconus patients. Keratoconus (conical cornea) is an unusual condition of the eye in which the apex of the cornea bulges forward. The only symptom is a deterioration of vision. Soon glasses are of no use and the patient becomes legally blind. By the use of special contact lenses, Dr. Louis was able to restore the vision of William Knotts, 7325 Roshon-av, Reynoldsburg, and Alan Brif, of Villa Park, Ill., from legally blind to 20/20. Dr. Louis states that a great deal of research is needed to determine whether or not contact lenses will permanently correct this condition.

Honored For Aid To Heart Drive

Mrs. David J. Nesbitt and Police Chief Roy A. Thomas of Upper Arlington were honored at the annual meeting of the Franklin County Heart Association for their service during the annual Heart Sunday drive.

Mrs. Nesbitt was honored as chairman of the Upper Arlington area producing the greatest contribution.

Chief Thomas was presented with an award for service by himself and members of his department that assured the safe collection and delivery of contributions.

How Can You Keep 'Em Away From The Farm?

The lot of the entrepreneur —farmer, trader, manufacturer — has never been easy, in fact the word implies risk.

Trouble is compounded when people try for a fortune far from home. Midwest speculators in California or Florida land seldom get rich. It's even more risky in Africa or southeast Asia. You're a pigeon for fellows of the Sukarno stamp.

TAKE THE CASE of William Knieg, a former Missouri lawyer. Eleven years ago his wife inherited a farm which had been carved from the bush in 1909 in what is now Tanzania, central Africa. He has 7000 acres there planted to coffee, wheat and corn.

Four years ago some thousands of natives called Kikuyus from Kenya emigrated to Tanzania looking for land. Tanzania officials dispossessed a score of non-African farmers, but not Knieg.

About 200 Kikuyus and their families encamped on the fringes of his farm. He first offered to sell them small patches for seed bean crops but, he says, they told him they were moving on soon.

He then let them use his tractors and shops, he says, and helped them market their beans. But the more he did for them, he avers, the more they ran to politicians for advice.

"I've been occupied," he recently told a New York Times correspondent. "The politicians told them to stay put and they would get the land free."

Sensing the trend, Knieg offered the farm for sale, but regional officials forbade it, saying it was disputed property. He is sure that if he signed complaints against the squatters, he would be confiscated. "I don't know what has gone wrong," he said.

What's gone wrong is that the Europeans and other non-Africans who invested time, energy and money in Africa in the past century, have encountered a change of history.

The first move of a politician in a new country, or in an old one in revolution, is to promise the people land. Lenin did it and Mao did it, and never mind that the pledges were honored only in part. The African leaders are stuck with similar pledges.

The natives cannot be blamed if they press for fulfillment. In the long view, the land of this earth "belongs" to those who live on it. The natives couldn't care less about the effort which has gone into the development of African land.

It is perhaps true that the natives in this generation, at lease, at incapable of continuing development of the land they acquire. But even they have a right to their delusions as the entrepreneurs who are better equipped to recognize a delusion when they face one.

Meet Harold Schweikert and His Crew At The Hamilton Center Barber Shop

Eight years ago a young fellow named Harold, who had worked six years for Uncle Sam, three in the Air Force and three in the Army, was looking around the East Side for a good location for his barber shop. He wanted it in an area that would grow, and after a lot of looking, chose a spot in the Cooper Building at Hamilton and Livingston. He chose well, for the eight years has seen many families and business firms move into this area.
Harold Schweikert opened his second and larger shop last year when Hamilton Center opened, retaining his first location with Ross Wolfe and Bill Brickey to serve the customers at that shop.
Harold and his wife, Nancy, have two daughters, Sharon and Gina and a son, George.

Wit 'N' Wisdom

By JACK WITTENMEIER

Wise Up, Warren!

About 15 years ago, we sat in Cleveland's Municipal Stadium with a few thousand other people watching ageless Satchel Page hem 'n haw around the mound while streaks of lightning flashed across Lake Erie, somewhere out there in the darkness beyond center field.

Satch's team — the old St. Louis Brownies — were several runs ahead of the run - potent Indians in the seventh inning and another downpour of wet stuff (the game had been delayed almost an hour earlier) would have easily ended the game right there.

Wittenmeier

LIKE MOST of the other impressionable youngsters around me, I joined in the boos and catballs of the adults who realized that Satch was waitin' for the rain.

To make a long story short it never did rain, the Indians won somewhere around 2 a.m. and we took some memories home with us.

Nobody really minded Satch's "stall" because they expected it as part of baseball and most important of all—nobody got fined for "farcical play."

LAST WEEK in Milwaukee, Bobby Bragan tried a similar game of stall and got slapped right in the wallet by NL prexy Warren Giles.

Bragan's managerial opponent Red Schoendienst tried matching wits with the Brave skipper (accelerating the game with some intentionally poor baserunning) and got the same bum rap.

Mr. Giles and his upstairs cohorts then wonder why nobody is breaking his neck to get out to the ball park these days.

THE GAMES are too long, fans cry. Well then, wasn't Giles justified in cracking the whip on such obvious horseplay?

Baloney!

If games last too long, why don't the rules boys slice out that ridiculous "intentional walk" which is about as colorful as a bleached peacock?

WHEN SOMEONE suggested cutting out the infield warmups between innings, everyone laughed. (Gee, when could we get in the commercials?)

So we speed up the games by cutting short on the rhubarbs and rewarding a little bit of ingenuity with a $200 fine.

If baseball brass want a neat, tie-it-up-with-a-ribbon game, they better start building robots who can provide a very mechanical, stop-watch national pastime.

BUT AS LONG as humans are answering the call to play ball, why can't someone let 'em splash a little color now and then into what's becoming a very, very dull game.

"YOU TELL 'EM" DEPT.

Hat's off to renegade Gerry Lindgren who told the NCAA where to get off last week.

Lindgren, the very talented 6-mile runner at Washington State, deserves a pat on the back for bucking one-half of our Olympic tug-of-war team by entering the AAU Meet last weekend which qualifies athletes for the U.S.-Russian clash in July.

Said Lindgren: "I felt the first time I started running that I would help American distance running as much as I could."

HERE'S ONE teenager whose insight is about 240 miles ahead of some of our so-called "adults".

Gerry fears he'll probably lose his scholarship over the incident. We only hope more of our nation's athletes have the guts to follow Lindgren's lead — whatever the consequences.

IN THESE days of embassy stonings and flag burnings, it's refreshing to salute Gary Player's gracious contribution of his winning Open purse.

Just adds fuel to our burning belief that international athletics will win us more friends than all the Peace Corps, foreign aid and H-bombs in the world.

Anything that involves your life is important — like safe driving, for instance.

ARLINGTON'S KITCHEN 'SUNK'

ARLINGTON baserunner Brian Kitchen looks like he might be throwing a salute to Hartley catcher Chuck Drake Saturday as the Bear receiver attempts to score against the Hawks. But Drake wasn't impressed, tagging the runner out. Summer League clubs split twin-bill — UA winning error-filled opener, 8-0, dropping nightcap on Danny McKeever's three-hitter, 1-0. Under Buckeye Skies

By KEN MACK McCREARY

With summer surrounding us, few Buckeye country sportsmen have recreational thoughts on hunting — but let's look to the future. The Ohio Division of Wildlife and the Wildlife Council have set the season for next fall through spring, 1966. Generally speaking they are pretty liberal.

Mack

Squirrel season will run from Sept. 10 through Nov. 11 on private land, and through Christmas Day on state land.

The squirrel season and all other small game seasons will take a hiatus for the shotgun deer hunting season which runs Nov. 8 through 11 in the southeastern zone, and Nov. 9 through 11 in the northwest zone. For bow and arrow hunters, the whitetail deer season will last from Oct. 15 through Nov. 6 and Nov. 12 to Dec. 31, in the southeast zone. In the northwest zone, bow season lasts the same period, with time out for the gun hunters.

On the upland game scene, ring-necked pheasant and quail become legal game on Nov. 12, with the season finish on Dec. 18 on private land and on Jan. 29 on state areas. Cottontail rabbits are fair game Nov. 12 to Jan. 29, Ruffed grouse season lasts from Oct. 8 through Feb. 26, again with a "time-out" for the shotgun deer season.

For the first time in modern years Ohio will have a wild turkey season next spring, from May 4 through 7 in nine southern hill counties.

Other set seasons include: beaver, Feb. 1 through 9 in eight selected counties; raccoon, mink, muskrat and opossum, Nov. 15, through Feb. 15, and special experimental duck season for teal, Sept. 17 through 25. Weasels, groundhogs and skunks are fair game all year long.

Elsewhere under Buckeye skies, it's more than fitting that the extended Fourth of July holiday weekend also marks the beginning of Ohio Safe Boating Week. Even though the observance lasts from July 4 through 11, Ohio Division of Watercraft Chief Paul Sarossy calls on boaters to take caution and courtesy along as crew members on every trip afloat. Governor Rhodes, in his proclamation of Ohio Safe Boating Week, calls on all boaters, "by personal leadership and example, to enhance the enjoyment of our water areas by following all recognized standards of safety afloat."

County May Adopt Branch Voter Registration In 1966

By FRANK RYAN

Voter registration activity in 1966 could be accelerated by the Franklin County Board of Elections if a $30,000 budget item is approved by the county commissioners.

The requested funds, earmarked for "compensation of registrars," would permit expanded voter registration service. Several methods could be used, according to election officials, including branch registration facilities, of registration at the precinct level.

With rare exceptions, all registration of voters must be at the Franklin County Board of Elections in the Court House Annex. Registration at the precinct level was permitted on one day prior to the Primary Election last May.

Harold Holsworth, board of elections clerk, reports that the budget request does not mean that board members are committed to use the funds. If the item gains approval of county commissioners, election board members must then decide if and how the money will be used, Holzworth said.

At least one election board member has consistently fought for expansion of registration facilities. Thomas H. Williams has challenged other board members to revamp registration procedures he terms "entirely inadequate to meet the needs of an area that has expanded as greatly as Franklin County."

In July 1964, Williams gained support from city councils of Whitehall and Reynoldsburg, each of which offered use of their municipal buildings for branch registration. Representatives of the two cities, including Whitehall Mayor William Holshause and Reynoldsburg Mayor George W. Twyford, visited a regular Board of Elections meeting at that time to press for the branch registration plan.

The Williams proposal had previously been voted down, 3 to 1, and the July meeting did not alter the board's position. Board member William A. Schneider, chairman of the county Republican Executive Committee, termed the measure "Democrat inspired."

"We'd all be very stupid if we didn't see that this is from Democrats," he told the Whitehall and Reynoldsburg delegations. Williams, vice-chairman of the county Democratic Executive Committee, countered by saying that his only motive was to "make registration available to a maximum number of people."

Williams expressed hope that the board's current request for additional funds would lead to a broadened 1966 program of encouraging branch registration.

Those opposed to Williams' plan have argued that potential voters would not respond much more if "localized" locations were provided. An extension of the voter registration deadline prior to the 1965 primary election drew only a light response.

But during 1964, Williams headed up the Franklin County Registration Committee, and in that year Franklin County led all counties in both the actual number and percentage of new registrations. Williams contends that future registration drives will be even more successful if registration is made more accessible.

Mayor Calls For City-Wide Participation On Fourth

Columbus Mayor M. E. Sensenbrenner is calling upon city churches, clubs and community organizations to make plans for an "All-American City" celebration of the Fourth of July, featuring bell-ringing by the churches, fire sirens blaring at 2 p.m. and a city-wide day-long display of the American flag.

"President John F. Kennedy in 1961 inaugurated a practice which I think is especially appropiate on the Fourth of July," the Mayor said. He decreed then that the nation's church bells should ring at about 2 p.m. on the afternoon of the Fourth.

"Last year here in Columbus, Mrs. Robert J. Capretta, the Catholic Diocese women's chairman for community activities, suggested we take up the challenge of the late president, and have the church bells ring July Fourth. I issued a proclamation to this effect, and many of our fine churches throughout Franklin County responded."

Mayor Sensenbrenner also noted that this year's holiday falls on Sunday, and that the occasion will be observed at 2 p.m. Sunday, July Fourth and not on the following Monday, as is sometimes the custom.

City Sends Delegation To Genoa

A delegation from Columbus was received by Mayor Augusto Peduila of Genoa last Saturday at official ceremonies at Genoa City Hall, renewing tthe Transatlantic friendship between the two sister cities.

Highlight of the reception was the presentation of a $1000 scholarship check to the people of Genoa. The check will be presented in Genoa on October 12 by the Institute of International Communications to an Italian for scientific achievement.

Gifts from the Columbus Area Chamber of Commerce also were presented, plus a proclamation from Mayor M. E. Sensenbrenner offering greetings to the citizens of Genoa.

Heading up the 130 - member Columbus delegation which left Port Columbus last Friday were Will Hellerman, president of the Columbus Day USA Association; Lino Guzzo, past president of the organization; and Gene DeAngelo, general chairman for this year's Columbus Day celebration.

VD Public Education Goal Of Civic Group

At the request of the City Health Commissioner, Dr. Ollie M. Goodloe, a special Civic Advisory Group on Venereal Disease convened Wednesday (June 30) at the Grandview Inn. Dr. G. W. Hartman, Executive Director of the Columbus Area Council of Churches, presided at the luncheon meeting.

Immediate plans for civic programs, including venereal disease information, were discussed as the most practical means for alerting Columbus Citizens of venereal disease, a growing health menace.

Prominent citizens in civic affairs, medicine, public health, religion, and education were in attendance. Representatives included:

Monsignor Bennett Applegate, Raymond Bichimer, Mrs. Billie Brown, Dr. Francis Eberly, Gerald Fedderson, Dr. Ollie M. Goodloe.

Mrs. Richard Hahn, Rev. Kenneth D. Higginbotham, L. W. Huber, Dr. John Huston, Mrs. Jack Kirby, David Leiser.

Mrs. Jane Murphy, Dr. Cary Paul, Kline Roberts, Mrs. John Ryan, Mrs. Thomas Seckel and Dr. A. J. Weiner.

The meeting initiated a continuous civic movement for supporting and conducting VD awareness activity as prescribed by public health authorities for the ten-year objective of the eradication of syphilis and for the control of gonorrhea. The group voiced a unanimous opinion that public information and understanding of this health problem were essential.

"We must talk about these subjects openly, and stop sweeping them under the rug before the problem is completely out of control," said Russel Needham, health educator for the City Health Department. Civic and religious groups have decided to incorporate VD information and education within their annual programs and to be of direct assistance in informing others of the health problem.

"We need everyone's support, and are certainly grateful for the fine reception that this advisory group has afforded public health and private medicine in their fight to stop the spread of these diseases," stated City Health Commissioner Dr. Ollie M. Goodloe.

Upon completion of the tour, the All-Ohio Youth Choir will return with a full 325 voice choir for concerts at the 1965 Ohio State Fair.

Airport Might Expand Service

A proposal to persuade Delta Air Lines to extend service from Columbus to Houston and New Orleans without filing a formal complaint with the Civil Aeronautics Board has been submitted to the Columbus Airport Commission by Henry Beecken, aviation consultant from Washington, D.C.

Beecken also suggested that similar action should be taken with Trans-World Air Lines. If the two proposals are carried out the extended service will provide the city more money from the additional landing fees and airport concessions.

Crown Miss Columbus Tonight At Maramor

Preliminaries for the Miss International Pageant will start at 8 p.m. tonight at the Maramor when judges will select a "Miss Columbus."

Entrants in the Miss Columbus Beauty Contest must be single, not previously married, and between the ages of 18 and 28. Talent is not a requirement, and entrants will be judged in bathing suits and ball gowns.

The beauty selected by the judges for the title of Miss Columbus will compete with other area winners later in Cleveland for the Miss Ohio crown. Some of the other area winners will also be picked tonight at the Maramor.

Winner of the Miss Ohio title will compete for the Miss International crown in Long Beach, Calif. Among other prizes, Miss International will receive $75,000 cash and a movie contract.

Mrs. Ivola Nonemaker, owner of the Noni Charm and Modeling School at 209 S. High-st, and tutor of Sue Ann Downey, Miss U.S.A., is director of the local contest.

Keep Spirit Of '76 A Reality

Monday we "celebrate" Independence Day.

But glib celebration can be worse than none. It can deceive us into complacency.

The Spirit of '76 was not complacent.

What was it?

It was Independence of the fears that keep men from the courage of their convictions.

It was Independence of procrastination that keep men believing trouble ignored will go away.

In was Independence of indecisions that cripple men's souls.

It was Independence of resignation that keeps man satisfied with their lot.

It was Independence of worldly idols that dim men's faith.

It was Independence of inertia that nourishes the status quo.

It was Independence of intimidation that makes cowards of men and nations.

The United States as a nation and its citizens as individuals might pause Monday as the bands play and the flag passes to dedicate themselves to keeping the Spirit of 76 a reality, and not an outworn shibboleth.

ONE MAN'S Opinion . . .

It's going to be a long, frustrating and confusing campaign this year for Columbus voters. Council's decision to put the Urban Renewal bond issue on the ballot won't help matters.

On the other hand, Mayor M. E. Sensenbrenner's proposal to keep the issue off the ballot would have created a severe financial dilemma within the Urban Renewal Department.

Ryan

The "man in the middle" is Patrick Phelan, Urban Renewal director. He agrees with the mayor that the ballot chances of the $6 million UR bond issue will be hurt because of the controversy over council's voted-bond plan for sewer expansion. But, he does not relish the thought of an almost certain financial crisis if the UR bond issue is further delayed.

The 7-0 vote by council in starting the UR issue toward the ballot indicates that the 6-1 Republican council [illegible] have no difficulty overriding an executive veto of the resolution. Actually, nobody really expected Sensenbrenner to veto the measure. With council initiating the action, the mayor can press the solons to give strong vocal backing to the measure when they campaign.

The UR proposal was part of a six-issue package presented to voters last fall. The other five passed. The Metropolitan Committee and virtually every other major civic group lent support to the full package. There seems little reason to believe that general support for the UR will be less this year than it was in 1964.

The big question, of course, hinges on the effect the two bond issues will have on each other when one has wide support and the other is controversial. Hopefully, the voting public will take the time required to be well informed on each issue. Each should be judged on individual merit.

The sewer issue shapes up as a tough, bitter political battle. This is too bad, because the public generally comes out the loser when strict political partisanship guides basic approaches.

When the first recommendation of the city's sewer consultant called for a 55 percent raise in sewer rates, council members thought this too extreme. The consultant readjusted his calculations to include new features of note and bond financing.

His final alternates included a 30 to 35 percent sewer rate hike for a 10-year, $62.5 million program, or an approximate 24 percent hike for a five-year sewer program of $42.5.

At the opposite end of the consulant's original 55 percent rate hike suggestion is council's total bonding plan which would cost substantially more in the long run, but avoid an immediate rate increase.

It would seem that the council plan should be subject to reasonable and honorable compromise. But politics and politicians being what they are, it is this writer's guess that the public had better be prepared to separate a little fact from a lot of fiction.—FRANK RYAN.

'THE GRIST'
Ground Out by Dusty Miller

FRIEND — I come to praise C. Carlton Hartley, not to bury him. This is an encomium, not an obituary; an epigraph, not an epitaph; a "hello" not a "goodby."

As a working newspaperman, a neighbor and kindred soul I saw him, with a rare coordination of mind, heart and soul, prove possible the impossible, and conquer the unconquerable.

Dusty

The ancient philosopher's demand was to "do with thy might what thy hands find to do." The Master stressed the commandments, to love God and neighbor. The prophet Micah reduced the Lord's requirements to being just, kind and humble.

By a selfless, signal service to church, club and community Carlton Hartley responds to the demand, keeps the commandments and meets the requirements.

"Take it easy, now, Carl," a multitude urges.

He won't. He can't. He shouldn't.

He will be busier than he ever was, going about doing good.

The loveliest thing about his lovely country home is the lovely people who live in it.—Dusty Miller.

Summer Blight

Don't Throw It - - Bag It

As the travel season gains momentum and millions of families take to the highways, we should pause and consider how we may assist in retaining the natural beauty of the American countryside.

The President called a "White House Conference on Natural Beauty" in Washington. A program was suggested to bring about "citizen action and public education to stop the increasing ugliness of the American environment."

One of the major blights on the landscape is litter.

Litterbugs cost Americans a billion dollars a year, according to Keep America Beautiful, Inc., the national anti-litter organization.

Taxpayers foot half this bill, through the cost of cleaning up streets, highways, beaches, parks and other public areas, while the other half is paid by business, industry and individuals in the form of losses and expenses attributable to litter.

"Property values decline in a littered neighborhood, and littered highways drive away tourists," Allen H. Seed, Jr., KAB's executive vice-president stated. "Litter is not only an aesthetic offense and a menace to health and safety, but is also bad for business."

The prevention of litter to Keep America Beautiful should be the objective of all thinking Americans.

There is only one letter difference in the words "litterbug" and "litterbag." But there's a whale of a difference between being the former and using the latter.

An Editor's Outlook . . . by Jenkin Lloyd Jones

Don't Measure Education By Degrees

The world could use a thinkometer — a device for measuring human brain-power. It might consist of two electrodes, one for each ear, and a galvanometer with a needle that would point to Perfect, Potent, Passable, Punk or Putrid.

So far, no such gizmo has appeared and we are reduced to trying to assess thinkability by a number of suspicious devices that sometimes give a wholly wrong result.

One, which is currently ruining undergraduate education in America, is the effort to judge professors by what they have published. The rationale is that this permits deans to see which professors are really thinking and which are just putting in time. The trouble is that deans rarely have time to read these efforts, which is often lucky for the deans. But the scribbling prof gets the promotion, and a born teacher can be discouraged and sometimes even fired.

Jenkin

Another peculiar index of professional excellence is the research fellowship. America is busting with foundations set up by the bequests of industrial tycoons who generally didn't finish high school. And the foundations have chucked so many research grants around that any professor with a little pull who would rather doodle around a laboratory than meet classes or grade papers has a cinch. The result is that in the great universities more and more quiz sections are being taught by graduate "assistants" who are usually just one chapter ahead of the class. No wonder students riot and carry dirty signs.

But, of all these idiotic efforts to measure brain-power, none has been so abused as the graduate degree. Four out of five of this year's Ivy League seniors will enter graduate school in September. Although regular college enrollment in America has doubled since 1955, the enrollment in graduate schools has gone up twice as fast. The theory is that if you don't have at least a masters you're still in kindergarten.

Some of this rush is an effort to stay in school until one is beyond draft age. Young men who do that are naturals for angry "teach-ins" on Viet Nam. Others are comfortable in a college environment, have no money worries, and hate to cut the umbilical cord. One callow Cornell youth is quoted in the June 11 issue of LIFE magazine as follows:

"No matter what I do, I'll be making 25 or 35 thousand dollars a year when I get out of graduate school, because by that time I'll be about 30 and I'll probably be married and have a couple of kids and they'll have to pay me that much because I'll need it."

There's an eye-blinker for those of us who got out of college in the early 1930's and tramped around looking for 20 bucks a week.

Employers are largely at fault for promoting degree fever. The vast federal bureaucracy is an uncritical hirer of men in open robes. And private industry, which should know better, often thinks it gains status if it starts interviewing men at the masters level.

In arts and letters, and inexact sciences such as education and sociology, the value of many graduate degrees is debatable. Masters theses on file in a southwestern university include such titles as: "The Organization and Administration of a Girl Scout Day Camp near Nacogdoches," "The Problem of Communication in the Primary Sunday School," "The Effect of Weight Training on the Vertical Jump of Secondary School Basketball Players," and "A Study of Neiman-Marcus Advertising in The Dallas Morning News."

There is beginning to be a suspicion that the academic establishment, fearful of cheapening the cash value of its own graduate degrees, sometimes harasses graduate students beyond the limits of intellectual discipline in an effort to discourage them.

A highly articulate young lady in east Texas recently wrote me a long letter describing how her dean told her that a system had been set up to test the graduate student's "frustration level" to insure that only dedicated scholars got degrees.

In her case, she said, the frustration level was a honey. Her six advisers quarreled with each other over the thesis index, the headings, even the weight of the paper. And after four semesters, during which her professors kept getting "new insights" requiring her to repeatedly rewrite her work, she gave up.

A university president in Wisconsin told me angrily this month that deans sometimes delay the approval of graduate students' theses for a semester or two so that they can get free use of the students as laboratory assistants. And a sad lady in New York State has sent me her rejected masters thesis on art. It is a fine job, maintaining that art is communication, and that where daubs and squiggles don't mean anything to intelligent viewers, they probably don't mean anything at all. Her thesis board, composed of squiggiers, threw it out as "unscientific."

We have gone degree crazy in America. Employers had better not overlook the kid who grabs his bachelor's and can't wait to get off his old man's back and come to grips with the world. Such a lad, rather than the academic hothouse flower, is most likely to make a future Chairman of the Board.

Build A Sense Of Inward Sanctities

In our day no training of our children, whether in our homes or anywhere else, would matter much which does not put at the very heart of its teaching a respect for life's inner sanctities.

Rules and regulations are necessary; discipline, admonition and rebukes are a part of the machinery of the home, but the one abiding service which we can render our children is to put deep into their consciousness the realization that in themselves and not in external forces is something sacred.

Rev. Sanders

As a parent I know that the time will come when external supports which we have tried to build will fall away and admonitions we have given will be forgotten. Then, something deeper will have to take over, and I trust it will be a sensitive taste about the fine things of life which will love good and will shrink from evil.

It is for this reason that calling down upon young people the wrath of the moral law does so little good. This does not mean that moral law has no value. Chaos would exist without it.

A bullet may leap from the rifle with such force that one would think that it would defy gravity. For all its speed, however, it will fall. So moral wildness will not escape moral law.

We know that, but strenuous insistence on that fact does not cure the situation. The deeper hurdle is not that we lack knowledge of external penalties; we sometimes lack a sense of respect for inner sanctities. Essential to personal growth and maturity is a sense of possessing something inwardly fine which must not and cannot be desecrated.

One thing we can say with reasonable assurance, religion has taught men to respect life's inner sanctities.

In any land, at any time in history religion has always been saying something about "This must not be desecrated." It may be only a painted stick, or a hideous idol, it may be an altar red with sacrificial blood; yet even in its crude and often cruel form, religion has kept alive the consciousness of something in human life which must not be desecrated.

I believe that one of the problems of our day is the maintenance of a high estimate of the worth of a person against the devastating effects of a materialistic world.

Sometimes our children say of us: "You just don't understand us. You never were young like we are." And it's true! The world in which our children live is not a world similar to the one in which we lived as children. We have no idea what it is to be "young" as children are "young" today.

The end result of materialism is to strip all sanctity from life, reduce everything to the activity of physical atoms, make human spirits helpless cogs in a gigantic machinery, and in the end to present a picture of humanity born of dust and doomed to dust without spiritual destiny. Except in time of deep trouble some people often think that religion is negligible. The fact is that religion is still fighting the battle sanctity, indispensable in human life and more important in this our day than ever.

I am persuaded that in the heart of many a man, smothered by the awesome pressures of business, and unsuspected by acquaintances is to be found a hidden shrine. There's something in life concerning which every man feels a profound sense of sacredness. And sometimes this hidden shrine, which seems so uninfluential, asserts itself with overwhelming power.

Why is it that some men find it impossible to sin? Why — when the lower passions within him gain control of his body can he not give vent to them and be at peace with the beast within? I think it's more than inhibition. I think it's more than the puritanical background from which he comes. I'm convinced that it is the hidden shrine in him that rises up.

One thing is the business of religion: to lay its hand upon life's holy places and insist that they shall not be desecrated.

THE OTHER SIDE
Of The Story

By ROBERT W. REIDER

Whenever any newspaper — weekly or daily — brings in new faces or indicates the slightest shift in format a certain amount of public reaction can be expected.

The stepping down of Carlton Hartley from his long-time role as publisher of The Spectator quite appropriately triggered some questions.

It was only natural. The Spectator's acceptance in 125,000 homes gives it a quasi-public status. Every week thousands of households in Greater Columbus welcome The Spectator as an old family friend.

This unique and cherished position didn't just happen, of course. It was solidly built over a period of years. The Spectator's news and advertising columns are read regularly with a trust accorded only a valued member of the inner family circle.

Its reputation for independence, [illegible] and objective reporting has provided a refreshing contrast for many from the opinion-slanted news columns that have characterized Columbus daily papers.

This makes The Spectator even more conscious of its public responsibility to tell both sides, to deal fairly and squarely with all.

The Spectator's news columns in the future — as they have in the past — will continue to be strictly objective and uncolored by opinions or innuendoes. We intend to give people nothing but plain, unadulterated facts.

This does not mean we don't believe in expressing our opinions. Every newspaper owes its readers an interpretation of public issues. Every newspaper ought to stand up and be counted on civic questions. But opinions should be labeled as such or restricted to the editorial page where the reader clearly will not confuse opinion with fact.

Greater Columbus is growing . . . and growing fast. It will grow even faster with the help of a vigorous voice on vital public issues and with a paper that holds its news columns open to both sides of every story.

That's the lofty community role envisioned for The Spectator today . . . and tomorrow.

Watch us grow . . . right along with a hustling, bustling, greater Columbus!

Frosting on the Cake
BY "UNCLE DOC" ROSS — U.S.A.

Little League baseball is now in season. With school out and thousands of urban kids foot loose and bursting with healthy energy, something has to be used as a safety valve.

Little League ball is already a violently divided subject. There are basic facts which merit emphasis:

1. Boys who have a natural itch to play ball are legion. Coaches who are properly trained in physical education have the right to use Little League ball as a "tool of leadership" which fills an important vacuum all summer.

2. There are many hazards to be considered in any organized recreation. Boys who cannot pass a basic physical examination should have the whole business explained to them with patience and utter kindness.

3. Coaches and managers will look for trouble if they do not make it clear to parents that Little League baseball is not a "glory grabbing" activity for Mom and Pop.

4. Coaches who have at least a bachelor's degree in physical education are most desirable. Such training enables them to work with the boy's family physician in safeguarding boys who are below par for their age in muscular control and coordination.

5. The behavior of crowds at such events is of great importance. All such games should be policed by off-duty officers who are lovers of kids.

6. Games should be umpired by at least semi-professionals so that careless and stupid decisions are kept to a minimum.

7. Short bases and innings are essential. Many a boy with a naturally "good arm" is ruined by strain.

FREEDOM'S FOUNDERS

The signing of our Declaration of Independence is a familiar story. But few know of the fate of the signers afterward. Of the 56, here is what happened to a few.

John Hancock lost his property after he had written to George Washington, "Burn Boston and make John Hancock a beggar if the public good demands it."

Thomas Nelson, Jr., destroyed his own home at Yorktown with artillery fire, then financed the Allied French fleet with the rest of his goods. He was buried a pauper in an unmarked grave.

Virginia's Carter Braxton lost his ships to the British and his plantation to post-war inflation.

Richard Stockton's home was reduced to scorched earth by the British; he suffering as a prisoner until he died a pauper within five years.

George Walton, Thomas Heyward Jr., Edward Rutledge and Arthur Middleton were all captured.

Thomas Lynch Jr. lost his health in the army to swamp fever and was lost at sea in 1779.

John Hart lost his 400 acres and his 13 children were scattered. His wife died while he hid a year in a cave from the British.

Francis Hopkinson with his family barely escaped the British, but lost his home.

William Ellery, George Clymer, Lewis Morris, Lyman Hall and Button Gwinnet all lost their property. Others worked themselves to death.

Thomas Jefferson and John Adams died on the 50th anniversary of the Declaration.

Charles Carroll of Carrollton was the last to die at 95, six years later. He had put the name of his home after his name so the British could have found him quickly for hanging had the cause been lost.

It says here . . . .

Heroes are sometimes found out of uniform, too.

STRICTLY FRESH

Heredity is something people believe in if they have a bright child.

In politics, and in life in general, people seem to be much more clear about what they are against than what they are for.

If the postman rings more than twice these days, there's probably another cent due on your letter.

Overheard in a crowded elevator: "I'm not strictly a 'yes man' to my boss. When he says 'no,' I say 'no' too."

The trouble with bucket seats is that not everyone has the same size bucket.

Why I'm Skeptical About Guarantees

By ADELINE DALEY

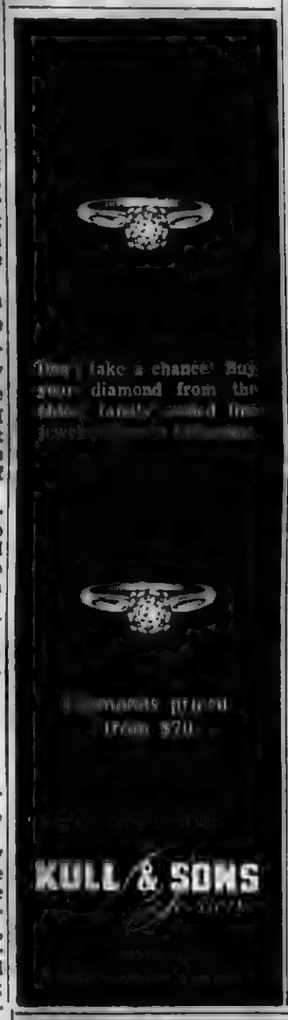
From past experience we have learned to be somewhat skeptical about the "guarantees" which come with items purchased for this particular household. Particularly when we read the fine print, "not responsible for damages resulting from improper handling, over-use or abuse."

That means, I guess, that the manufacturers are not liable for anything that happens after you take it out of the box.

Nor do I have much confidence in the affidavit which pledges to replace any and all components which might become broken during the length of the warranty — except plastic parts and the electrical cord, which, by a great coincidence, are the only parts which ever wear out.

Then there is the "unconditional" guarantee which sounds as binding as Lee surrendering to Grant at Appomattox — the hitch being that the parts are replaced free, but you pay for the installation. This amounts to receiving a 27 cent bolt without charge but paying $17.50 for labor.

As you might suspect, too, most guarantees are timed to expire the day before the appliance becomes inoperable. Not that anything we buy ever comes close to outliving the warranty. We automatically cut in half the length of time they're supposed to last. In the case of a "lifetime" guarantee, we figure that this is meant to apply to the life expectancy of a Mediterranean fruit fly.



Most of the time, moreover, it's too inconvenient and costly to take advantage of the guarantee. Take, for instance, our "unbreakable" dishes. (Incidentally, we're the only family in America which broke an entire set in six months.) You're supposed to wrap the pieces and send them to the factory with an explanation.

The latest "guarantee" to prove valueless is the verbal one issued by the salesman at the furniture store who assured us that the red leather chair we purchased would last until our future grandchildren and their children would be romping on it.

Granted, the salesman meant "normal" use, not the wear it has received as a part-time slide and trampoline by our kids and a place for the dog to bury his bones. But I didn't expect it to fall apart faster than our other pieces (and I do mean pieces) of furniture.

Inevitably, the store suggested we mail it back to the factory — 3,000 miles away. I would, if I could send the salesman back with it. I'd even pay for the extra postage.

It takes a great deal of elevation of thought to produce a little evaluation of life.—Ralph Waldo Emerson

Communities Plan Independence Day Celebrations

At least 21 communities in the Spectator area will be sponsoring Fourth of July celebrations on one or more days over the long holiday weekend beginning tomorrow evening, July 2, and lasting until Monday evening, July 5. The communities include:

Ashville

The Ashville Community Club will sponsor its annual Fourth of July celebration on four days (July 2, 3, 4 and 5).

There'll be night attractions on July 2 and 3, with famous Nolan rides, shows, games, round and square dancing. Also on the 2nd, two contests, selecting Little Miss and Little Mr. Ashville Fourth.

A bathing beauty contest will be staged Saturday, July 3, for girls 16 and older. She'll be the "Queen of Celebration!"

The big parade will be held Monday, July 5.

And, during all four days, it'll be Ashville's famous fish fry with tons of fresh fish shipped in from Lake Erie and deep-fried.

Free parking and picnic facilities are available in the community park.

Chicago First Stop On Philmont Trek

Ed. Note: Following is the first report from 53 Central Ohio Explorer and Boy Scouts and their leaders who left June 25 for Philmont National Scout Ranch, Cimarron, N. Mex. Traveling by train, the boys are seeing Chicago and Denver on the way.

BY STEVE SCHUSTER
And RICHARD ALMAY
Spectator Philmont Reporters

Our group of 47 scouts and six adults arrived in Chicago early Saturday morning after an all-night railroad ride from Columbus.

On a Grey Lines tour in Chicago, our first stop was downtown where we were shown how buildings are built above the water so that boats can be moored underneath them.

The "Marina Tower Apartments" stands over 500 feet high and can hold 200 boats drydocked and 70 boats in the water. Our next stop was the navy pier where we were allowed to go atop the promenade deck and watch a Norwegian freighter being loaded by experienced deck hands. We drove to the "Aquarium" where we saw many rare fish. Each different kind of fish is in a tank with water exactly like the water the fish was caught in. The Aquarium is located right next to the Yacht Club where we were able to watch the large ships go to the Navy pier and the small boats go to the Yacht Club.

We then left for the Museum of Science and Industry. It is a lot larger than our own Museum of Science and Industry. The one in Chicago has about five floors and many participation exhibits. A few of the things that really interested the scouts were: the coal mine, a model of a coal mine that went down 70 feet. The mine took three years to build and is very authentic; the submarine U-505, a real German submarine that had full operating controls; the communications exhibit featuring telephones past, present and future. A picture-phone display was set up so that scouts would be able to see themselves and their friends. An exhibit showed how telephone messages will soon travel on beams of light.

Next, we drove to Chinatown and saw many famous hotels and homes in the older part of Chicago. In Chinatown we were allowed to go souvenir shopping and visit a store. From there we drove through the University of Chicago where a child can start in kindergarten and go until he graduates with a degree from the same school many years later. As we drove around through the city the driver pointed out many old statues, one of which I'm sure we'll all remember. It was called the "Fountain of Time." It showed the evolution of man in 80 figures. Both the good and bad men were shown on either side. The statue is located in Washington Park and was created by Chicago's famous sculptor Lorado Taft.

We also saw the tomb of Stephen A. Douglas, famous Illinois debater. During a walk downtown we witnessed a civic demonstration. That evening we boarded the Denver Zephyr for Denver.

We had dinner aboard the train traveling 70 mph across Illinois. Our evening was spent viewing the lights of small towns from the vista-dome and visiting many groups of Philmont-bound boys from Detroit and Baltimore.

Senior Girl Scouts Train For Roundup

EDITOR'S NOTE: Cheryl Porter, 2264 Crescent-dr, will represent The Spectator as its official correspondent at the 1965 Senior Girl Scout Roundup, which will be held July 15 to 28, in Farragut, Idaho. This is the second of a series of articles on the roundup.

By CHERYL PORTER

The 1965 Senior Girl Scout Roundup is drawing closer. Fifty-four Senior Girl Scouts will make their tent home in Farragut, Idaho, for two weeks from July 15 to 28.

It all started a year ago in June when many applications were submitted to the local Girl Scout office.

The girls had to fill out two long applications, then pass through two extensive rating sessions. These girls were judged on their knowledge of camping skills, how well they worked together, and on their own personal achievements and qualifications. From all those who applied, 54 girls were chosen to represent the Seal of Ohio Girl Scout Council. This was the beginning of a most exciting experience.

Cheryl

This council is sending six patrols of eight Senior Scouts each. The seventh patrol is an international group, consisting of six local girls and two Girl Guides from Trinidad.

The patrol of eight girls is the basic unit. It must function as a complete cooperative group with one girl chosen as leader. The patrol stands on its own during all activities before Roundup until it merges with three other patrols and an adult advisor to form a troop at Roundup.

At least twice a month for the past year, the girls have gotten together working on skills, packing equipment, planning meals and inviting guests, discussing patrol sites and activities and brushing up on the histories of Idaho and Ohio.

A new project is to be established at this Roundup which will involve all levels of scouting — Brownies, Juniors, Cadettes and Seniors. The campers going to Roundup will visit as many different troops as possible to find out what the "Promise in Action" means to the girls.

This will catch the spirit of the theme of Roundup and the Girl Scout 1963-66 triennium period. A record of ideas gathered is kept by each girl and will be discussed at Roundup.

The project ends when campers return to the same troops visited earlier to share the knowledge of what the "Promise in Action" means to Girl Scouts and Girl Guides all over the world.

Shakedown Weekend was the final campout with all patrols of the Seal of Ohio Council participating. Final criticisms and corrections were made to insure that the Ohio Scouts will do their best.

Public Speaking Contest Set By County 4-H Clubs

Entrants in the Franklin County 4-H Public Speaking Contest, Wednesday, July 7, 7 p.m. at the Youth Center on Ohio Exposition Grounds will be vying for a chance at the state awards.

The medals, a wristwatch, a chest of table silver and opportunity to try for a $500 scholarship are provided by the Pure Oil Company.

According to Thomas J. McNutt of the Cooperative Extension Service, scores of 4-H Club boys and girls have been helped to overcome shyness, stage fright, inability to talk before groups and lack of self-confidence through the 4-H public speaking program.

Further information on the contest may be obtained from McNutt, telephone 469-5595.

The Spectator BUSINESS REVIEW AND FORECAST

Central Savings Adds 'On-Line' Accounting

Central Savings and Loan Co. customers will be getting faster financial service through use of modern electronic data processing equipment, beginning Jan. 1, 1966.

Walter F. Heer, Sr., president of the firm, announced that five IBM remote teller terminals will be installed in the branch offices and the main office of the company.

"Major advantage of this modern installation to our customers is faster window service," according to Heer.

"Tellers will not have to perform bookkeeping functions, nor will they need to pull ledger cards or walk away from windows. Instead, they will merely accept passbooks, insert them into the terminals —and the computer will do the rest. Tellers will be freed for more personalized service."

Heer also said the terminals are designed to handle such tasks as savings and mortgage loan accounting for financial institutions. They are used at Central's teller windows to relay savings transactions to the central computer for processing.

Heer stressed that the IBM computer and the teller terminals were selected after intensive research and study.

"One of the most important functions of the computer will be as a management tool," he said. "Besides greatly increasing the speed and efficiency in the handling of savings transactions, the computer is used for a number of accounting functions, including the preparation of trial balances, doing general accounting, performing daily dividend calculations, payroll and compiling statistical information.

"But, perhaps more important, the IBM computer will permit us to keep pace with the mounting workload and at the same time hold operating costs to a minimum."

Central Savings and Loan is one of the first institutions of its kind to install the on-line teller terminal system. All of Central's savings accounts are stored in the system, which has a capability of handling five times as many accounts. Each window machine can transmit information to the computer at the rate of 14.8 characters per second.

Founded in 1889, Central today has assets in excess of $19 million.

Summer Jobs Waiting For Girls

Penty of jobs are available this summer for girls just out of high school or home from college on vacation, according to George Dewey, manager of the local office of Manpower, Inc., international temporary help service.

"Business firms need replacements for vacationing personnel. Many of the women ordinarily available for temporary work must stay home with their children during the summer," Dewey said. "This means that they're out of the labor market just when they're needed."

Dewey said that Manpower currently is conducting a recruiting program to line up qualified girls for summer assignments. Minimum age is 18.

Girls seeking work as typists or stenographers are given tests to determine what type of assignments they're capable of handling. Jobs for those without office skills include survey work.

"Many firms will accept inexperienced people if they are seriously interested in working," Dewey pointed out. "Temporary help services like Manpower fit the girl to the job so that she has every opportunity to work at her highest level of capability."

OHIOANS ACTIVE IN STOCK MARKET

SHAREOWNERSHIP in the North Central Region rose by more than 600,000 from 1962 to 1965, making it the biggest shareowner area in the nation with 5.2 million — more than one-fourth of the nation's 20.1 million investors. Included in the region is the center of the nation's shareowning population, Vandalia, Ill., indicated here by New York Stock Exchange President Keith Funston. The map of the U.S. shows what the nation might look like with the size of each state adjusted to reflect the relative importance of its shareowning population. Metropolitan Columbus has an estimated 66,500 shareowners, an increase of 12,500, or 23 percent, over the 1962 exchange census. One out of 13 persons in the local metropolitan area is a shareowner.

FUN FARM IS PACKED WITH OLD AND NEW 'DOWN ON THE FARM' THRILLS

THE DAYS WHEN mom and dad packed the kids off for a summer vacation on Uncle John's farm may be fast disappearing, but only a few minutes from downtown Columbus is a real farm fun-packed with enough extra thrills for the kids — as well as mom and dad — to make Uncle John kick the barn door with envy. Paul and Blonda Ledue, who created Old McDonald's Fun Farm at 9680 W. Broad-st, have packed it with entertainment for the whole family. As a starter, there are all the usual farm animals including ducks, goats, chickens, rabbits, kittens, puppies and the larger animals. There's the old apple orchard where a kid can "swipe" an apple, a life-size plastic cow that doesn't kick and can be milked just like Old Bessie. Above, Carolyn Coleman "hits the pail" while brother Brent shares an interest with one of the barn pups. There's a fishin' creek where they bite, a trail for hiking, a tree-house. There's a Conestoga wagon for a Sunday ride, real as the one in "Wagon Train." And an honest-to-goodness stage coach for a family trip through "Indian Territory" which is a favorite with Carolyn and Brent, brother Steve, their mother Phyllis (rear seat) and Mrs. Ledue. There is a picnic area and snacks available while resting before finishing the fun. And there's plenty more fun. An old western corral with real horses and ponies to ride, a flop-eared burro if you prefer. An old school room for play instead of study, an antique museum packed with horse-drawn sleds, buggies, hand-powered washing machines and farm tools. A recently added thrill is the train which young engineers and firemen, like Brent and Steve, like to ride as well as practice their "roundhouse" skill. The train, installed as a concession by Mrs. Coleman, will be named the "Hi-C Express." (She was the W. Jeff winner of $25,000 in the Hi-C contest last year). Sure to interest the tiny ones are the Three Little Pigs and the huffin' and puffin' Big Bad Wolf. For others there is a hay tunnel, a hay jump, a merry-go-round and airplane rides. Then, there is the Mystery Barn, where the skin tingles while you creep through the Maze of Confusion, gasp at the House of Horrors, and walk crookedly through the Mystery Room while gravity grabs you with a powerful, unseen hand. For the whole family there is continuous entertainment from 1 to 9 p.m. on Sunday by well-known movie, radio, TV and Decca Record stars of the Grand Ole Opry. Featured this weekend will be Jimmy Dickens and Duke Paducah whose latest movie has been showing locally. Paul and Blonda Ledue, who have created this local attraction, are known to thousands through their Frosty Follies Ice Show which performs at county fairs in Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and Michigan.

Boy Scout Reservations Open For Eight-Week Session

TENDERFOOT KNOTS are being worked on here by Hugh Miller Jr. of Troop 210, sponsored by First Alliance Church in Upper Arlington. Scouts receive a bead toward the totem award for being able to tie all five tenderfoot knots in less than 40 seconds. The five knots are square knot, clove hitch, two half-hitches, bowline and sheet bend. Rope racks such as the one Hugh is working on are at all three of the scoutcraft areas at Camp Lazarus, along with facilities for axe-sharpening, tin can cookery and other scoutcraft activities.

By CARL JAPIKSE

It was "goodby city and hello out-of-doors" last week as hundreds of scouts, scouters and counselors converged on the Boy Scout reservations "Camp Lazarus," near Delaware, O., and Camp "Greenhills," near Logan, for the first period in an eight-week summer camp program at both of the camps.

Most of the Columbus area scouts attending camp this summer will go to Lazarus, while Greenhills will draw troops from the southern areas of the Central Ohio Council, which operates both camps.

The main difference between the two camps is that scouts attending Greenhills cook all of their meals themselves over an open fire, while those attending Lazarus receive most of their meals in the mess hall. They do cook out for all three meals on Thursdays, however.

Other than that, the programs offered at the two camps are basically the same, with scouts participating in riflery, archery, nature projects, canoeing, boating, swimming, scoutcraft and other activities.

But older scouts who have attended Camp Lazarus before are encountering a new look to the camp and new approach to the program offered there.

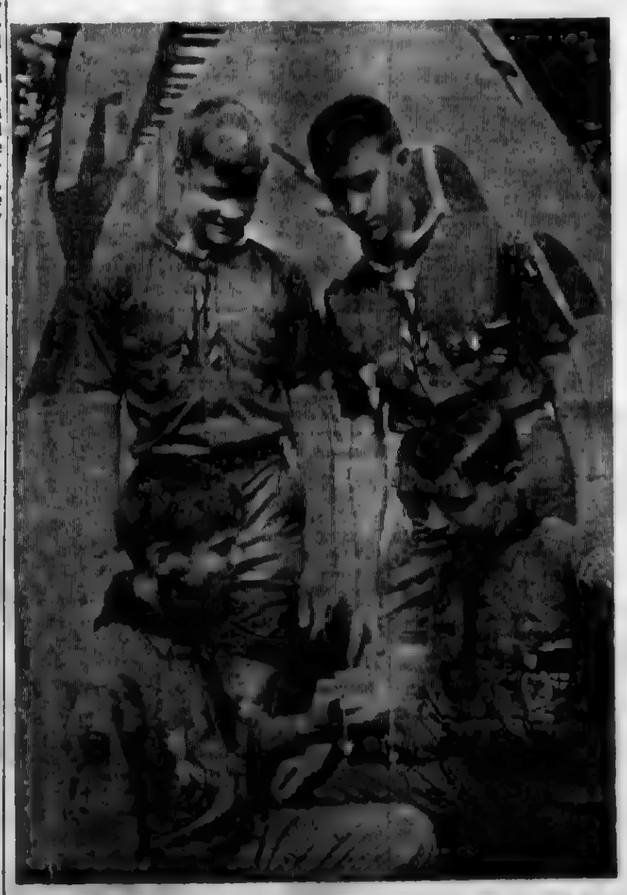
Physically, the reservation has undergone a face-lifting, producing in many respects a new camp. Gone are the old longhouses, the upper lake and the shelterhouses. Recently built are a new dining hall, new scoutcraft and nature areas, a shower house, a new archery range and new campsites.

Canoeing is on the Olentangy River, since the upper lake sprang a leak and drained out. Three new trails have been blazed, totaling six miles for troops and patrols to hike.

The program has changed, too. Emphasis is on patrol camping, with the patrol leaders in charge instead of the camp counselors. All scouts are camping in tents, instead of the longhouses used for many years by most of the troops.

Less emphasis is placed on formal advancement, although merit badges are still offered and counselors will still help boys on their second and first class requirements.

Scouts are now urged to try to complete the totem award in the week they are at camp. This award is designed to stimulate the scout's interest in working on the formal advancement, and many of the requirements for the award do correspond with requirements for rank advancement.



Now, more than ever before, the theme of summer camp at Lazarus is not that of rigid class instruction on scouting, but just having a good time in the out-of-doors, following the scouting principles, which is the reason most of the boys go to camp.

A SCOUT IS HUNGRY is said by many observers of boys to be the "13th" point of the Scout Law, and for this reason the Central Ohio Council built this new mess hall as part of its recent building program. The mess hall, with a seating capacity for up to 250 boys is located across from the new parking lot along the entrance to the camp. The new dining area is just part of the $750,000 building program by the council, which includes a shower house at the pool, a new shelter house and new water supplies at the campsites at Lazarus, and a new pool, new campsites and several buildings at the council's other summer camp, Greenhills, near Logan.

FLAMES LEAP UPWARD as the three patrol leaders of Troop 166 from Bexley light the fire to open the campfire on parents' night at Camp Lazarus. Each of the 10 troops at the camp held its own campfire for parents that night. Campfires naturally differed from troop to troop, but most of them included songs, skits and some scouting pageantry in the opening and closing ceremonies. Troop 166 held its program in the camp's council ring, which was near where they camped, but most of the troops held their campfires in their own campsites. From left to right, the three patrol leaders placing the torches in the fire are Howard Barnebey, leader of the Panther patrol; Larry Peters, leader of the Woodsmen, and Wayne Morone, patrol leader for the Eagles. In the background at the left is Jeff Macklin, assistant senior patrol leader in the troop and emcee for the campfire.

boating or canoeing, axe-sharpening, nature, tin can cookery, hiking, camp improvement and handicraft. The scouts in the picture to the right are busy on a camp improvement project for a head, building a tripod for their lantern. Putting the finishing touches on the lashings is Steve Wilson, center, helped by Peter Thirtyacre and David Matyskiela. All three scouts are from Troop 131, sponsored by Civitan, New Reno.

Pioneer Tools On Display At Metro Parks

The Columbus Metropolitan Parks have been given a collection of primitive hand tools, old-time cast iron cooking utensils and home appliances that are reminisent of pioneer days in the Ohio backwoods.

The collection was donated by Donald McBeth, retired Ohio farmer who lives near Kingston in Ross County.

The crude hand tools, McBeth feels, will be of interest to many children who explore the forest trails in the parks and see first hand the wilderness as it was found by the first white settlers.

Included in the collection are hand-made wood-working tools the pioneers used when they cut the forest trees to clear the land and build their homes.

Taken as a whole, men will only devote their enthusiasm, their time, and their energy to matters in which their passions have a personal interest.—Alexis de Tocqueville

Gardens And Flowers

By JIM GRUETT

OUTDOORS — Those of us who enjoy growing vegetables are pleased with rapid development of tomatoes this season along with beans, peas, and beets. I have a number of friends living in apartments who have small porch garden boxes with one tomato plant and a small patch of lettuce or a few annual flowers. They gain much satisfaction from being able to grow flowers and plants even in this limited way. Seems most of us have a little green thumb ambition in us and what a wonderful thing this is in a world of electronic brains and rush living. No matter how hard we try, we find it hard to make a tomato plant grow faster than nature intended it to grow.

LAWNS — Watch for sod webworm activity which will start soon. Activity is noticeable as brown patches of chewed grasses amid otherwise green grass. Summer winds and dry weather necessitate an increase in lawn watering during this period.

CUT FLOWERS — Bouquets of cut flowers from your garden will last longer if stems are cut at an angle under water. Luke-warm water is better for most cut flowers.

YOUR FLORIST — Rollie Freeman, manager of Lulu Bell Florist, suggests that you wash the foliage of large house plants with warm water and a clean cloth outdoors. A dry towel can be used to dry and polish the leaves. Most green foliage plants have enough wax-like material in the leaf surfaces to shine brightly with a few strokes from a dry towel. You will notice the response from your plants after dust and grease films have been removed. Mr. Freeman advises against using cold water (which spots leaves), milk and household cleaners with ammonia. If you have questions or need advice about plants call Mr. Freeman at 224-8408.

Columbus NAA Will Unveil New OV-10A Prototype

North American Aviation's Columbus Division will unveil its new OV-10A counter-insurgency aircraft during formal rollout ceremonies Wednesday, July 7.

U. S. Navy Secretary Paul H. Nitze is scheduled to head a list of guest dignitaries representing the military, Federal government and Columbus.

Rollout ceremonies will spotlight the rugged little OV-10A, the first aircraft specifically designed for counter-insurgency and limited warfare applications.

The North American prototype is a twin engine turboprop with twin booms and a horizontal tail mounted high between two vertical tails. The fuselage is mounted under the wing and provides for pilot and observer seated in tandem well ahead of the propellers for unobstructed visibility.

A 111-cubic-foot cargo compartment in the fuselage can carry up to 2,200 pounds of assorted cargo, five paratroopers with full equipment, six combat equipped infantrymen, or two litter patients with medical attendant.

The OV-10A can also carry 3,600 pounds of external stores. One station is mounted underneath the fuselage, with the other four attached to removable sponsons, or stub wings. The sponsons also contain four fixed 7.62 mm machine guns with 2,000 rounds of ammunition.

Battelle To Figure In Search For 'New' Panama Canal

Battelle Memorial Institute, Columbus Laboratories, has been selected to plan studies to determine bio-environmental problems that might be encountered in constructing a sea level canal across the American isthmus by nuclear means and measures that would be necessary to protect the health and safety of the populace.

A cost-plus-fixed-fee contract for preparing the plans has been negotiated with the not-for-profit research organization by the Atomic Energy Commission's Nevada operations Office. The Nevada Operations Office is responsible for public safety in all AEC continental nuclear detonations and is seeing to the collection of safety information bearing on the feasibility of using nuclear excavation to construct a sea level interoceanic canal.

Battelle's Dr. Richard S. Davidson is director of the bio-environmental program. Key members of the program staff include: Glen Fuller, Dr. William E. Martin, Dr. F. Webster McBryde, Granville H. Sewell, Dr. Charles W. Townley and Dr. A. E. Waller.

The Atlantic-Pacific Interoceanic Canal Study Commission was appointed by the President in April to select a route and means of construction for a new sea level canal to replace the Panama Canal. The study being planned by Battelle is one of a number expected to be required by the Commission in its deliberations.

Florist Honored By Association

Honored last week for more than a quarter-century of unselfish service to florists and the floral industry, Leo McComb was presented with an Award For Faithful Service by the Columbus Allied Florists Association.

McComb, a charter member of the association, was first elected to serve on the board of directors in 1943. During World War II he devoted much of his time to forming the Florists Coop Delivery and worked tirelessly to help florists get their deliveries made during the war.

He was also instrumental in arranging the many Flower Shows held at City Hall before and after the war. McComb operates the McComb Greenhouses at 900 N. Hague-av.

FOOD MARKETS THIS WEEK

Watermelons Ripe! Corn On Way

THIS WEEK SHOP FOR:

Fruit — Watermelons, bananas, cantaloupes, plums, peaches.

Vegetables — Lettuce and other salad greens, carrots, cabbage, cucumbers, peppers, celery, summer squash.

Meat, Poultry — Beef "specials," broiler-fryers, eggs, wieners, cold cuts, ground beef, turkey rolls.

Other Foods — Dairy products, frozen fruit juices, picnic items.

There's a big, red, sweet watermelon waiting at the market for your July 4 menu — and plenty for everybody. The late spring watermelon crop is on the way. They eat fine.

Mrs. Franks

Homegrown roasting ears can go on your July 4 menu, also. Sweet corn harvest started on local farms this week, but the supply will be light at first—in heavy volume by July 20. You won't be disappointed in this early corn, for most of it is either Earliking or Spring Gold variety and they eat much better than the old Northern Star. And, much of it is hydrocooled at the farm to preserve its sweet flavor during marketing.

Fresh vegetable shopping gets easier by the week and prices are moving down. Homegrown vegetables on the increase are snap beans, beets, cabbage and summer squash. Fieldgrown tomatoes are more plentiful, harvest has started in southern Ohio and there will be good greenhouse tomatoes around until the end of the month.

Salad greens are excellent. So are radishes, onions, cucumbers and green peppers. California celery is better, coming now from the northern part of the state.

Fresh fruit prices are easing as summer fruits begin rolling to market in volume. There will be about three times more southern peaches this year than last, 27 percent more plums and more apricots. Cantaloupe supplies increase each week; the Arizona ones coming now are sweet and prices are lower. Grapes are reaching volume harvest and blueberries are excellent. Summer Lodi apples are coming in. They will be riper and plentiful by mid-July.

Don't miss the short season Ohio fruits — red tart cherries, black and red raspberries, gooseberries and currants. The first week of July is harvest time for these in northern Ohio.

Abundant supplies of frozen orange concentrate are available for the first time in several years. Heavy stocks bringing about an almost across-the-board special price.

At the meat counter, not much change is likely for beef and pork during the month. While live prices on cattle and hogs dropped slightly last week in response to consumer resistance to high retail prices, no great change in retail prices is expected until late summer—if then.

Poultry meat, eggs and dairy foods will continue to be budget-levelers during July. Although large eggs continue to be in fairly steady supply and price, medium and small ones are becoming more plentiful and some fine buys are available.

Council Support Firm For City-Market Lease

By FRANK RYAN

It now appears that only Columbus Service Director Warren J. Cremean could block an early agreement between the city and the Central Market Association on a lease agreement for a new Central Market at Mound and Fourth-sts.

Cremean has been instructed by council to negotiate, subject to council approval, a 50-year lease between the city and the merchants' group. Basic terms of the proposed lease include these main points:

The city would purchase a site for the new market house at a cost of about $134,000. The Central Market Association would be responsible for financing the building, with plans subject to approval by the Market-Mohawk developers — United Redevelopment Corp. The city would then lease the land to the association, with annual rental to be pegged at two percent of gross rentals charged by the association to building tenants.

Both Cremean and Mayor M. E. Sensenbrenner have said that they have several questions to resolve in negotiating any type of lease agreement. Both have stressed that protection of the city's interest will be paramount.

The plan has been roundly criticized from several quarters as a city subsidization of private enterprise. Among those opposed to the lease proposal are the Central Ohio Retail Grocers Association and the Development Committee for Greater Columbus. Importedly, the Columbus Area Chamber of Commerce will add its name in opposition as the result of a recommendation by a five member study committee.

Supporters of the plan — mainly among Central Market merchants and members of council—refute the "subsidy" charge by charging opponents with "talking out both sides of their mouths."

Council President William R. Fornof and Councilman Carl Kegelmayer both accused opponents of the proposed lease agreement of issuing contradictory statements. "They (opponents) argue on the one side that Central Market is a dying business, and on the other that a new Central Market will hurt other businesses," both said, and added: "Obviously both of these arguments cannot be valid at the same time."

Fornof charged that accounts of council's lease proposal have been purposely misinterpreted by both those who want the city to cut all ties with Central Market.

"If there had never been a Central Market, this council would never entertain the thought of (such) a contract," Fornof said. He added that he would not support the lease agreement unless there was assurance that the building could be adequately financed by the merchants who would use it.

He said that both the present and the past councils had indicated intent to assist in the relocation of the 117-year-old market.

"It has never ceased to amaze me," Fornof said, "where all this opposition was during the past seven or eight years, and, for that matter, for the past 117 years while the market has been operated by the city."

Fornof said it is important that people realize that the planned market site would be purchased with money the city will get from sale of the present market site. He said the city will realize at least a $72,000 profit from the difference between the sale of the present market land for $229,000 and planned purchase of the new site. This "profit," he said, would go to general revenue funds.

Fornof also pointed out that the Central Market Association has agreed to pay taxes on the new location if a lease is negotiated. Present market land is tax exempt.

Waiting On Estimates

Councilman Ronald DeVore, the prime mover of legislation to preserve the Central Market, says he expects favorable council action in six weeks to two months. "The only thing we are waiting on," he said, "is construction plans to be completed so we can get an estimate on building costs."

DeVore said he considered the lease agreement "a moral obligation" on the part of the city. He said he expects the Central Market Association to

Curb Stands Ordered 'In'

The Columbus Department of Health has issued orders to all sidewalk merchants in the Central Market area to get off the street or close their stands by the end of the month.

The order was issued by Dr. Robert C. Adams, environmental health director, who said it was timed to coincide with the end of the current licensing period on July 31. He said that license renewals will be granted only to those merchants who plan to join Central Market Association members in the planned move to a new market building.

Dr. Adams said the sidewalk merchants were told they must find space within the present market building, or within the market parking area. He said the end of the present licensing period is "a logical time" to make the order effective, because the existing market house will be torn down before the next licensing period expires.

The only sidewalk stands escaping the order will be those which face the sidewalk from the market house. Even these stands will be ordered "inside" when street and utility work begins. Contracts affecting the area will be awarded on July 12 and July 19.

A Central Market Association official said that members outside the building will be given first consideration for inside spaces. He said that some stalls would also be reserved for those whose stands face the sidewalk from within the market house.

On issuing the order, Dr. Adams said:

"Certainly for the last 10 years we have not allowed anyone to operate such stands anywhere else in the city. Month by month we have gone along with the market people, and each year it has gotten harder to justify with the restaurant and grocery operators, who must comply with all health and sanitation rules."

Dr. Adams expressed concern that continuance of licenses into the next licensing year would result in some sidewalk merchants remaining in business after organized merchants have moved into new quarters. "Some people," he said, "have indicated that even after the market house is torn down they would like to see some of the street stands remain. Certainly we don't think we would be justified in letting such stands continue."

He said the Health Department action is aimed at "those who are holding on until we force them to let go."

Health Commissioner Dr. Ollie M. Goodloe indicated complete accord with Dr. Adams' action. Asked if he thought the order would be enforced, he said: "I would hope so, and I would expect it to stand."

GAHANNA FIREFIGHTERS VICTORS IN '4TH' WATER BATTLE

GAHANNA WAS THE WINNER for the second year in the Whitehall annual July Fourth classic — the water battle between area fire departments. The field behind Robinwood Plaza was lined with cheering spectators Sunday as Reynoldsburg, Whitehall, Mifflin I and Mifflin II Departments battled with hundred-pound streams of water to drive the suspended bucket to their opponents' goal post. If the Gahanna team wins next year the revolving trophy will be theirs permanently. The day-long July 4 celebration, including parade, talent show, dance, games and contests, and carnival attractions, is sponsored annually in Whitehall by the Junior Chamber of Commerce of Eastern Columbus.

PRIVATE GARBAGE SURVEY DEFEATED

Whitehall Budget Proposed

A proposed $1,686,884.35 budget for 1966, that tops the current year's by about $175,000, was approved by Whitehall Council Tuesday night.

Major increases in the new budget are an approximate $70,000 hike in capital improvements fund, and $45,000 for police and fire departments.

Council also, by a four-to-three vote, defeated legislation to hire a private engineering firm to conduct an area-wide survey that would determine the feasibility of constructing a garbage incinerator.

The city has already paid $870, its proportionate share in the county survey. Cost of the private study would be $12,000, to be paid for by federal funds. Whitehall would assume the cost only if the city implemented the survey.

Voting "no" on the proposal were Lester K. Ballinger, Raymond Shipley, Roger Stahley and Marvin Levine.

Economy was cited as the reason for their vote. They questioned spending federal money needlessly, "If we are dissatisfied with the county survey we can have our own survey done at that time," one councilman said.

Legislation was also approved to proceed for the long-delayed plan of extending Langley-av from Rosemore-av to Country Club-rd.

A companion resolution was approved to acquire land needed for construction of the street extension.

Council also approved increasing the police force to 21 patrolmen from the current 17, and adopted a resolution to proceed with placing a $770,000 bond issue on the ballot in November for the construction of a recreation center.

A resolution requesting the Department of Liquor Control to restrict further issuance of liquor permits in Whitehall was sent to committee for study.

Unique School-Park Planned At Maybury

Plans are now being prepared for the development of a school-park site at the Maybury Elementary location, as part of a unique program by Columbus and the city's School Board to more completely utilize park and school land for community recreation.

Under the program, a small park site adjacent to a school location is developed in such a manner as to incorporate existing school playground and restroom facilities into an overall recreational plan.

The cooperative policy, designed to stretch tax dollars by making possible a wider enjoyment of public facilities, is being illustrated at the Barnett School - Recreation Center complex (on Barnett-rd north of Livingston-av.

The new elementary was completed last fall, and a large recreation center is now under construction immediately south of the building.

Both were designed to be compatible in architecture and building material, and when completed, will share certain facilities.

The gymnasium in the recreation center will be available for use of the school, and school classrooms will be used in the evenings for arts and crafts instruction.

Maybury is one of four school-park sites now in the planning stage by the city's Division of Parks and Forestry and the Recreation Commission.

Columbus School Board Tuesday reaffirmed its policy of cooperating in the program by updating its code to permit the Recreation Commission to install playground equipment, or utilize school land for development of an adjacent park, under certain conditions.

The equipment must meet the approval of the school administration, and must be removed if the land is needed by the school.

Dr. Eibling termed Columbus "unique in the nation" in the cooperative recreation-school land plan, and board members agreed with his approval of the program.

Plans are also being prepared for the development of parks adjacent to Georgian Heights, Devonshire and Stockbridge Elementaries. A total of 17 such locations have been established within the Columbus School District in the past ten years.

Others will be developed as funds become available.

Students in the Olde Orchard Elementary district will be transported by bus to Maybury Elementary or other nearby schools until the building is ready.

Tired Youths Given Time To Rest

A Blacklick Heights family suffered damages as a pair of Columbus East Siders received double trouble late Monday evening, July 5.

A 1960 Chevrolet belonging to Mrs. Mary M. Sanderell was stolen in front of her home at 6643 E. Livingston-av, when the two youths found the ignition key had been removed but the switch was not in locked position. In their haste to escape, the youths struck the 1956 Ford belonging to her husband, Francis H. Sanderell, damaging both cars. They then drove to the dead-end of Redwood-st, where they abandoned the car and were captured on foot by City Patrolman Russell D. Craycraft and John K. Francis.

The capture took a matter of minutes. A neighbor sitting in his yard heard the crash and called police at 9:57 p.m. at 10:20, one youth was captured and at 10:25 the other was apprehended.

The youths, Joseph E. Lewingdom, 4757 Groves-rd and James P. Courtright, 5005 Majestic-dr, E., are both from Southeast Columbus.

When apprehended, one youth said they had come to Reynoldsburg to watch the fireworks and were too tired to walk home.

Police Chief William (Bruce) Umpleby estimated the damage to the Chevrolet at $200 and at $300 to the Ford. Umpleby stated the two are on probation from juvenile authorities for similar action.

secure full building occupancy before the structure is completed.

(Association members report they now have certified checks from members to cover occupancy of 34 to 36 of the planned 39 stalls. The checks, each in the amount of $2,000 are reportedly sufficient to secure financing for the proposed building.)

Councilwoman Golda May Edmondston and Councilman William Hoermle each have indicated they will support city lease of land for the new market. Less enthusiastic was Councilman Robert T. Southwick. He said he would prefer a plan calling for two percent of gross income of market tenants as rental, rather than the two percent of association charges.

'No Obligation'

Southwick said he does not feel the city has any obligation to the Central Market. He said that the present site was not donated to the city, but was purchased for $2,000 — "quite a bit of money 117 years ago." The purchase included a "reverter" clause to the effect it would go to heirs if not used for market purposes. The city has since "bought" the reverter clause from the heirs for $22,000.

Councilman Sedgwick left no doubt on his position. "I would like to see the city get clear out of the Central Market situation," he said. He said the support for continued city support of the Central Market arises "from sentimental feelings" and is not being considered from a business standpoint."

He said a lease between the city and the Central Market Association would "establish a precedent we should hate to follow. I don't see why we should subsidize the market place."

Sedgwick said there were many more, and more substantial merchants at Central Market when council passed its first resolutions of intent to continue a Central Market. But, he added, "The market situation has deteriorated to a point where we should do the best thing for the greatest number — and this means do away with it in my book."

A Letter From Karin Reveals 'Russia Lacks Understanding'

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Karin Lindfors is a 19-year-old girl from Helsinki, Finland. Last year she lived in the U.S. with the William E. Jones family of 5949 Timberbrook-ln, as a participant in the American Field Service program. She attended Hilliard High School as a senior. Last month she took a short tour of Russia, staying several days in Leningrad. Following are some excerpts from the letter she wrote to the Jones family about her experiences and impressions "on the other side:")

Karin Lindfors

Trips to Russia are very inexpensive from Helsinki. Anybody can go there, only it takes quite some time to get the visa, and there are lots of formalities that seem almost ridiculous to me.

For my four-day trip I paid 130 marks, that should be about $42. That included everything, even subway fares. The only money I needed was for snacks or souvenirs, but there isn't much of that to buy in Russia.

I went to a party at a boy's house. They had a tape recorder, and on the tapes they had only modern music to dance to — lots of rock 'n roll. They all danced the Twist and Hully Gully. We asked them if they knew Ripasha, the native Russian dance where you squat on the floor and kick your feet, but they didn't! They didn't know how to dance Shake or Bunny Hop, so we taught them. Russians in general have a good sense for music and rhythm, so they learned very fast.

Everything seems to be of rather poor quality in Russia. Things don't work, locks are out of order, hot water isn't hot, the elevator in our hotel was out of order the whole time we were there.

There is no tourist service to speak of, and our program was changed from one minute to the next, sometimes several times a day. Many things that happened were never explained. By little things like that we could notice we were on the other side of the Iron Curtain.

One boy that I had become acquainted with the first night saw me in the street the next day. He was walking with an older person and he looked straight at me, but didn't say "hello." That night when I met him again I asked him why he hadn't recognized me. He was very embarrassed. This is just an example.

Suddenly somebody comes and gets you and tells you not to walk on this street, to turn around and take another way. Why?? We were never able to find out. They don't answer questions like that.

Khrushchev was put out of power because he was too capitalistically minded! Goldwater and Lee Harvey Oswald were companions! Henry Ford was the biggest criminal that ever walked this earth! Can you imagine, they believe in things like these.

With their eyes shining from conviction they told us these "facts," and wouldn't even listen to our point of view. That's what Russia, and Communism lacks — understanding.

They work toward the same goal as everyone else — world peace. But according to Communistic ideas, world peace will be reached when everyone thinks the same way, when Communism has conquered the whole world. They may have to fight in order to conquer it, but as long as they fight for peace (world Communism) the fight is justified.

Sounds absurd, doesn't it? But this is their firm belief. Can we reach our understanding that far, when they don't even try to understand different ideas?

I think we should try, because Communism is hard to fight with weapons. They're ready to make almost any sacrifice for the good of the idea. Human contact with people on the other side would be the only thing, because that way they can (or could) see that you can live in peace with people who think in a different way from our own.

These people that we met, they saw that they could dance and have a party and a lot of fun with capitalistic kids. If all of them could get the chance!

AN INSPECTION LINE and weigh-in for all entrants in the Soap Box Derby was conducted Saturday at St. Charles School, and all cars that qualified were stored at the school—covered and waiting for the big day.

They're Off! July 10 At Soap Box Derby

About 80 boys, ages 11 to 15, will compete in the Columbus Soap Box Derby Saturday, July 10, 1 p.m. In their homemade cars, they will race in search of fame and fortune down the gently sloping hill on E. Fifth-av, east of Nelson-rd.

They will vie for a $500 savings bond, a trophy and the chance to represent Columbus in the All-American Soap Box Derby in Akron later this summer.

City bus service will be provided continually to the Derby site. Service on E. Fifth-av will be as usual in the morning, but will be re-routed in the afternoon.

During the race, buses will be routed east on Fifth-av to Nelson, north to Rte. 62 (Johnstown-rd), east to Cassady, and then south to Fifth-av.

No parking areas will be provided for the expected 5000 spectators, but officials said ample parking space would be available on side streets nearby.

For the entrants, the race marks the culmination of months of planning and work necessary to build a first-rate racer. Many of the boys started designing their racers even before Derby registration opened in February.

Two racers will compete at a time. The winner of each race will advance to the next heat, and the loser will be eliminated.

The racing carts will start from a specially constructed ramp with trip levers designed to release the two carts simultaneously. Powered only by gravity, the racers will speed down the 875-foot course, crossing the finish line at speeds of more than 30 mile per hour.

In the pre-race ceremonies, "Miss Columbus Soap - Box Derby of 1965" and her four-member court will be presented. Hundreds of helium-filled balloons will be released, and several marching parade units will perform.

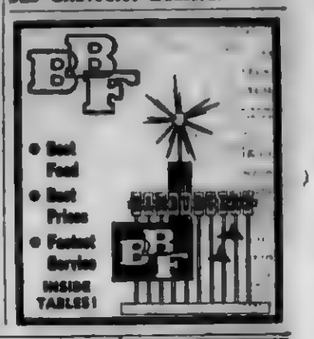
Fourteen - year - old Diane Frick of 2492 Chester-rd, Upper Arlington, is queen of this year's Derby.

Members of her court are: Chris Judy, 316 Holton-st, Groveport; Yolonda Harler, 4445 Hartwell - rd; Karen Clinger, 588 S. Richardson-av, and Marla McMillen, 4925 Sharon Hills-dr.

Immediately preceding start of the Derby, two well-known celebrities will race down the course competing for the title of "1965 Columbus Oil Can Champion."

Howard - "Hopalong" Cassady and Ike Kelley, former OSU football All-Americans, will race in the "Oil Can Derby."

As the official Derby gets underway at 1 p.m., Jimmy Crum, WLW-C TV sports director, will describe the action on Channel 4.



A victory banquet will be held at Whetstone Recreation Center on July 12 for all the young speedsters and their parents.

The championship and runner-up trophies will be presented then, and plaques will be given to all boys who participated in the Derby. Special trophies for best brake construction, best designed racer and best overall construction also will be presented.

Another highlight of the banquet will be announcement of the winner of the 1965 "Mr. Soap Box Derby" trophy. This award will be given to the boy who best exhibits qualities of friendliness, courtesy, good sportsmanship and cooperation during the Derby.

In ceremonies at city hall last week, Mayor M. E. Sensenbrenner proclaimed July 10 and 11 "Soap Box Derby Weekend in Columbus."

This year's Derby is sponsored by the Columbus Jaycee, WLW-C and the Columbus Chevrolet Dealers.

SUM AND SUBSTANCE

Celebration Was A Memorable One

By CHUCK HARTLE

This was a week for remembering. Thousands upon thousands of Central Ohioans lined the streets Sunday and Monday to watch parades; stood, hats-in-hand, as Old Glory marched by; laughed, smiled, and maybe even shed a tear as some remembrance of the glorious heritage of this great nation floated by, brought to life in crepe paper and chicken wire.

Watching the Upper Arlington parade Monday, which is the oldest and biggest in these parts, one is struck by the thought that, should the Army, Air Force and Navy ever fail us, we can call on the Shriners to save the country. Literally hundreds of them, in and out of uniform, marching and riding in most anything, made their way along the two-mile parade route. They seemed to endure the heat as well as the high school band musicians.

Top winners in the Upper Arlington parade contest were: Best of Parade — Woodstock-rd, Dr. R. K. Klingensmith, chairman; Best Neighborhood Float — Westwood Acres, Tony Lombardi, chairman; and Most Appropriate to the Theme, "America the Beautiful" — Kipling Forest, Phil Martin, chairman.

Others winners were: Most Humorous—Manchester Park, Dorothy Johnston; Best Youth Entry — Swim and Racquet Club, Mrs. Dorothy Conley; and Best Individual Entry — Wilson and Steel, Mrs. Robert Wilson.

Mrs. Celeste Keates, a 23-year-old mother, of 2533 Donna-dr, was not injured when an intruder posing as an air-conditioner inspector phonied his way into her home.

The intruder fired a pistol shot at Mrs. Keates from close range. The powder marks on her clothing indicate he was close, but fortunately, inaccurate.

Other problems that did not quite come into being this week were strikes at the Columbus and Southern Ohio Electric Co. and the Columbus Bolt and Forging Co.

Both can be recorded as near misses as last minute settlement were negotiated.

Al Moro, who did not run for re-election, was succeeded by William (Tiny) Forsythe as president of Local 746, International Union of Electrical Workers at Westinghouse Electric Corp.

Everyone has heard of "hothouse plants." There's a new term, "statehouse plants,' referring to "second-best plants, spindly-structured and lopsided."

This description was part of a report by a committee of landscape architects which analyzed the greenery on the new statehouse grounds over the underground parking lot.

A brutal, triple murder rocked the city over the weekend. The suspected killer, William Eugene (Billy Joe) Koch, 38, of 920 Lincoln-av, was taken into custody in Covington, Ky., following a phone call to police by an informer.

The National AAU women's track and field championships wound up Saturday at the Worthington High track with double wins by two teenagers. Taking the 880-yard run and the 1500-meters was Marie Mulder, 15, of Sacramento, Calif.

Lynn Graham, 17, of Pasadena, won both the shot put and the discus.

AAU officials claim that the women's U.S. track squad, selected from the Worthington participants, is the strongest this country has ever put together.

As the lady runners and jumpers leave town, the female swingers move in. The Lady Carling Open begins tomorrow at Walnut Hill. The top names in distaff golf will be on hand.

The Columbus Jets are winning. But, be still. Don't say anything to break the spell. Just go to the ball park and enjoy it. The players get lonesome out there.

Selective Traffic Control Enforced At Intersections

The intersection of James and Main and of College and Livingston are among the 13 areas in Columbus singled out for selective traffic enforcement with seven and five percent of the accidents occurring at these sites.

Lack of assured clear distance ahead, changing course without safety, driving left of center and failing to yield in making a left turn were cited as causes and contributing factors in these accidents.

Three of the 711 accidents reported throughout the city in the 15 days ending June 30 were fatal.

Courtright . . .

The Junior Jet season started June 28, and after one week Team Four is in first place.

The softball teams also started their seasons last week. The Junior Girls lost to Scottwood 27 to 2. The Senior Boys played Leawood and won 14 to 10. The team was led by Jim Crossley, Charlie Stapleton, John Johnson and Keith Stuber.

The Junior Boys beat Willis Park 10 to 6 in eight innings. The team was led by the hitting and defense of Frank Cowgill. Other members on the team are Tim Cowgill, Bruce Kotlinski, Chris Meyer, Jerry Loeffler, Dan Moore, Ron Williamson, Toni Iannarino, Lonnie Stapleton, Fred Van Kirk, Keith Smith, Steve Moore and Jim Kaiser.

In the horseshoe tournament all three contestants from Courtright were defeated in the district tournament by five points or less.

The Bicycle Rodeo was held July 2, and the theme of the rodeo was to commemorate the Fourth of July.

The children of Courtright Playground have been busy preparing a skit on "Johnny Appleseed," which will be presented at the sectional Drama Festival on Friday, July 9, at Courtright School.

The boys and girls also have been busy making costumes.

Arts and craft classes at Courtright Playground have been very busy so far this season. The children have been making various craft objects from paper and cardboard.

They also have been working on weaving and making character dolls from empty spools. Arts and craft classes are held daily Monday through Friday from 12:30 to 2:30 p.m.

Fairmoor . . .

Fairmoor had a busy week, beginning with the Pet Show on June 25.

The winners were the prettiest: Sheryl Bain, Mary Marsh and Mike Holmes; the best groomed, Debbie Hoelzel, Melanie McCualsky and Steve Mahon; the most obedient, Randy Smith, Allen Lytle and Jim Kopp; the largest pet, Jack DeVoss, Jerry Belt and Candy Weisend; the most affectionate, Theresa Jackson, Terry Belt and Cheri Weisend; the most unusual, Rene Bunch, Sharon Bosserman, John Honker and Bill Potteiger; the best costumed, Jeff Block, Susie Stein and Billy Ewing; the smallest pet, Dana Hyett, Diane Eisel and Linda Slane; the best performance, Terry Marsh, Bobby Ewing and Theresa Slane; the cutest pet, Wendy Baller, Perry Hunt and Denise Husson.

Judges were, Mrs. Leo L. Ral, Mrs. Mary McGinty and pet, Wendy Baller, Penny Pastor T. G. Buntz.

Last week Junior Jet League started and at the end of two games teams one and three led the league in the eight to nine year old division. Team one recorded a triple play in the first game of the season.

In the 10, 11 and 12 year old division, teams two and four are undefeated. Team four was led by pitcher Mitch Edminster who hurled a five inning no-hitter along with Monty Hannah.

This season there are four teams in each league with a 12 game schedule.

The junior girls lost their first game of the season to James Road 7 to 3.

The junior boys had less luck as they were beaten 16 to 2 the same day against James Road.

The senior boys open their softball league against Courtright. The boys have been practicing once a day for the last two weeks.

Playground horseshoe winners who played at Schiller Park on June 30 were Ren Chamberlain, Nancy Walsh, Marilyn Walsh and Debbie Jacobs. Debbie came through with Fairmoor's only victory and earned the right for the finals.

The Drama Festival will be held July 9. Practice is being held every day.

The Bicycle Rodeo was this past Friday afternoon. Events were slow and sprint races, trick riding, cross country riding, straight race, and decoration of bike.

Most of the kids are anxiously awaiting the sectionals in track July 16 at South. The volleyball sectionals will come shortly afterwards.

Fairmoor now has two more tetherball courts and the playground was resurfaced.

Playground leaders for this year are Joan Sippola, in charge of arts and crafts, a girls softball team, Drama Festival and special events; Larry Schwartz is in charge of Junior Jets, and senior boys softball; John Turkal is in charge of all softball activity and Intermediate league.

Pinecrest . . .

The city-wide horseshoe tournament was held July 1 at Sunshine Recreation Center. Pinecrest won in the senior girls' division with Cheryl Mox, 1233 Yearling-rd, named the winner.

The past week in arts and crafts was spent in making lanyards, collages from leaves and stones, human figures and animals from paper, baskets and coin banks from flat stirring sticks. Soon, the children will be making bracelets and potholders.

Junior Jet baseball is off to a good start with each team having played two games. Team 3 is in first place in the Minor League (8-9 year olds) with a 2-0 record. Randy Fausnaugh, Larry Bisutti, Todd Sichel and Mike Baker have been providing the big batting punch which enables Team 3 to support an unblemished record.

In the Major League (10, 11-12 year-olds), Team A is leading the pack with a 2-0 record. Rick Koehler is proving to be the big stick for Team A. He has hit three

THERE'S NO DOUBT ABOUT IT

COLONEL STANTON'S LADY IS KNOWN AS A 'MARVEL'

By JANE ROBINSON

That old rocking chair had Marvel Stanton last Thursday.

But not for very long. The first lady at Lockbourne AFB just isn't one to stay put.

She's young—so young that she actually felt a note of pride to discover her first gray hair.

And she's energetic and not the least dismayed at the prospect of moving for the fifth time since her marriage to the widowed Col. Stanton three years ago.

But most important of all she is a gracious and compassionate woman who looks toward the friendship and moral support she can offer the young wives on the base as her most vital role.

"It is a priviledge to know these wonderful girls who show such courage when faced with the weeks and months of uneasy loneliness while their husbands are gone," she said.

Mrs. Stanton appears genuinely delighted to be returning to Franklin County at the end of the stint of temporary duty her husband is completing in Washington, D.C.

The few months she spent here last winter convinced her that "from store clerk to officialdom" the friendliness of the Mid-West is synonomous with Columbus.

Sharing with many of her sex, a reoccurring yen to shop she has a project in mind which should delight local antique dealers.

Evidently a little reserved in her enthusiasm for the Oriental furniture Col. Stanton collected in the Far-East, she sees the old farmhouse which serves as the home for the commander of LAFB as the perfect place to indulge her hankering for the colonial period.

And she is already veil-deep in another extremely important project—the plans for the marriage of their daughter Judy to Capt. Richard Bexton of LAFB on Oct. 23.

With Miss Stanton working in Washington it is her mother who set the date and upon whom a thousand details will fall.

But weddings and moving and home decor and official duties all play second fiddle to a couple of small fry.

They are the Stanton 10-year-olds, Sarah Alexis and Bruce.

Any mother knows what that involves—Scouting and Little League and music lessons and swimming and perpetual motion and appetites.

The children share their mother's love for horseback riding (Sarah explained they are "saving up" for a horse of their very own) a hobby that Daddy is being pressured into acquiring.

Up to this point his admiration of quadripeds has been largely confined to the Black Angus on the South Carolina farm which the nomadic Stantons call "home."

The Stantons met in the Pentagon where Mrs. Stanton was the social secretary to Gen. Lyman Lemnitzer, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staffs.

Although she concedes that her experience in that capacity possibly helped groom her for the myriad of tasks ahead as official hostess at Lockbourne she smiled, "—more important than experience is just to remember to be yourself."

Obviously a round peg in a round hole that fits like a glove, Marvel Stanton has the tiniest seed of discontent in her heart.

She wants to see Paris.

A native of Iowa who grew up in the nation's capitol, she has long hoped to see for herself the beauties of other countries.

Asked why she didn't insist on a little European jaunt (after all she is still enjoying a bride's privileges) she laughed and said, "It is a little difficult to put your foot down when dealing with the U.S. Air Force."

Claiming that she is still learning to cook and that her husband is no stranger to "burnt offerings," Mrs. Stanton has a secret desire to master a number of gourmet recipes. Her relatively leisurely weeks in Washington are abetting her, perhaps "supper at the Stantons" may soon be known as an epicurean treat.

It really doesn't matter whether she excells in this latest endeavor or not.

What actually counts is that to Lockbourne has come a warm, friendly woman who wants only "To be myself."

With this attitude and with her charm, her merely being at Lockbourne should be "treat" enough for everyone.

WITHIN A COUPLE of hours Mrs. LeRoy Stanton would be the official First Lady of Lockbourne as her husband Col. Stanton accepted command of the base when it officially became a member of the TAC family during Change of Command ceremonies Thursday. But at the moment she was merely the guest of Mrs. C. J. Jackson looking forward to the job ahead and agreeing with her 10-year-old daughter that her swimming-wet hair was a problem. The interest which she showed in the approaching wedding of the young lieutenant present underlined the quality that should endear the attractive Marvel to everyone under her husband's command.

Tour Take Tops Past Records

The German Village Society turned into a branch of a mutual admiration society when it held its annual appreciation party at the Swiss Club last week.

Frank Fetch as president and William Scheurer as tour chairman had nothing but the kindest of words for the scores of persons from police to press to hostesses to artists to each other who contributed to the success of the annual Haus und Garten Tour.

And Fetch had some news that was easy to take for everyone connected with the event.

Even before all ticket receipts were in it was plain the tour had been even a bigger financial success than had been anticipated. The tally wasn't complete, but it was creeping toward the $8,000 mark.

And $8,000 went far to make the hard work easier in retrospect.

After the buffet dinner, Eleanore Nimms announced that Bernard Houch, 117 E. Beck was the winner of the silver compote donated by German Village Society in the Window Box Contest.

The second place prize, a telescope from an anonymous friend went to Edmond Moulin, 540 S. Sixth-st. Mrs. Morris Jordan, 551 City Park was awarded a picture frame from Magnuson, for third place.

Other winners were Anne L. Lilly, 554 S. Sixth-st, an urn with plants from the window box committee which Miss Nimms headed; Agatha and Jim Allen, 43 E. Sycamore, a painting painted and donated by Lefty Pusecker; Jan and Ron Plymale, 522 S. Pearl, ceramic ash tray; Ralph Coomer, 835 City Park-av, candle with planter.

Peg and Ivan Pusecker, 219 E. Beck, steaks donated by Daeumler Market; Bub Gurley and Tom Pace, 522 S. Sixth-st, groceries from German Village Market; Elizabeth Steven, 646 City Park, African Violet cup; the Dan McConnels, 49 E. Sycamore, hair set by Catena's.

Roger Swaney, 53 E. Sycamore, grease job by Phillips 66 on S. Third; Regis McKenna, 35 E. Sycamore, dry cleaning by Third-st cleaners; Gene Brownke, 51 E. Sycamore, gift from Chalet, Livingston-av and Mrs. Corwin, 77 Kossuth-st, ash tray.

ONE OF THE very few casualties of the mass preparation made for the German Village Haus Und Garten Tour was Ludy Myers of Daeumler's Food Market who miscued on a ladder while getting ready for the big day. The pain in his ankle apparently wasn't too acute with Liz Allread busy autographing his cast at the party thrown for four workers last Thursday. The other gentleman getting in on the act is Mike Milewsaich, member of the board of directors of the German Village Society.

Senior Citizens In Whitehall Plan Outing

The group will leave from the Senior Citizens Center at 3 p.m. Thursday, July 8, for a trip to Blacklick Woods. And on Tuesday, July 20, they will leave from the center at 10 a.m. for a trip to Hoover Dam for dinner and fishing.

They also plan to attend the adult round and square dance at Beechwood Shelter House Saturday, July 24.

Bowling for senior citizens will get under way July 15 at Holiday Lanes, 3:30 to 5 p.m., and will continue every Thursday. Admission is by membership card, and price is 35 cents a game.

Any Whitehall resident over 60 is invited to join the group in any of its activities by calling John LaCorte, city recreation director, BE. 7-8611.

Der Willage Vanderer

By R. L. SCHMITZ

For months a special corner of our hearts vas marked Tour Day, 1965. Vell, der sixth annual Haus und Garten Tour of German Village has come und gone. Filling its void is now a deep inner glow. In the long run, vhat greater reward has life to offer dan dis varm inner glow, dis delicious fatigue dat tingles von head zu toe, dis ting vhich, for vant of a besser name, ve call satisfaction.

Dis year I vas more involved in der tour dan in der two preceding years. Thus I appreciate more fully dan before dat an annual German Willage tour is like an iceberg: only vone tenth is wisible; der remaining nine-tenths is hidden.

Der vone tenth dat showed June 27 vas der tour itself—all der fun und excitement, der crowds, der schtreet dancing, der evening koncert in Schiller Park. Der inwisible nine-tenths vas hours und hours of planning, of hashing and rehashing, of mulling und, since ve are a democratic society down here, of arguing. Arguing over many points so fine dat an ousider vould label dem trifles.

But it is schmall tings that can gum a vell-planned day. Und it vas der greasing of dese many schmall tings dat permitted almost 10,000 people to take over German Willige June 27 und make it their own. To whom does vone say thanks for such a tour? Impossible to answer fully but here's a brief try.

Thanks to Bill Scheurer for piloting dis tour as smoothly as the foregoing five. Bill has an elephant's recall. Thus he vas able to comb his memory of other tours und come up mit quick answers to dis year's schticky questions. Und thanks to his Frau, Jane, for providing hostesses at the 10 tour hauses. Tour day Jane wisited each haus eight times. Dats 80 wisits Jane Scheurer made. Und dis mit der Sonnenschein sot hot vone poor old lady almost passed out.

You can have different music in your own home every day in the week when you borrow phonograph records from the Main Columbus Public Library.

If It Works For Dog, We'll Send Our Kids

By ADELINE DALEY

Since it's a couple of weeks before our six-month-old dog, "Lady," picks up her diploma from the Dog Obedience School she has been attending, it may be a bit premature to announce that she'll probably wind up as the class valedictorian.

But we have been assured of this by our daughter, Patrice, who has been taking the dog to class regularly. The closest competition, according to Patrice, is a serious-minded, highly-intent German Shepherd. (Wouldn't you know?)

However, Lady is working "way above her age level." I have noticed that she is only chewing up half the things she used to — and, one hopes, enjoying them less.

Our dog is not a pure bred (half Beagle, half Boxer etc.) and we are not grooming her to compete against dogs with longer, fancier names than their owners.

Therefore, the school in which she is enrolled is not the Vassar of the canine world but a good, no-nonsense "trade school" type, which supposedly prepares dogs for a proletarian life — living with proletarians like us.

Not being a dog fancier, I have no idea what the school teaches and what makes our dog a veritable Phi Beta Kappa, but must rely on Patrice's word that "Lady" is getting good grades in such courses as "heeling," following a pace or two behind the master.

With this I must agree. For she is forever "heeling" behind one of the kids, trying to snap up a cookie. And, frankly, I wish she wasn't so adept at heeling behind me in the kitchen when I'm trying to prepare meals.

As a matter of fact, what I wish they'd teach at Obedience School are subjects such as "Learning Who Your Master Is." Every pet we've had has made the same mistake—they believe I'm the boss. I think it's because they enjoy being fed.

I had hoped, too, that there might be a psychology course, "Adjustment to Moving Into Garage." (For dogs, that is.) It can't be in the curriculum, because our dog is still romping on the furniture and beds—muddy paws and all.

I believe the original idea was that the dog was not to be kept in the house. (Isn't it always?) But who could stand the whimpering of the poor little thing out there all alone the first night? And now, though she's as big and self-assured as the hound of the Baskervilles, she still wails loudly to gain re-entry into the house.

Of course, I shouldn't expect too much from either Lady or the Obedience School. But I do know this — if it proves just half-way successful, we may send the kids.

ST. JOSEPH MOTHERHOUSE GETTING FINAL BUILDERS' TOUCH

CONSTANT CONSULTATION on matters of color, form and money is routine for anyone in the process of building a home. But when you're constructing a three-story, $200,000 structure which will house from 50 to 100 women, it takes double-duty supervision. In this case, the building in question is the new St. Joseph Motherhouse, due to be completed this September on Chippewa-dr, just west of N. Hague-av. Being built by the Catholic Diocese of Columbus, the self-sufficient facility will be the new home of the Diocesan Sisters of St. Joseph. They were formerly located at Villa Madonna Motherhouse, 105 Meadow Park-wy. Eventual plans call for a separate chapel and kindergarten classrooms. Shown conferring with architects, left and right, Joseph D. Iguchi and John P. Gibboney, AIA, are Sister M. Damian, superior of the order, and Fr. Raymond Bauschard, pastor of St. Mary Magdalene Church and diocesan coordinator for the building.

Foreign Arts Kids' Series To Be Taught

The annual "Around the World in Art and Song" children's workshop will be held Aug. 2—6 at Indianola Methodist Church. The program is sponsored by the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom.

Representatives from four countries wil be on the teaching staff. Last year the native arts, songs, dances and customs were taught by guests from France, Israel, Sierra Leone and Nationalist China.

Children from second through fifth grades may participate. Parents should register their children by calling Mrs. John Shaw, Am. 7-3110.

THIS 1947 11-passenger DeSoto sedan was in much better shape when the photo was taken, last Friday, than it is now. The car, donated by Kent, Inc., was used to carry the clowns in the Sunday, July Fourth parade in Whitehall. At the end of the parade route in the Robinwood Plaza Shopping Center, the Jaycees sold sledgehammer-whacks at the car, at 25 cents a swing. Proceeds went to Jaycee community projects. After the crowd had demolished the auto, Jaycee "Frosty" Shuren stood atop the rubble and offered himself as a target for egg-throwers. Posing with the ill-fated vehicle at left is Don Dickey, a manager at Kent, Inc., and external vice-president of Eastern Jaycees.

TRAGEDY STRIKES TWICE

Chuck Walters, F-H Athlete Killed In Holiday Car Crash

The second tragedy involving a member of the 1965 class of Franklin Heights High School ocurred last Friday when Charles Walters, 18, of 1801 Richmond-rd, was killed in a one-car auto crash on the Innerbelt.

Walters, an outstanding athlete at Franklin Heights, died when the car in which he was a passenger skidded out of control and crashed into a steel guard rail at the W. Richst overpass.

Walters

Also hospitalized with injuries were Larry Cline, 20, 2684 Vandersburg-av, the driver of the car, and Earl Kasper, 19, 757 Salisbury-rd.

A June graduate of the Demorest-rd school, Walters was the starting quarterback on the Falcons' South Suburban League championship football team, was one of F-H's leading basketball scorers and high-jumped for a title-winning track squad this past spring.

He had been awarded a full athletic scholarship to Otterbein College at the time of his high school graduation.

The personable Walters was selected last fall to the Rural-Urban Spectator's All-Star Football Squad for his outstanding play on the gridiron for the Falcons.

A classmate of Walters, Marguerite Sharon Grambo, died less than three months earlier (May 8) when the motorcycle on which she was riding collided with an auto.

Injured in the motorcycle collision was Vic Vance, a teammate of Miss Grambo's brother, Dick — both members of Franklin Heights championship wrestling team.

Hamilton Local School Names New Head Coaches

The Hamilton Local School board of education this week announced the results of its athletic department "housecleaning." Last month the board made asurprisin omgve board made a surprising move when it declared all coaching positions "open" and requested formal applications for the positions.

Francis Paul Nester of Bowling Green has been named head football coach, replacing Glenn Hoddy. Nester also will replace Ray O'Dell as head track coach.

Eldon Keith Malling, Marietta, will take George Hamric's place as head basketball coach, but Hamric will retain his position as baseball coach.

Coaching assignments which were not changed are: David Milner, wrestling; Marvin Meteruky, tennis; and George Close, golf.

Assistant coaches are expected to be announced in the near future.

Forty-three persons applied for the "open" positions, according to a board spokesman. He said eight of them were members of last year's coaching staff.

Nester, the new football and track coach, was a 1945 graduate of New London (Ohio) High School. He received a Bachelor's degree from Ohio State University in 1955. He majored in English and minored in mathematics and health and physical education.

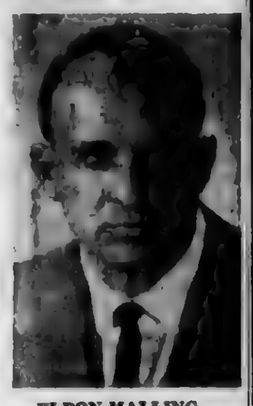
In 1946 he was awarded a Master's degree in health and physical education from Bowling Green State University.

Nester is married and has four children.

He has taught at four Ohio schools — Euclid Shore Junior High, Clyde High, Paulding High and Bowling Green High.

In 1960 he led Paulding High School's track team to the state class "A" championship.

At Bowling Green High Nester coached the 1961 football team through the school's first undefeated season in 33 years.



Nestor will be director of the Ohio State Track Clinic at Ohio State University in January, 1966.

Malling, Hamilton Local School's ex- basketball coach, received both his Bachelor and master degrees from Virginia Wesleyan University in 1957.

He has taught at Bartlett High and Warren High in Ohio, and at Williams Town High in West Virginia.

Wit 'N' Wisdom

By JACK WITTENMEIER

Well, July 4th has come and gone and the '65 major league pennant races are half-told tales.

With the baseball season officially four and one-half inning old, some strange reflections are visible in the big league mirror, declaring themselves as "fairest of them all."

THE NEW York Yankees, usually a more popular summertime favorite than lemonade this time of year, were standing a full 10 games off the pace when the flags came down at sundown on the holiday.

Our AL selection — Baltimore's Orioles—looked a little more heathy, four and one-half games back in fourth place.

Anybody recognize that pair flirting with first place? They look like Cleveland and Minnesota — the two clubs which had the hitting punch but lacked a pitching department to make any serious challenge in April.

IF THE Indians' "kiddie corps' plus Ralph Terry is for real, Gabe Paul might have to give up his practice of denying the tribe is packing suitcases long enough to print world series tickets.

Over in the senior circuit, LA was still clinging precariously to first place over the holiday but Cincy and the Giants were breathin' pretty hard on the Dodgers' neck.

Many of the sports buffs still swear Alston's "hitless wonders" don't have enough in the offensive department to go all the way.

AS A TEAM Los Angeles is batting under the .250 mark and if Sandy Koufax suffered a repeat of 'summer's past,' LA pennant stock would drop sharply.

Cincy and the Giants should have the best crack (and after all, that's what most of the forecasters liked in April).

This writer's pick — the Cardinals — don't look much healthier than their late world series opponent. And Cardinal Scout Mo Mozzali didn't make us feel any better last week on a radio interview when he expressed all kinds of hope that St. Louie would finish in the first division.

IF RUMORS that Wilt Chamberlain will give up pro basketball to enter the ring are true, the Stilt is making a big mistake.

Wilt doesn't have to switch to fight. Ex-Yankee Billy Martin did a pretty good job without gloves on the diamond and, if my memory serves me correctly, Chamberlain hasn't exactly been idle on the hardwood in the art of fisticuffs.

ALTHOUGH the optimism is decidedly guarded, it's interesting to note perhaps that the last time Cleveland won the AL pennant (1954) a slightly-built Latin (Bobby Avila) won the loop batting title.

Vic Davillio, another shorty from south of the border seemed much in competition to duplicating that feat last time we looked.

This is what's known in the business as "grabbing at straws."

WORTH REPEATING DEPARTMENT — In case you missed it in Sports Illustrated recently, an OSU assistant football coach, commenting on Woody Hayes' three week swap of football for hiking in the Bavarian Alps, remarked he couldn't believe Woodrow could stay away from football that long.

"Not unless somebody's put a goal line on top of the Matterhorn. If so, Woody will manage to get up there — three yards at a time," he concluded.

Tennis Amateurs Train At OSU

The fifteen top-ranked junior tennis amateurs in the nation are now participating in a Junior Davis Cup training session at Ohio State University.

The two-week event is sponsored by the Columbus Chamber of Commerce in cooperation with the United States Lawn Tennis Association.

The purpose of the training session is to promote tennis by developing future Davis Cup contenders, according to Dr. John Hendrix, Ohio State University tennis coach and vice-chairman of the U.S. Junior Davis Cup Committee.

The Junior Davis Cup finals will be played at Kalamazoo (Mich.) College Aug. 1-7.

FISHIN' FACTS

Someone once remarked, "The most fun of float fishing is not the fish'n' but the floatin'." There is more than a grain of truth in this observation, particularly when the going rate for floatin' with a commercial outfitter is $25-$35 a day.

The prominence of certain waters across the country which are called "float rivers" overshadows the many excellent streams that might be right in your own backyard. As a result, the floatable creeks nearby are neither fished nor explored and enjoyed.

The do-it-yourself float is simple. First, obtain a detailed county map. Then select a suitable stream — one that you've perhaps noted at bridge crossings.

Find a spot for launching your rig in what you guess to be the lower end of the best fishing waters. Then crank up the outboard and run upstream.

Study the waters on the way up. Make mental notes of deep holes, submerged logs, tributary mouths and so forth. These are the spots to fish on the way back.

Within a short time you will learn to "read" the current and navigate the passable chutes.

FISHY TALE — IT'S TRUE!

Six flathead catfish averaging more than 48 pounds each were caught by two Ohio fishermen last week at Clendening Reservoir, according to John Z. Pelton, supervisor of the fish management section of the Ohio Division of Wildlife.

If It Works For Dog, We'll Send Our Kids

By ADELINE DALEY

Since it's a couple of weeks before our six-month-old dog, "Lady," picks up her diploma from the Dog Obedience School she has been attending, it may be a bit premature to announce that she'll probably wind up as the class valedictorian.

But we have been assured of this by our daughter, Patrice, who has been taking the dog to class regularly. The closest competition, according to Patrice, is a serious-minded, highly-intent German Shepherd. (Wouldn't you know?)

However, Lady is working "way above her age level." I have noticed that she is only chewing up half the things she used to — and, one hopes, enjoying them less.

Our dog is not a pure bred (half Beagle, half Boxer etc.) and we are not grooming her to compete against dogs with longer, fancier names than their owners.

Therefore, the school in which she is enrolled is not the Vassar of the canine world but a good, no-nonsense "trade school" type, which supposedly prepares dogs for a proletarian life — living with proletarians like us.

Not being a dog fancier, I have no idea what the school teaches and what makes our dog a veritable Phi Beta Kappa, but must rely on Patrice's word that "Lady" is getting good grades in such courses as "heeling," following a pace or two behind the master.

With this I must agree. For she is forever "heeling" behind one of the kids, trying to snap up a cookie. And, frankly, I wish she wasn't so adept at heeling behind me in the kitchen when I'm trying to prepare meals.

As a matter of fact, what I wish they'd teach at Obedience School are subjects such as "Learning Who Your Master Is." Every pet we've had has made the same mistake—they believe I'm the boss. I think it's because they enjoy being fed.

I had hoped, too, that there might be a psychology course, "Adjustment to Moving Into Garage." (For dogs, that is.) It can't be in the curriculum, because our dog is still romping on the furniture and beds —muddy paws and all.

I believe the original idea was that the dog was not to be kept in the house. (Isn't it always?) But who could stand the whimpering of the poor little thing out there all alone the first night? And now, though she's as big and self-assured as the hound of the Baskervilles, she still wails loudly to gain re-entry into the house.

Of course, I shouldn't expect too much from either Lady or the Obedience School. But I do know this — if it proves just half-way successful, we may send the kids.

ST. JOSEPH MOTHERHOUSE GETTING FINAL BUILDERS' TOUCH

CONSTANT CONSULTATION on matters of color, form and money is routine for anyone in the process of building a home. But when you're constructing a three-story, $300,000 structure which will house from 50 to 100 women, it takes double-duty supervision. In this case, the building is question is the new St. Joseph Motherhouse, due to be completed this September on Chippewa-dr, just west of N. Hague-av. Being built by the Catholic Diocese of Columbus, the self-sufficient facility will be the new home of the Diocesan Sisters of St. Joseph. They were formerly located at Villa Madonna Motherhouse, 105 Meadow Park-wy. Eventual plans call for a separate chapel and kindergarten classrooms. Shown conferring with architects, left and right, Joseph D. Iguchi and John P. Gibboney, AIA, are Sister M. Damian, superior of the order, and Fr. Raymond Bauschard, pastor of St. Mary Magdalene Church and diocesan coordinator for the building.

Foreign Arts Kids' Series To Be Taught

The annual "Around the World in Art and Song" children's workshop will be held Aug. 2—6 at Indianola Methodist Church. The program is sponsored by the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom.

Representatives from four countries will be on the teaching staff. Last year the native arts, songs, dances and customs were taught by guests from France, Israel, Sierra Leone and Nationalist China.

Children from second through fifth grades may participate. Parents should register their children by calling Mrs. John Shaw, Am. 7-2139.

THIS 1947 11-passenger DeSoto sedan was in much better shape when the photo was taken, last Friday, than it is now. The car, donated by Kent, Inc., was used to carry the clowns in the Sunday, July Fourth parade in Whitehall. At the end of the parade route in the Robinwood Plaza Shopping Center, the Jaycees sold sledgehammer-whacks at the car, at 25 cents a swing. Proceeds went to Jaycee community projects. After the crowd had demolished the auto, Jaycee "Frosty" Shuren stood atop the rubble and offered himself as a target for egg-throwers. Posing with the ill-fated vehicle at left is Don Dickey, a manager at Kent, Inc., and external vice-president of Eastern Jaycees.

Hamilton Local School Names New Head Coaches

The Hamilton Local School board of education this week announced the results of its athletic department "housecleaning." Last month the board made asurprisin omgve board made a surprising move when it declared all coaching positions "open" and requested formal applications for the positions.

Francis Paul Nester of Bowling Green has been named head football coach, replacing Glenn Hoddy. Nester also will replace Ray O'Dell as head track coach.

Eldon Keith Malling, Marietta, will take George Hamric's place as head basketball coach, but Hamric will retain his position as baseball coach.

Coaching assignments which were not changed are: David Milner, wrestling; Marvin Metersky, tennis; and George Close, golf.

Assistant coaches are expected to be announced in the near future.

Forty-three persons applied for the "open" positions, according to a board spokesman. He said eight of them were members of last year's coaching staff.

Nester, the new football and track coach, was a 1945 graduate of New London (Ohio) High School. He received a Bachelor's degree from Ohio State University in 1955. He majored in English and minored in mathematics and health and physical education.

In 1946 he was awarded a Master's degree in health and physical education from Bowling Green State University.

Nester is married and has four children.

He has taught at four Ohio schools — Euclid Shore Junior High, Clyde High, Paulding High and Bowling Green High.

In 1960 he led Paulding High School's track team to the state class "A" championship.

At Bowling Green High Nester coached the 1961 football team through the school's first undefeated season in 33 years.

Nestor will be director of the Ohio State Track Clinic at Ohio State University in January, 1966.

Malling, Hamilton Local School's new basketball coach, received both his Bachelor and master degrees from Virginia Wealeyan University in 1957.

He has taught at Bartlett High and Warren High in Ohio, and at Williams Town High in West Virginia.

Wit 'N' Wisdom

By JACK WITTENMEIER

Well, July 4th has come and gone and the '65 major league pennant races are half-told tales.

With the baseball season officially four and one-half inning old, some strange reflections are visible in the big league mirror, declaring themselves as "fairest of them all."

THE NEW York Yankees, usually a more popular summertime favorite than lemonade this time of year, were standing a full 10 games off the pace when the flags came down at sundown on the holiday.

Our AL selection — Baltimore's Orioles—looked a little more heathy, four and one-half games back in fourth place.

Anybody recognize that pair flirting with first place? They look like Cleveland and Minnesota — the two clubs which had the hitting punch but lacked a pitching department to make any serious challenge in April.

IF THE Indians' "kiddie corps' plus Ralph Terry is for real, Gabe Paul might have to give up his practice of denying the tribe is packing suitcases long enough to print world series tickets.

Over in the senior circuit, LA was still clinging precariously to first place over the holiday but Cincy and the Giants were breathin' pretty hard on the Dodgers' neck.

Many of the sports buffs still swear Alston's "hitless wonders" don't have enough in the offensive department to go all the way.

AS A TEAM Los Angeles is batting under the .250 mark and if Sandy Koufax suffered a repeat of 'summer's past,' LA pennant stock would drop sharply.

Cincy and the Giants should have the best crack (and after all, that's what most of the forecasters liked in April).

This writer's pick — the Cardinals — don't look much healthier than their late world series opponent. And Cardinal Scout Mo Mozzali didn't make us feel any better last week on a radio interview when he expressed all kinds of hope that St. Louie would finish in the first division.

IF RUMORS that Wilt Chamberlain will give up pro basketball to enter the ring are true, the Stilt is making a big mistake.

Wilt doesn't have to switch to fight. Ex-Yankee Billy Martin did a pretty good job without gloves on the diamond and, if my memory serves me correctly, Chamberlain hasn't exactly been idle on the hardwood in the art of fisticuffs.

ALTHOUGH the optimism is decidedly guarded, it's interesting to note perhaps that the last time Cleveland won the AL pennant (1954) a slightly-built Latin (Bobby Avila) won the loop batting title.

Vic Davillio, another shorty from south of the border seemed much in competition to duplicating that feat last time we looked.

This is what's known in the business as "grabbing at straws."

WORTH REPEATING DEPARTMENT — In case you missed it in Sports Illustrated recently, an OSU assistant football coach, commenting on Woody Hayes' three week swap of football for hiking in the Bavarian Alps, remarked he couldn't believe Woodrow could stay away from football that long.

"Not unless somebody's put a goal line on top of the Matterhorn. If so, Woody will manage to get up there — three yards at a time," he concluded.

Tennis Amateurs Train At OSU

The fifteen top-ranked junior tennis amateurs in the nation are now participating in a Junior Davis Cup training session at Ohio State University.

The two-week event is sponsored by the Columbus Chamber of Commerce in cooperation with the United States Lawn Tennis Association.

The purpose of the training session is to promote tennis by developing future Davis Cup contenders, according to Dr. John Hendrix, Ohio State University tennis coach and vice-chairman of the U.S. Junior Davis Cup Committee.

The Junior Davis Cup finals will be played at Kalamazoo (Mich.) College Aug. 1-7.

FISHY TALE — IT'S TRUE!

Six flathead catfish averaging more than 46 pounds each were caught by two Ohio fishermen last week at Clendening Reservoir, according to John Z. Pelton, supervisor of the fish management section of the Ohio Division of Wildlife.

Frank Davis of New Philadelphia and Elmer Affolter of Uhrichsville got the big string, Pelton said.

TRAGEDY STRIKES TWICE

Chuck Walters, F-H Athlete Killed In Holiday Car Crash

The second tragedy involving a member of the 1965 class of Franklin Heights High School ocurred last Friday when Charles Walters, 18, of 1801 Richmond-rd, was killed in a one-car auto crash on the Innerbelt.

Walters, an outstanding athlete at Franklin Heights, died when the car in which he was a passenger skidded out of control and crashed into a steel guard rail at the W. Rich-st overpass.

Walters

Also hospitalized with injuries were Larry Cline, 20, 2684 Vanderburg-av, the driver of the car, and Earl Kasper, 19, 757 Salisbury-rd.

A June graduate of the Demorest-rd school, Walters was the starting quarterback on the Falcons' South Suburban League championship football team, was one of F-H's leading basketball scorers and high-jumped for a title-winning track squad this past spring.

He had been awarded a full athletic scholarship to Otterbein College at the time of his high school graduation.

The personable Walters was selected last fall to the Rural-Urban Spectator's All-Star Football Squad for his outstanding play on the gridiron for the Falcons.

A classmate of Walters, Marguerite Sharon Grambo, died less than three months earlier (May 5) when the motorcycle on which she was riding collided with an auto.

Injured in the motorcycle collision was Vic Vance, a teammate of Miss Grambo's brother, Dick — both members of Franklin Heights championship wrestling team.

FISHIN' FACTS

Someone once remarked, "The most fun of float fishing is not the fishin' but the floatin'." There is more than a grain of truth in this observation, particularly when the going rate for floatin' with a commercial outfitter is $25-$35 a day.

The prominence of certain waters across the country which are called "float rivers" overshadows the many excellent streams that might be right in your own backyard. As a result, the floatable creeks nearby are neither fished nor explored and enjoyed.

The do-it-yourself float is simple. First, obtain a detailed county map. Then select a suitable stream — one that you've perhaps noted at bridge crossings.

Find a spot for launching your rig in what you guess to be the lower end of the best fishing waters. Then crank up the outboard and run upstream.

Study the waters on the way up. Make mental notes of deep holes, submerged logs, tributary mouths and so forth. These are the spots to fish on the way back.

Within a short time you will learn to "read" the current and navigate the passable chutes.

Family Night Planned At Jet Stadium

Thirty Kiwanis Clubs of Central Ohio will join forces to sponsor Kiwanis Family Night at Jet Stadium on Wednesday, July 14.

In a game starting at 8 p.m. between Columbus Jets and Jacksonville Suns, the Jets will battle for first place in the International League.

A spectacular display of fireworks will complete the evening.

All proceeds of the Kiwanis Night game will be used to aid underprivileged children of Central Ohio.

Tickets are available at Jet Stadium Box Office or from any Kiwanis member: box seats $2, reserved seats $1.75 and general admission $1.

Vacation 'Ball' Now Rolling In Bexley

The Bexley Junior Softball League for boys 13 through 15 years of age plays Monday through Friday at 9:30 a.m. at the Maryland, Cassingham and Montrose playgrounds.

At the end of two weeks of play all teams are tied up with a win and a loss each. Competition has been so close each game has been decided by a single run.

For the Maryland junior team the pitching is handled by Bob Marshall and leading hitters have been Eddie Hoffman, Tom Thelbert and Rick Grow.

At Cassingham, catcher Sandy Edelstein, third baseman Jack Kramer and second baseman Jeff Finke have been the leading hitters.

The Montrose team, champions in the league for the past two years, have been getting most of their hitting from Sam Gingrich, Rob Mauger and Jim Hornberger.

The Bexley Midget Baseball League plays at each of the three playgrounds every morning Monday through Friday and is for boys eight through 12 years of age. There are also games for boys six through nine on Monday and Thursday evenings at 5 p.m. and Friday afternoons at 2 p.m.

After two weeks of play and some very close games, Maryland leads the league with an unblemished record. Responsible for Maryland's early lead have been pitchers Guy Adams and Steve Sweney, backed by the hitting of Phil Helf, Tom Skunza and John Ingwerson.

Leading hitters for the Montrose team have been Cliff Adams and Doug Klie while the pitching chores have been handled by John Arnold and John Myers.

Cassingham has relied on the pitching of Jack Jones and the hitting of Steve Seldensticker, Hank Bernstein and Rick Clowson.

Bike Hike Is Big Event At Maryland

The Maryland Playground leaders Marilyn Ruhling and Dave Helmick took 42 boys and girls on a bike hike to Jeffrey Mansion. Arriving at the mansion at 9:30 a.m., the boys divided into softball teams and the girls joined in games.

After a hunt for watermelons that had been hidden around the Jeffrey grounds the group had a picnic lunch.

After lunch and more games, the whole group had a cool and relaxing dip in the Bexley Pool before returning home in the late afternoon.

Upcoming playground events include a bike hike to Jeffrey Mansion for the Cassingham youngsters on July 8.

All Bexley students should be looking for information in the near future for a Bicycle Safety Contest, a Teen Tennis Tournament and the Junior Olympics.

State Capitol Will Be Backdrop For '65 Arts Festival

The traditional heritage of the State Capitol wrapped in its 20th Century landscaping occasioned by the underground parking garage will form an appropriate canvas next week for the Columbus Festival of the Arts.

Across this canvas, representative of the spirit and culture of Ohio, the festival will splash a cross-section of the old and new in the art media.

The now-annual event, featuring the performing arts as well as displays, is an offshoot of the Columbus Sesquicentennial celebration in 1962. The third festival, last summer, was held outside City Hall while the Statehouse Garage was under construction.

The festival opens at noon, July 15, with the showing extending through Sunday evening, July 18. Displays will line the main entrance walk to the State Capitol. Other activities will be located on the State-st and Broad-st areas of the statehouse grounds as well as in the outer lobby of the Huntington National Bank across the street at 17 S. High-st.

Mrs. Donald Cook, 41 S. Roosevelt-av, Bexley, chairman of the static arts section of the festival, said this year's participants promise new experience in art forms, mood and movement in both traditional art and in industrial and commercial static art comprehension.

An exhibit of paintings from the Columbus Gallery of Fine Arts, including an original by Columbus' George Bellows will be displayed in the Huntington National Bank lobby.

In the performing arts, special programs will be presented each evening. These will capture, and are appropriately titled, "Music of Ohio." Written and directed by Al Waslon, WLW-C performing artist, these will be full orchestra and chorus presentations. Jeanne Cummins, also of WLW-C fame, will add vocal charm to the musical program.

Throughout the day on the north and south areas of the Capitol grounds live performances will be staged, including puppet shows, folk singing, barbershop quartets, jazz groups and other performing arts specialties.

Static art contributions will be displayed this year by the American Institute of Architects, Battelle Memorial Institute, Columbus Professional Photographers, Ohio State University, Columbus Public Schools, Columbus Art League, Bexley Area Art Guild, German Village Society, Franklin County Historical Society, Bryson Gallery, Capital University, College of St. Mary of the Springs, Otterbein College, Columbus Recreational Department and the Columbus College of Art and Design.

The latter will present an unusual display of instructional form in industrial art, industrial design, advertising design and fine arts.

Theme for the Columbus Professional Photographers' displays will be "Feeling of Summer." The Franklin County Historical Society will emphasize historical significance, science in industry, space science and health.

In the field of displays will be found representative art—art that has been previously juried and judged for best representation — in all media and mood. This will include the schools of abstract, impressionism, expressionism, realism, op art (dimensional) watercolor, oils, and all areas of the graphics.

The Junior League Plans Award for artistic achievements in several categories will be presented during the Festival.

On display will also be the work of local newspaper and fashion artists.

During the four-day festival the artists will perform publicly in oil, watercolors, on the pottery wheel and there will be visual presentations of hand weaving.

A special exhibit located on the main entrance walk will show 12 originals of the Steve Canyon series presented to the festival by famed cartoonist Milton Caniff. Also on display here will be an interesting series of Currier and Ives engravings.

General chairman for this year's Columbus Festival of Arts is Merv Dures, program director at WLW-C TV.

The Graphic Art Committee members are Mrs. Donald Cook, chairman; Frank Shepherd, Martha Brian, Helen Sandfort, Ben Hayes, Mel Dodges, Edmund Kuehn and Don Davis.

JANE COOK, chairman of the Static Arts Committee for the Festival of the Arts, displays one of the many fine oils which will be exhibited during the four-day showing July 15-18. The Festival, which returns to the State Capitol grounds after being displayed last year during construction of the underground parking garage, will present Columbus with an unusual in-depth panorama of the community's cultural and practicing art movement.

FATHER AND SON clash in Tennessee Williams' play "Cat on a Hot Tin Roof" scheduled to open Tuesday, July 13, at Stadium Theatre, when Julian Barnett (Big Daddy) and his son Robert Finton (Brick) argue about Brick's excessive drinking. The play, which has won both the Pulitzer Prize and the New York Drama Critic's Award, will run for five performances. Also featured in the Stadium Theatre production are Bev Pettit, Ethel Shapiro, Robert Spanabel, Ruth Frisco, John Schott and Carl Falb.

Art Barn Open On Weekends

The Art Barn, a gallery of arts and crafts, is open to the public on Saturdays, Sundays and holidays. The gallery, on a knoll overlooking the Scioto River, is located one mile north of the Columbus Zoo.

The farmhouse has been converted to a permanent gallery and the yard and barn area is being used as an outdoor show area during the daylight hours. Works of amateur and professional artists and craftsmen from all over Ohio are on display and for sale.

The Art Barn opened last year with a five-week outdoor show. This year it has been expanded to include the farmhouse-gallery, which will be open year-'round. Amateur and professional artists and craftsmen are invited to participate.

Classes will be held in handbuilding of pottery, enameling on copper and fine silver, lapidary and oil painting. Inquiries may be made at the gallery.

Need Branch Registration

There are hopeful signs that the Franklin County Board of Elections will initiate action in 1966 to make voter registration an easier task. The board's 1966 budget request to county commissioners includes a $20,000 item for "compensation of registrars."

The additional registrars could be used for a one-shot day of registration at the precinct level, or for several days at branch registration offices. Board members have not officially committed themselves to expanding registration facilities, but we hope they will do so.

Prior to 1965, the Board of Elections has provided "extra" registration service only in presidential election years. This year, however, board members permitted an extension of the registration deadline for the May Primary Election.

While we appreciate the need for encouraging a maximum voter turnout during presidential election years, we feel there is no election more important than that at the "grassroots" levels. Therefore we believe it is even more important to encourage voter registration in the so-called "off years."

We favor adoption of the "branch office" registration plan advocated by Election Board member Thomas H. Williams. As Williams has repeatedly pointed out, Franklin County has grown too big to be adequately served by a single location for registration.

The trip to the congested downtown area is an inconvenience for most and a hardship for many. It is not unreasonable to hope that voter registration will be made more convenient.

Whitehall and Reynoldsburg officials have said they will cooperate fully in any plan for "localized" voter registration. We feel confident that other suburban areas will be equally willing to cooperate in making the voting right easier to exercise.

An Editor's Outlook . . . . by Jenkin Lloyd Jones

Revere The Past, But Live For The Present

During the late 1880's, the joyous word had spread among the plains Indians, cramped and unhappy on their reservations in the Oklahoma Territory.

Through the villages of the Kiowas and the Comanches, the Cheyennes and the Arapahos, the electric hope stirred the people. The White Man could not be beaten by arrows or even guns. But God would send him away. God would restore the buffalo, and the Indians would again be masters of the plains and free to go where they would. It had been promised.

Jones

The promiser's name was Wovoka. He was a Paiute, and he lived far off on the Utah-Idaho border, serving humbly as a handyman on a Mormon farm. But there was great medicine in him. He had spoken of his visions, and as the promise had been whispered through the tribes his reputation had grown until he was next to God Himself.

So the word was this: do not fight the White Man. And tell him nothing. But dance the Ghost Dance in honor of the ancestors and of the great day that is coming.

Every six weeks — each moon-and-a-half — the braves donned their white dance shirts and the squaws sang the special magic songs and for four days each dance went on. Brummett Echohawk, the celebrated Pawnee artist, tells me that the Ghost Dance was the only one in which the dancers held hands, so that the spirit of God could move from man to man.

Then one night a Cheyenne woman fell in a faint and had a dream. She saw a bed, a new bed with fine covers. The medicine men interpreted the "sign." God was coming soon. But when He had sent His son to the White Man, the White Man was indifferent. The babe was born in a manger. It would please God if the Indians would provide a suitable bed for Him.

Zoe Tilghman, widow of the great peace officer, Bill Tilghman, died in Oklahoma a few months ago. Her last article, "The Bed for God," was written for the spring issue of Oklahoma Today. This is the story, worth retelling:

One day, an astonished store keeper at El Reno was called on by an Indian delegation. It had scraped up enough cash to buy the finest brass bed in stock, together with a deep mattress and rich counterpane. Without offering an explanation, the Indians carried the bed away.

West of El Reno, straight-sided Coyote Butte, a spur of the Gypsum Hills, looks down on the North Canadian Valley. Up the cliff the Indians hoisted the bed. They pitched a tent over it that could be seen for many miles. Then they went back to the villages to await God's coming.

The seasons came and went. The tent yellowed in the sun. Winter storms tore it and finally it fell down. In the meantime, more wagons came. More sod houses rose on the quarter-sections. The railroad track gangs gashed the hills and built fills across the draws. Finally a Kiowa, Apaitan, was chosen to go west to seek out Wovoka and find out when God would arrive.

Apaitan was gone a long time and he came back with a dark face. Wovoka, he said, was only a man. Wovoka had protested that his dreams had been exaggerated in the many tellings. Wovoka was not sure that the White Man would be sent away soon or that the buffalo would come back soon. Wovoka said the Indians had been following a shadow.

So the last wild hope slowly died. The Ghost Dances ended. Some of the young bucks took jobs on the track gangs. The children began to come into government schools.

Now, after three-quarters of a century, a few disjointed pieces of brass lie deep in the buffalo grass on top of Coyote Butte.

All over the world, people, figuratively, are hoisting brass beds to the top of hills, votive offerings to God in the hope that He will turn back the hands of time.

There are people who worship ancestors, and dance in the honor of the ghosts of things past. There are people, bewildered by the uncertainties of the present, who find comfort in haunting the antique shops, pawing through the rusted and cracked relics of "safe" ages. There are people who lose themselves in ancient wars, because these are wars with certain outcomes.

The monks on Mount Athos seek holiness by turning their backs upon the confusions of the modern world. But they live by letting down their baskets to receive the offerings of the modern world. The yellow-robed priests in Rangoon and Bangkok shave their heads so they will be unattractive to women, and seek grace through poverty. But they hold out their begging bowls for this year's harvest.

It is one thing to cherish the heroes of the past and to revere the eternal verities that are not changed by circumstances and fashion. But it is another thing to shirk the duties of the present and to flee from the challenges of the future in the hope that God will send back the buffalo.

He won't.

Frosting on the Cake

BY "UNCLE DOC" ROSS — U.S.A.

Every day of our lifetime we are influenced, often unconsciously, by every other human personality that we encounter. Often they leave a lasting inspiration.

Having crammed and packed 740 years of tremendous living into 74 calendar years, this week I want to mention a priceless experience in Adrian, Mich., when I was 10 years old.

The first Chinese I ever met had come to Adrian some years before that from Canada. His name was Hu Sing. He was a self-educated, world-traveled sailor in the old square rigger days of sail and prayer. He operated a unique place of business, a cobbler shop in the front of the first floor of a dilapidated two-story frame building.

In the back half, downstairs, he operated a typical hand laundry. Upstairs was an amazing display of culture and erudition and oriental art. The man was a walking encyclopedia of the best in history, art, biography of the truly great. I met him the day after school that I went to his shop to get a pair of shoes half-soled. He asked me if the old doctor at Rome Center was in my family. I said yes he was my grampa. He smiled and then said, "After supper tonight, son, come down for the shoes and I will show you something upstairs."

I listened to him enthralled for two hours. He really "rode my neck" about learning how to read and to speak correctly. He emphasized repeatedly the age-old truth that only hungry minds ever become educated.

Many wonderful hours were spent in that second-floor home of Hu Sing after that. That gifted Chinese scholar, self-educated, gave me a terrific "smell of fire" that has served me well all these many years.

None of us ever knows how and where we too may inspire some eager youngster. I hope I have been doing it for 50 years as a commencement speaker.

Prevent Molestings

Recent reported incidents of child molestings prompt us to hark back to six suggested rules of "prevention" we published two years ago. Here they are again.

1. Instruct children to decline any offer of candy, money or rides from anyone who is not known to both the child and the parents.
2. Tell them to report to you any such incidents.
3. Don't permit young children to be outside, unattended, after dark.
4. Don't permit children to go alone to unsupervised playgrounds.
5. Don't send a child on any errand after dark.
6. If your child is too young to understand these instructions and rules, then he is too young to be without adult supervision at all times.

'THE GRIST'

Ground Out by Dusty Miller

CORNY — My tongue would cleave to the roof of my mouth if I tried to say the words and phrases that comprise about all the average person says when interviewed on the air — "tremendous," "terrific," "basically," "certainly," and the phrases "First of all," "As a matter of fact," "A good job," and the ennui-provoking "In terms of."

Shaky-handed, I write "in terms of" for exactly six seconds short of one instant!

Dusty

"Basically" the wage for cutting corn by hand when I was a boy was three cents a shock. In a 12-hour day, the average private in the shock troops could put up, say 35 shocks. "By reason of strength" the specialist might 'lam up 40.

Returning from the supermarket with a head of lettuce and a sackful of eight potatoes, I announce: "Here's 16 shocks worth of lettuce, and 21 shocks worth of 'taters."

ECONOMY — A city councilman suggests building a new market house, but not razing the old one until the new one is built.

This theory was first propounded at Punkin Center, where the school board was considering building a new schoolhouse.

Jim Lawson made a motion that they build the new schoolhouse out of the bricks in the old one.

Hank Weaver seconded the motion, with the amendment that the old building not be torn down until the new one was done.

Guest Pulpit . . .

Not long ago we were aware of and involved in a great advertising battle, the battle of suds. Soap companies were at war.

On the one hand we had those who proclaimed great, high suds, "super suds" one company called them; whereas, on the other side, these high suds were being challenged by low suds which really cleaned and did not clog the machine with soap residue. To many people, however, high soap suds symbolized cleaning power.

Rev. Davies

There is a parallel between soap and religion. Just as there are many people who like lots of suds in their wash, so also there are many people who like much religious activity and ceremony in their lives. But the proof of cleaning is not in the suds, whether they be soap suds or religious suds.

This point is most clearly seen when Moses disappeared up Mount Sinai to confer with God (Exodus 32). It was a holy conference which resulted in the Ten Commandments, but the people grew restless waiting for him, and finally confronted Aaron who then asked for, and received, their jewelry which he fashioned into a golden calf and presented to them as their god.

A great feast was held with elaborate and impressive religious ceremony, sacrifices, and ritual, followed by a party and celebration. The Hebrews, mind you, had not lost religion — they just changed brands. But Moses returned, and a low suds-high suds religious battle was fought, and the calf destroyed.

Jesus rejected the high suds religion of the Pharisees, Scribes and pious followers who were preoccupied by their tradition, appearances and regulations. Jesus was low-suds; in fact some would say He was no-suds — He didn't look very religious.

Dietrich Bonhoeffer, that German theologian who was martyred 20 years ago, has excited the world with a phrase which may be in danger of becoming a catch-phrase when he wrote of a "religionless Christianity," and of a world that has "come of age" and therefore needs no religion. Bonhoeffer refers, I believe, to high-suds religion which is ceremonial, self-centered, individualistic, mechanical, and, if apart from God, idolatrous.

It is a great mistake to reduce Christianity to a religion with lots of religious suds. Christianity was not meant to fill that religious compartment of life which we reserve for the god of our choosing, but to be the content of one's total life. All of us, however, are insecure enough in our faith that we are tempted to want a little "show" for our faith and to fill our lives with some suds as proof that we are really religious.

But the real test, as it is with soap and clothes, is found in what is happening to the life under the suds. That's what God sees.

Be strong in the faith, but watch those suds!

ONE MAN'S Opinion . . .

There's a "sick" joke that says: If you think taxation WITHOUT representation was bad, look at the kind of taxation we have WITH representation. And a good illustration of the point is the ruling by the Ohio Supreme Court that two cities can levy an income tax against the same income.

Ryan

Locally, Columbus and Whitehall are the only municipalities with a city income tax. The taxing ordinance in each city allows credit for those who live in the one taxing district, but work in the other.

Example: I live in Whitehall, but work in Columbus. Therefore my earnings are taxed by Columbus — NOT Whitehall. And a person who lives in Columbus and works in Whitehall would pay the tax on his earnings to Whitehall — NOT Columbus.

Now comes the highest legal authority in the state to say that BOTH Columbus and Whitehall can charge me income tax on the money I earn in Columbus. I am not much consoled by assurances from officials of both cities that they will not take advantage of the law.

In the first place, it seems to me that the city of residence should have first call on any income tax when there is an equal tax rate in both the city of employment and the "home" city. In the second place, it makes me extremely nervous to know that there is a tax source available to my "elected servants;" one they can tap without a vote of the people.

I understand the Ohio decision is to be taken to the U.S. Supreme Court. Maybe they will pull me out of the "sweats." I have about lost hope that our "do-nothing" Ohio Legislature will do anything. I'm not much in favor of a state income tax. But the more muddled the city income tax picture gets, the more inviting is the "easy way out" of the one big inequity to replace the many localized inequities.

Says Jones Is 'Unbeliever'

(Excerpts from letter sent to Jenkin Lloyd Jones.)

I was much surprised and disappointed when I read your column entitled "Cut-Rate Christianity Can Sour One's Soul," which appeared in The Spectator.

First, you said ". . . being a pragmatic Christian (Christian means Christ-like), I chose the church with the windows closed . . ." a clear indication you were looking for a cool place and not really a place you would most likely hear the word of God.

"The woman soloist had a mercifully inaudible soprano. Then the wispy young preacher with the nasal voice and the mechanical gestures arose to ruin the day."

Here it is apparent you directed your attention wholly to the messengers instead of the messages and, in so doing, you failed to grasp the authenticity of the messages. In other words, you were set on finding something about which to criticize and write a column about. A "Christian" (and not a nominal one) would have recognized the truths of the Bible references which you refer to only in so many words.

I once heard a missionary to China relate how he had met another missionary there from the U.S. who was short of stature and who had developed a high, squeaky voice from his associations with the Chinese, not of his own choosing. But when he came to really know this other missionary he found him to be one of the most godly men he had ever known.

You took the scripture, yourself, and applied it in your own feeble judgment to Catholics, Jews, Unitarians and your friends who by "their (good) works" you feel entitles them to their "rewards" although they have not accepted Christ (not Buddha, Confucius, or some other idol) as their saviour.

In Ephesians (Paul preaching) 2:8-9, my Bible says: "For by grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves; it is the gift of God; not of works lest any man should boast."

You said, "The communion tray was passed. I waved it gently away. I didn't think the body and blood of Christ were anywhere around there."

Of course, it does not matter what you think in this case, but Matt. 18:20 says: "Where two or three are gathered together in my name, there am I in the midst of them." However, I say it is well that you did not partake in this communion because I Cor. 11:29 says: "For he that eateth and drinketh, unworthily, eateth and drinketh damnation to himself, not discerning the Lord's body."

It is clear to me that you are an "unbeliever" and such writings as this column may cause many to stumble. Neither do I think The Spectator is absolved of guilt when such a column appears in their newspaper.

Wants Lima Hospital Tour

As a candidate for governor and as a humanitarian, I visited the Lima State Hospital on June 24 to see first-hand the system of operation and conditions.

After a three-hour inspection tour of all five of the hospitals and asking many questions, I am convinced that the officials are doing a good job of operating them in spite of some handicaps and several needed changes for improvement.

For instance, a new hospital for teenagers is needed badly. Today they have to be put in wards with older inmates. The state should erect or build some new rooms to house such things as machine shops, body shops and other vocational activities. This would keep a number of patients busy, who otherwise have nothing to do.

Governor James Rhodes has been in office two and one-half years and has not turned his hand to make the needed improvements at the Lima State Hospital.

The governor is constantly racing around in the state's airplane, sticking his nose into every conceivable program in order to make the newspaper headlines and get his picture in the paper.

He has finally come down to earth long enough to organize bus loads of reporters and photographers, visiting historical places. This is just another stunt to get political publicity.

Mr. Rhodes should take a "coffee break" and visit his office long enough to solve some of the pressing and important problems, such as expanding the treatment facilities at the Lima State Hospital.

Since the governor is in the business of organizing bus trips, I suggest that he take a load of the legislators to Lima. They will see quickly how negligent and derelict, as public officials, they have been in not providing adequate facilities for treating the unfortunate patients in the Lima State Hospital.

THE MAGNA CARTA

The people were a reluctant King John and his impatient barons. The place was a fair meadow at Runnymede, beside the Thames in Surrey, England. The time was June 19, 1215 A.D., just 750 years ago. The event was the granting of Magna Carta, the Great Charter of English liberties and, by extension, of ours, for we are its heirs.

Our present concept of equal justice for all under law did not spring full-grown from Magna Carta. But it was a beginning. No 13th Century king or nobleman was concerned about rights for the common people. Not even yet are all rights recognized by the powerful and enjoyed by the weak. But no one can deny the progress made in the past seven centuries. Not yet have we rebuilt Eden. But, thanks to the toils and tears and blood of the valiant, we are well on our way.

Gradually and surely, if not always clearly, our jury system evolved from Magna Carta. Simply stated, it is the two-fold idea that one accused is assumed innocent until proved guilty, and that guilt, at least in serious cases, shall be determined by a jury of one's peers, responsible people of equal standing.

Other systems of justice prevail in other lands. Even Continental Europe has a system different from ours in the Anglo-American tradition of the Common Law. But no system is better than ours, and under none is a more even-handed justice achieved.

So, if you ever find yourself in deep trouble under the law, remember Runnymede. If you are guilty, there is where the guarantee of a fair trial began. If you are innocent, that's where the seeds of your acquittal were sown.

It says here . . . . .

If old King John could wake up now,
he might be surprised.

FOOD MARKETS THIS WEEK

Fryers, Barbecue Chicks Popular

Barbecuing — according to a recent survey by the U. S. Dept. of Agriculture, is second only to frying as America's favorite ways to fix chicken.

Mrs. Franks

In fact, among the homemakers surveyed last year, 35 percent cooked broiler-fryers in the backyard. Ten years ago only 11 percent did. Nearly two-thirds of the homemakers said they served broiler-fryers at least once a week, cooked in one way or another.

A look at current production figures gives added reasons for barbecued chicken being prepared still more often in July. Poultrymen say that broiler-fryers supplies for July will be nine percent above those of a year ago. If retail prices follow the wholesale trend, prices on broilers and fryers should continue to decline slightly and specials will be more frequent.

One secret of good barbecuing is to keep the sauce warm. Spray or brush the chicken with a small amount of the warm sauce every time it is turned. Turn every four or five minutes, depending on the heat. Applying plenty of sauce makes the chicken moist, tender and gives good flavor.

If you are one who never knows what to do with the giblets, here's a suggestion: First, simmer the gizzard about 10 minutes in slightly salted water. Then cut into halves or quarters and thread, along with the heart and liver, on small metal skewers. Place the giblets over barbecue flame 10 to 15 minutes before serving time. These make excellent hors d'oeuvres.

Look For The Label

Another secret of turning tasty birds off the grill lies in wise selection at the market. And, your best guides are the round INSPECTION mark and the shield-shaped GRADE mark.

The round label indicates that the bird or poultry product has been examined for wholesomeness and has been dressed in a plant which meets strict sanitary specifications. The stamp does not denote quality grade.

Look for the shield-shaped badge — it's your guide to quality. Topmost quality is marked U.S. GRADE A. These birds will be full-fleshed and meaty, well-finished and attractive in appearance.

Grading for quality is not required, so not all inspected birds will bear this mark. However, grading is requested by many firms and many retailers sell only U.S.D.A. graded poultry and poultry parts.

BARBECUE SAUCE

Most people prefer a simple sauce. Here is a popular one used by the Poultry Science Department, Ohio State University.

Recipe for 10 to 15 people
1 pint water
1 pint vinegar
½ pound butter
1 to 2 ounces of salt
2 tablespoons Worchestershire sauce

Mix ingredients and bring to a boil. Keep warm on edge of the grill.

THIS WEEK LOOK FOR:

Fruits — watermelons, cantaloupes, plums, bananas, peaches

Vegetables — sweetcorn, cucumbers, lettuce and other salad greens, snap beans, cabbage

Meat, Poultry—broiler-fryers, beef "specials," ground beef, eggs

Other Foods — milk and dairy products, frozen: orange juice, lemonade.

The Wonderful World of ANIMALS

By Frank Miller, D.V.M.

DEAR DR. MILLER: No question, just thought you might like to pass along my solution to a common problem. King George, my Boxer, is my constant companion in the car. He played around on the front seat. Once he almost caused a wreck when he stuck his foot in my face.

Last month I had to slam on the brakes and he lost two front teeth on the dashboard. Since then, I have attached a dog harness to the safety belt. This holds him secure so he can't get into trouble or get hurt. King already thinks his safety harness is a "big deal" and waits for it. He is safer and so am I. How about that?—K.B.

COMMENT: Great! Buckling up Boxers — and other traveling canines — should be routine. This practice can save a lot more than teeth. (Incidentally, commercial canine seat belts are now available.)

• • •

DEAR DR. MILLER: Pammy is pregnant. This will be her first litter. She is a high-strung Persian and I'm a little worried about her but the doctor said everything is going fine. I have read where serene, rhythmic music has helped reduce labor pains and anxiety for women in labor. Would it help, do you think, if I provided music like that for Pammy? I'm anxious to do whatever I can for her.—L.A.

DEAR L.A.: When the time comes, mood music might not be a bad idea. It could cover up disconcerting background noises, if any. Whether or not it really helps your queen directly, if the music makes you feel better, it's worth playing. If you are relatively calm, Pammy will be more relaxed, too.

• • •

DEAR DR. MILLER: I would like to buy a monkey but heard from a friend you can contract a fever or tropical disease from one. What about this?—K.J.

DEAR K.J.: A veterinary examination of any monkey you plan to buy is vital. For one thing, you want to be sure the new pet is sound and healthy in his own right. And, even more important, newly-imported monkeys can, and frequently do carry diseases potentially harmful to man.

These diseases range from relatively mild skin conditions to dangerous intestinal infections, tuberculosis and viruses causing encephalitis (brain disease).

• • •

DEAR DR. MILLER: How often should I expect Winston Turtill to eat? He is just a baby turtle whom I got from a pet show a few weeks ago.—W.Y.

DEAR W.Y.: A few turtles want a daily snack. Most do nicely on two or three meals a week. If he is even lazier than most, a turtle may get by on one meal a week or even on a bi-monthly banquet. (It is important to be sure that — at least occasionally — Winston really does eat. Often turtles will spread food around but not bother to swallow any.)

• • •

DEAR DR. MILLER: Sarge is our olive green parakeet, and although he is only about three years old, he looks as if he's nearly ready for his 20 year hash marks. So help me, he doesn't eat a thing but regular chow (birdman variety) but he's got such a pot on him he can hardly button his feathers down the front. He seems to feel fine, so maybe there's nothing to worry about. What do you think?—A.B.

DEAR A.B.: Certainly, Sarge should make every effort to regain flying form. This current adiposity can lead to various ailments, including fatty tumors. Strike all fatty foods from his diet, and limit his birdseed, if necessary. Encourage exercise, but don't overdo it. In his present overloaded condition, Sarge may be unable to handle any airborne assignment.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Henry, my hamster, bites every time I try to pick him up. I've never known him to be friendly. How can I improve his disposition? —J. D.

DEAR J.D.: Some hamsters, like hostile Henry, just don't want to be picked up. (Even properly — which is from the top, not the bottom.) Bribery with choice snacks might improve his disposition if done regularly. Tranquilizers, too, could help Henry temporarily, but dosage must be carefully regulated. As a last resort, accept the fact that pets like Henry are to be seen and not held.

B&R Realty To Build New Apartment Park

The B&R Realty Company announced today that ground will be broken July 20 for Woodbrook Apartments, a new Hilltop $3.5 million apartment community.

Located on a 30.55 acre tract of land between Eakin and Briggs-rds, Woodbrook Apartments will consist of 368 family units when completed.

The rental units will offer central air conditioning, covered carports, enclosed private courts with patios and are designed for sound and visual privacy.

An access road off Eakin-rd will lead to paved and landscaped streets within the community, which has been designed around existing trees and other natural beauty.

When completed, the location will offer easy access to the new freeway system and it is located within a four-mile radius of Broad and High-sts.

Land planning for Woodbrook Apartments was performed by the firm of Marion V. Packard, landscape architects. Plans include a recreational park with swimming pool, a community building, laundry facilities, adequate parking areas and shrubbed courtyards.

Engineers for subdivision improvements are the firm of Evans Mechwart Hambleton and Tilton.

Owner-developers of Woodbrook Apartments are Joseph M. Briggs, Cecil D. Rose, Jr. and Joseph M. Briggs, Jr., whose firm has completed seven other Hilltop developments including Brookshire South.

"Woodbrook Apartments will offer many 'extras' to our clients since we have more than a usual interest in this development," Briggs said. "You see, this is homestead land — its been in our family three quarters of a century."

Financial arrangements for the multi-million dollar apartment park are being handled by the Central Savings and Loan Association

Rose announced that the first model unit is expected to be completed for showing about Nov. 15.

ORIGIN OF A NAME

In the year 1878 a group of businessmen, headed by W. J. McGloghlon and John R. Peel, met in the City of London, Ontario to form an Association for the mutual protection of their families.

In the apocryphal writings of the Old Testament, they found in the Book of The Maccabees,

"that in the dividing of the fruits of their victories in battle, they should reserve a part for the widows, the orphans and the disabled."

Because of this early recorded evidence of a crude form of mutual aid, leading to our modern day life insurance protection, came the name of our company,

NEWS on the local scene Friday brought two friends together for an exchange of "best wishes." Carle R. Wunderlich, left, president and general manager of Buckeye Mart, Inc., a department store chain which is entering the Columbus marketing area with three full-line stores, exchanges congratulations with Wes R. Kreger, also new on the local scene. He's the new general manager of The Spectator newspaper chain. Wunderlich's son, Ray, is a Spectator substitute carrier.

Buckeye Mart Enters Columbus Market Area

Buckeye Mart, fast growing department store chain in Ohio, has announced their entrance into the Columbus market with three full line department stores which will total about a quarter million square feet of merchandising area according to Carle R. Wunderlich, president and general manager of Buckeye Mart, Inc., a division of Cussins and Fearn.

Construction will start next week on 88,000 square feet for the first store, which will be located in the Berwick Plaza Shopping Center, Refugee-rd and State Route 33.

Berwick Plaza is a development of the Don M. Casto Organization. Don M. Casto Jr., president, said, "It was our plan from its inception to have a full line department store at Berwick Plaza. We are happy that such a fine and successful firm as Buckeye Mart selected Berwick Plaza for their first store in the Columbus market."

Construction of the second Buckeye Mart store, to be located at the intersection of Henderson and Reed-rds, 88,000 square feet, together with the third at 3600 Indianola-av, 48,000 square feet, will be completed by August, 1966. Arrangements for these stores are being handled by William Hadler of Hadler Realty, with Jack Morgan representing Cussins and Fearn.

The three new Buckeye Mart department stores together will create over 225 new local employment opportunities.

Convenient one-stop shopping and a complete selection of merchandise will be offered in 60 different departments with about 50 percent of the sales floor devoted to clothing.

In addition, famous name brand appliances, housewares, domestics, jewelry, furniture, floor coverings, tools, hardware, toys, sporting goods, records, cameras, health and beauty aids, tires and auto accessories, plumbing and heating equipment and a tremendous array of other merchandise will be available.

Cussins and Fearn, Buckeye Mart's parent organization, is well known all over Ohio. From a humble start in 1893 on Columbus' west side, it branched out and now operates 35 outlets under the C and F name. Nine of these are local. The balance are located in other principal communities throughout the state.

The Buckeye Mart image began with a first store at Wooster, O., in 1962. Its immediate success soon led to the opening of other Buckeyes in Lancaster, Fostoria, Mt. Vernon, Fremont, Zanesville and Athens. By the end of this year, the total will be ten, with plans already in progress for a minimum of 15 more within the near future.

"The opening of three new Buckeye Marts almost simultaneously is a big undertaking" said Wunderlich, "but we have confidence in the continued growth and prosperity of this area and intend to keep pace with its rapid development."

LOOK NATIONAL AWARD OF EXCELLENCE

ONE BY ONE the coupons are sorted by hand by Louise Schafer and Dorothy Lemming as the preliminary step in the coupon redemption service, performed by Central Ohio Retail Grocers Association. The association does not accept coupons from non-members, nor even from members, unless they subscribe to the service. Mrs. Lemming says it is not a great profit-making operation.

The 'Great Coupon Era' Should Not Be Overlooked By Historians

By CHARLES McDERMOTT

At odd times between elections or catching up with our creditors, the most frequent literature my wife brings in from the mail box is coupons.

These she sorts, counts, discounts, shuffles into piles and clips together. She marks her pantry memo, and prepares an elaborate market itinerary for Saturday while the bacon burns and the toast pops out on the floor.

At least once a week she accuses me of mislaying these precious bits of paper which she treats with more respect than those issued by the U.S. Treasury.

It requires no imagination to know where the coupons originate. They're color-coded, name-coded, product-coded, date-coded and action-coded to the three or four hours of TV and radio commercials which entertain us nightly.

Standing at the supermarket checkout counter while my wife and the checker count coupon discounts in cadence, "One, two, three, four — not good at our store," a great truth suddenly dawns upon you.

Behind your wife, the line is filled with other wives busily shuffling coupons and checking them against box tops, bottle tops, tubes, jars, paper packages, boxes, celery stalks and half-ripe bananas.

Suddenly, you realize, here is big business!

Here is a penny counting, dollar-saving real-life drama that moves more housewives than a song by Goulet.

The mystery of it all—the timing of grocery and drug counter stuffing to coincide with the mail box stuffing — the uncanny way of matching discounts almost to the penny by competitive companies —the enormity of saturating a neighborhood, a state, the whole busy nation with their product and coupon!

Counting Is Big Job!

But another part of the story is little known to the shopper. It takes place at the Central Ohio Retail Grocers Association's new headquarters at 1029 Harrisburg-pk.

Here the association services between 400 and 500 merchants in the Central Ohio marketing area of Franklin and 17 surrounding counties. It also handles coupons. About 70 merchants subscribe to the service. Coupons received represent about 300 national and regional distributors!

Dorothy Lemming of 1283 Indianola-av and Louise Schafer, 1487 Perry-st, executive co-directors, admit they have found no automated means of sorting the hundreds of thousands of coupons they receive. So they sort them by hand.

An intricate bookkeeping system periodically tallies the refund due each merchant and prepares an invoice against each distributor responsible for the coupons. The invoice identifies by code the redeeming store, quantity redeemed, and the related product.

Merchants get their check from the association about a week after remitting the coupons, according to Dorothy. The association, she says, often waits two to three months for reimbursement by the responsible manufacturer or agency.

Has Served 81 Years

The association here was founded in 1884 by a group of independent grocers who cooperated in keeping their stores closed on Sunday.

Officers of the association now are Fred C. Schiefer, president; Martin Golofsky, first vice-president; Richard E. Vance, second vice-president, and Carl Brown, treasurer. Nineteen members compose the board of directors.

Several area associations make up the Ohio Retail Food Dealers Association. Similar groups in the 50 states as well as several foreign countries comprise the National Association of Retail Grocers of U.S. (NARGUS), headquartered in Chicago, with an office and lobby in Washington, D.C.

There's one thing these grocers everywhere experience—the determined housewife who talks the merchant into exchanging the coupons for her favorite product rather than the coupon's. Of course, the grocer figures such losses into his markup, which in turn is passed on to the customer.

It will take a computer someday to figure who, at least momentarily, reaps a profit on the coupon. Meantime, I can smell the bacon burning . . .

SKIPPER Alex Incze and his crew make a last minute check of their sailboat, the "Mixed Emotions" before leaving for their eight-week sailing adventure in the Bahama Islands. From left, foreground are: First Mate Evelyn, Skipper Incze and, background, crew-gals Cathy, 15 and Karen, 14.

Under Buckeye Skies

By KEN MACH McCREARY

Mixed Emotions . . .

A good friend of mine is smack-dab in the middle of what must be conservatively called a "dream" vacation—leisurely sailing the clear, blue waters around that chain of picturesque British islands call the Bahamas, off the east coast of Florida, accompanied by three attractive gals.

Mack

The fortunate friend is veteran Columbus Police Sgt. Alex Incze—and before Chief Scholer and the boys at headquarters began raising their eyebrows, the three gals composing the crew are Al's lovely wife, Evelyn, and their teenage daughters, Cathy, 15, and Karen, 14.

Carrying the Incze family on their idyllic cruise is their 32-foot trimaran sailboat, named the "Mixed Emotions." Alex and his crew spent three years building the trim sloop rig craft from his original design. The main hull of the boat is accompanied by two 21-foot pontoons, which makes it one of the most stable craft afloat.

The "Mixed Emotion" was completed three years ago, and following two summers of shake-down sailing on Lake Erie, it was outfitted for this Bahaman cruise. Aboard are a complete galley, sleeping facilities for four, full medical supplies, a 25-horse power auxiliary outboard motor, an air compressor (for diving) and the thousands of other items necessary for an eight-week ocean cruise.

"Commodore" Incze and his gal-type crew left their Elmore-av home in Columbus on June 3, trailering the boat to their selected launch spot, Ft. Lauderdale, Fla. Following several days of rigging and checking of equipment, the skipper took the helm and pointed the trim blue boat eastward and the dream cruise was actually under sail.

Since then, the adventursome Columbus family has been leisurely enjoying their aquatic vacation, really away from it all — swimming, scuba diving, exploring, photographing the spectacular underwater wonderland and just plain sightseeing. Their ports of call in the Bahamas are various—including West End of Grand Bahama Island, Spanish Wells and many islands of the chain which I've never heard of. All tolled, the "Mixed Emotions" is expected to log over 1000 miles before the trip is over.

At last report, when Skipper Al checked in by mail last week, they were taking in the sights of Nassau, and the entire voyage was proceeding well, including some unplanned adventures. Incze did touch one sore spot in this fisherman's heart—the reports that down in those tropical Atlantic waters, they don't keep any fish under five pounds.

If the storybook cruise concludes as smoothly as it began, the Incze family will be pulling back into the driveway of their North Side Columbus home about Aug. 2. And you can bet that the teenage crew members, Cathy and Karen, will have plenty of sea-tales to tell their friends and classmates . . . and the skipper and his first mate probably will too.

And from where we sit, it's a great vacation adventure and we take our hat off to the adventuresome Incze family for having the spirit, the know-how and the ability to make a distant dream become a reality.

We all live in the past because there is nothing else to live in. To live in the present is like proposing to sit on a pin. It is too minute, it is too slight a support, it is too uncomfortable a posture, and it is of necessity followed immediately by totally different experiences, analogous to those of jumping up with a yell.—Gilbert K. LOCAL SCOUTS examine flood damage in Denver enroute to the Philmont Scout Ranch, Cimarron, N. Mex. Wearing cowboy hats and Philmont neckerchiefs are, from left to right, Jim Kelley, Ken Gack, Dick Almay, one of the Spectator correspondents on the trip, Mike Grommersch and Marvin Pepper.

Scouts Stop In Denver On Way To Philmont

Ed. Note: Following is the second report from 53 Central Ohio Explorer and Boy Scouts and their leaders who left June 25 for Philmont National Scout Ranch, Cimarron, N. Mex. Traveling by train, the boys are seeing Chicago and Denver on the way.

By STEVE SCHUSTER
And RICHARD ALMAY
Spectator Philmont Reporters

Upon arriving in Denver early Sunday morning, June 22, we boarded a bus and saw the terrible destruction caused by the flooding of the South Platte River.

Cars were wrecked, buildings damaged, railroad tracks torn up and bridges washed out.

We left Denver on our bus tour and headed up into the was Red Rock State Park, about half-way up the mountains. A natural amphitheater is the main attraction. The theater seats 12,000 and had a capacity crowd last year when the Beatles appeared.

Next we toured Buffalo Bill's museum and saw his tomb on top of Lookout Mountain. From this mountain, 8100 feet high, we could see for 100 miles.

After leaving the mountain, we headed back to Denver. There, on account of the flood, we had to board two buses instead of a train for the hour and a half ride to Colorado Springs, where we spent the night at the Air Force Academy.

After a real western movie at the academy theater, we hit the sack, for we knew the next day would be very long.

ROUNDUP—

Girl Scouts Plan, Make Potlatches

EDITOR'S NOTE: Cheryl Porter, 2904 Crescentdr, will represent The Spectator as its official correspondent at the 1965 Senior Girl Scout Roundup, which will be held July 15 to 28 in Farragut, Idaho. This is the third of a series of articles on the roundup.

By CHERYL PORTER

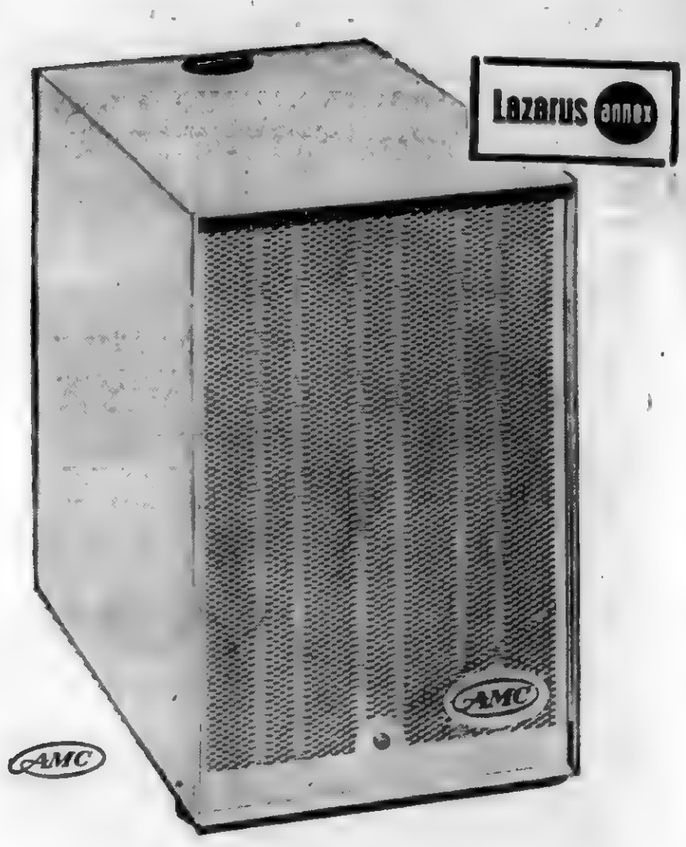
Girl Scouts everywhere are busy preparing their potlatch gifts to be exchanged with their sister Girl Scouts and Girl Guides at the fourth triannual Senior Girl Scout Roundup to be held July 5 to 28 on the shorts of Lake Pend Oreille at Farragut, Idaho.

The potlatch is a traditional Indian symbol of friendship.

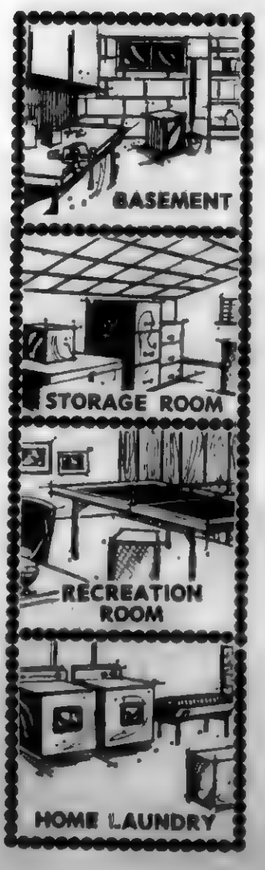
Potlatch idea originated from a myth of the Northwest Coastal Indians. Each tribe had its own variation of the potlatch.

Near the crossroads of these ancient Indian exchanges, the girls attending the 1965 Roundup will give potlatches with pride and a feeling of friendship, the same ideas as conveyed in the old custom. Potlaches were discussed at pre-Roundup meetings. They were to be simple and their quality reflected in some phase of a girl's community or home state.

Each of the seven patrols going to Idaho has a different potlatch. Each girl may only take 50 potlatch gifts with her. She will exchange her homemade gifts at campfires, meals, or special meetings of several patrols or troops.



Each patrol at Roundup will have a demonstration typical of the community in which a girl lives. These demonstrations consisting of song, dances, cooking projects or skits usually tie in with the potlatch gifts. Legendary heroes, folk figures, industries, early pioneers, historic events, and festivals are some of the themes used in choosing a patrol demonstration.



All props and costumes used in the demonstrations must be sent to Roundup since nothing is provided for the demonstration there.

Demonstrations are presented each day throughout the camp. One patrol presents their demonstration at least three times while a Roundup. If a demonstration proves to be unusual and very popular, it is sent to the Central Arena to be seen by all visitors and guests.

Among the Seal of Ohio delegation there will be demonstrations from the Nub patrol showing the processing of wool, the Cut-Ups in a quilting bee skit, the Dieweibers in a skit of the living loom, the Pumpkin patrol telling the origin of the Circleville Pumpkin Show, the Netab patrol with Indian beading, the Tomato Juice Corps showing the processing of tomato juice, and the Buckeye Battelles making fagots.

Bexley Ponders Zoning, Charter Change

JEFFREY WOODS' nature trails and the path along Alum Creek are explored regularly by youngsters from the city's playgrounds. Last Friday a group from Cassingham Playground, under the leadership of Marilyn Kurtz and James Ort, spent the day at Jeffrey with games, walks in the woods, a picnic lunch and, finally, a swim in the pool. Pausing along the creek were Cris Weiner, Steve Shipley, Shelton Collier, Brough Jones, Steve Brubaker, Steve Weiner, Mike Weiner, Bob Essig, Dirk DeJong, Joni Topolosky, Cini Novak, Katie Murphy and leader, James Ort. Others in the group, not included in the photo, were Chuck Weiner, Barbara Herwald, Diane Rumberger, Laura Brubaker, Cathy Moriarty, Andy Albershardt and Marilyn Kurtz, leader. (More pictures of activities at Jeffrey Mansion are inside.)

A request for rezoning to permit the construction of town houses on the east side of Parkview, north of Brydenrd and, at the same time, a vigorous protest to the plan by about 25 bordering property owners, was heard by Bexley Council Tuesday night.

The delegation objected to the plan despite the fact that new apartments have been constructed on the west side of the street, south of Bryden. These were built on vacant land or replaced deteriorating property, they said, while the proposed building would replace a quality home and would be adjacent to others of equal value.

The request was referred to committee for study.

Council also thoughtfully examined the proposed amendments to the city charter, to be placed on the fall ballot, before directing City Solicitor Howard Park to prepare the ordinances.

The amendments are to sections defining the duties of mayor and the succession to the office.

In its present form the charter requires that, should the office of mayor become vacant it must be assumed by council president until the first of January following the next general election.

Also, the duties of service director and safety director must be performed by the mayor.

Proposed changes would give council the power to, by majority vote, fill the office of mayor from one of its own members, or from qualified voters of the city, to serve until the next regular election.

And council would also, if the amendments are approved be empowered to separate the offices of safety and service director from the mayor's duties, should cincumstances make the move desirable.

The rezoning request that would permit construction of town houses on the northeast corner of Parkview and Bryden-rd was made by C. G. Auer, owner of the property, and Walter Knapp, 1052 Berkely-rd.

They would be of the luxury type, the two explained, and contain three bedrooms, two and a half baths, family room and private patio, and have an open fireplace in the living room. Rental would be about $250 a month.

"We are both retired," Auer explained, "and know the need for this (type of housing) in Bexley. People want to move from big, single residences into something that still has all the comfort and conveniences they have had.

"I would live in one of these town houses myself," he concluded.

They also pointed out that the building, two stories high and of attractive, brick construction, would be an asset to the neighborhood.

Residents' objections were expressed by Robert Coates of 2173 Bryden-rd. Their opinion, he said, is that the apartments would change the character of the neighborhood.

Council also discussed the need for a city ordinance regarding unnecessary noise in the city, and instructed Park to prepare such a measure.

THE OTHER SIDE Of The Story

By Robert W. Reider

Impending adjournment of the Ohio General Assembly won't come too soon for most of the weary lawmakers.

The legislature has been in almost constant session since last November when a wily Governor Rhodes called a lame-duck session to ram through a program that covered the waterfront, ranging from his third (in less than three years) multi-million dollar bond issue to the abostive apportionment program subsequently repudiated by an aroused electorate [illegible] and quickly disclaimed by the politically agile Rhodes.

This session just has to be recorded by observers as one of the worst. Where was the Governor's leadership? What happened to his self-proclaimed talents for getting along with the legislative body?

These traits were strangely missing in this session as the G.O.P. leadership grumbled regularly and publicly about bungling Administration tactics that left their membership red-faced, frustrated and floundering.

Ohio's chameleon Governor double-crossed Scranton at the Republican Convention last summer only to run out on Goldwater in the fall. Really now, did Ted Gray, the Senate leader, expect any different treatment?

The Governor is too busy these days giving his worn-out speech taking credit for bringing in industry that was planning to come to Ohio all along anyway. He's too busy cutting ribbons, camping out in Southern Ohio, and taking yacht trips in Lake Erie to be bothered with Ohio's record-budget, the mentally ill, educational needs and a score of other state responsibilities that merit immediate, on-the-spot attention. He has yet to open any highways that were started under his administration). When the going gets rough, he just takes off on a junket.

Pity the Governor's successor. He'll need divine help to clean up the mess that will be his inheritance.

TO ALL BEXLEYITES

Jeffrey Is Second Home

Jeffrey, its hospitable old English-style mansion, its acres of rolling lawns and the woods bordering Alum Creek, for 24 years has been the center of Bexley's recreation and social life.

During June, 2918 Bexley residents and their guests, members of 45 separate groups, attended meetings and events held in the mansion: And in addition, many more groups used the grounds for cookouts and picnics.

Its use available to Bexley residents without charge, Jeffrey Mansion, 165 N. Parkview-av, was donated to the city in 1941 by Robert H. Jeffrey.

It was first used to house student nurses at Children's Hospital until the nurses' home was built and then, for a short time during World War II, for airmen at Lockbourne AFB.

Since 1944, the 13-room mansion and 37 acres of ground has been managed and maintained by the Recreation Department. Use of the facilities is limited to Bexley residents and city groups, schools, churches and clubs. It is never rented out.

Bexley children have "grown up socially" at Jeffrey.

As toddlers they search for Easter eggs on the grounds, later wander through the woods on nature hikes conducted by the recreation department and attend school-sponsored club meetings and parties in the mansion.

And finally, there is the all-night party following high school graduation. Staged annually by parents of the graduates, the mansion is decorated from basement to third floor for the event. There are games, dancing on the patio, a midnight supper and at dawn, a swim in the pool followed by breakfast.

Newcomers also are officially welcomed at the annual party staged by Bexley Celebrations Association.

And for everyone in the city, the mansion and facilities are available on request.

The kitchen is equipped with range and refrigerator, there are dining rooms for teas and luncheons, card tables, banquet tables, folding chairs, a public address system, indoor and outdoor stages and dancing areas, a

Study To Be Basis Of Recreation Plan

Bexley residents who have not yet filled out and returned their questionnaires for the recreation survey currently being conducted in the city, are urged to do so before the end of the month.

Purpose of the study is to devise a program of city recreation and provide facilities desired by Bexley residents. Results of the survey will be compiled into a recommendation to be submitted to the Recreation Board for action.

The committee conducting the survey is composed of representatives of Bexley Council, Recreation Board, school administration and civic organizations, as well as all school, church, service and social groups in the city. A professional consultant will work with the committee in compiling the report.

Every resident of the city is invited to have a hand in devising a comprehensive recreation program by registering his wishes.

Questionnaires are available from the city's churches and temples, at the Jewish Center or the Recreation Department at Jeffrey Mansion.

The forms will be mailed on request by calling Mrs. Robert Greene, 2722 Bryden-rd, BE. 1-4462, or the recreation secretary, Mrs. Alma McGuire, at Jeffrey Mansion, CL. 8-5755, weekdays from 1 to 5 p.m.

Meltons Establish Professorship Of Jewish History At Ohio State

Establishment of a Samuel and Esther Melton Professorship of Jewish History and Studies at Ohio State University, supported by a gift from Mr. and Mrs. Samuel M. Melton of 435 N. Columbia-av, has been approved by OSU's Board of Trustees.

The position will be within the department of history.

Mr. and Mrs. Melton will contribute $20,000 a year for a trial period up to five years. If it is decided to continue the professorship on a permanent basis, the Meltons will give an additional $250,000 for its support.

Melton attributed, as the inspiration of his gift, a course in philosophy he had studied at Ohio State, taught by Dr. Albert R. Chandler.

"We covered the entire series of philosophers from Socrates to Darwin," he said. "I remember having touched on the patriarchs and prophets of Israel without very much emphasis. Yet I was sufficiently impressed with the ethical and moral teachings of the prophets . . . and selected the prophets as my thesis."

"I sincerely believe," he continued, "that the course of civilization since the patriarchs and prophets has been favorably influenced with the teachings of ethics, morals, justice and peace, and that more students and people should be exposed to this information."

Mr. and Mrs. Melton also established in 1959, the Melton Research Center of the Teachers Institute and Seminary College of Jewish Studies, Jewish Theological Seminary of America, New York City. He is president of the lay board of the research center.

Melton, a 1923 graduate of Ohio State with a bachelor of science degree, is a well-

Woodcrest . . .

Members of the Woodcrest Playground turned actors last Friday in the Drama Festival held at Courtright School. They did a take-off on "Cinderella" entitled "Cinderetta." This version had a skateboard replace the pumpkin and a tennis shoe instead of the glass slipper.

Pam and Cindy Squires, Michelli Gardner, Pat Swonger, Debbie Pinoni, Mary Ann Wilkinson, Rick Kearns, Keith Taylor, Jerry Paynter, Debby Hughes, Billy Smith, Sonny Jolly, and Patty Saunders were in the cast.

The Bicycle Rodeo, held on July 2, rounded-up some 50 riders. The "Best-Decorated Bicycles" belonged to Cathy Buchanan, Dave Schutt, Elizabeth Casserly, Robin Lewis, Patty George. In the cross-country, Karen Crank won first place with Dave Schutt, Jerry Paynter, Rita Hueckel and Dave George peddling behind. In the sprints, Mary Ann Wilkinson and Cathy Dettimore won the girl's 9 and under, and John Casserly and Ken Willis taking the boy's 9 and under division.

Karen Wilkinson and Rita Hueckel won the girl's 10 to 12 bracket and Butch Willis and Duane White swept the 10 to 12 boy's honors. Charley Wilkinson and Richard Dixon won the older boys section.

The "Slow Race" — last one wins — had the most interest. The girl's division winners were Elizabeth Casserly, Patty George, Sue Jolly, Carolyn Border, and Karen Wilkinson.

In the boy's division, David George, Billy Smith and Bobby McDonald finished last to win.

The Indian Village Day Camp for the Far East side playground's began this week. The Woodcrest members that went are:

Chuck Himes, Doug and Dan Wilson, Connie Sadler, Lisa Corwin, Paul Schott, Michelli Gardner, Becky Campbell, Mike Reed, Pam and Patty Songer, Debbie Gratton, Steve Thompson, Jackie Eisenaugle and Billy Smith.

Team 1 scored 12 runs in the last of the fifth to hold on to first place of the Junior Jet League. They downed Team 6, 17-16, in the wildest scoring show yet. Team 5 remained a half game behind, winning a tighter battle with Team 3, 4-3. Steve Oty tripled and homered in vain for Team 3.

The Woodcrest girl's softball team fell, 12-11, to Leawood last Wednesday night.

James Road . . .

"The Gingerbread Man" was the play presented by Anita Harness, Donna Albanese, Kim Kochalko, Naz Eramo, Steve Tatman, Dale Doughty, Deannie Nelson and Cathy Poe at the Drama Festival.

Registration is still open at James Road for anyone who wishes to do so.

After not having a junior girls' softball team for several years, James Road has found itself overwhelmed with the number of girls represented on the team. They are Robin Mauger, Sandy Price, Gerarda Sweetman, Kim Kochalko, Kathy McDaniel, Lesle Seckel, Caren Fitch, Janie Morro, Shawn Brown, Cathy Poe, Mary Ann Carpenter, Cindy Stull, Kathy Knapp, Dorothy Dowler, Terrie Dowler, Vicki Neymeyer, Teresa Murray, Donna Albanese, Jackie Albanese, Carole Buttler and Anita Harness.

Junior Jet standings at the end of the second week of play are 10 to 12 year old league: Team 2 leads the league with three wins and no losses; 8 and 9 year old league: Teams 2, 3 and 4 are tied with two wins and two losses each.

James Road's junior boys' softball team has a record of two wins and no losses, after defeating Scottwood by a score of 16 to 3.

The Track and Field meet will be held at South High School, July 16. Any boys or girls interested in participating should see Mr. Cooper for details.

Willis Park . . .

In Junior Jet play this week, Team 2 opened up a one-game margin over Team 3 for first place.

Some of the outstanding players this year are:

El Rancho Polo Game Planned For Sunday

The Columbus El Rancho Polo Club goes into action this Sunday as a two-goal underdog when it meets the powerful Cincinnati Polo Club. El Rancho lost to Cincinnati 8-6, earlier this season in the Queen City.

However, El Rancho looked strong and ready as it defeated Dayton 4-1, two weeks ago in the Columbus home opener.

Columbus polo fans attending Sunday's action will see two of Ohio's finest polo players ride against each other. Playing number one for Cincinnati will be Red Caldwell, "Deacon of Ohio Polo." Caldwell will be opposed by the Columbus polo veteran, Walter Shapter.

Game time Sunday is 3 p.m. at the El Rancho Club on Route 161 just west of the freeway. Gate proceeds from every home game go to the American Cancer Society.

Welding, Auto Parts Lead Bexley Teams

Central Ohio Welding defeated Bexley Methodist 14 to 13 in the playoff game of the first round of the Bexley Old Timers' League. Both teams finished the first round with 4-1 records.

The existing 10-inning affair started with a bang as Central Ohio Welding scored eight runs in the first inning. However, Bexley Methodist battled back to tie the score by the fourth inning. Central Ohio Welding finally won in the tenth inning when Bexley Methodist couldn't match Welding's go - ahead run scored in the top of the tenth.

Steve Cartwright, Chet Kosciuck and Bill Jones led the hitting for Central Ohio Welding. Fritz Ziegler did an outstanding job in the outfield.

Methodist hitting was led by Ken Kauffman, Al Press and Sig Munster. Charlie Salt made several good fielding plays for the Methodists.

The Wilson Auto Parts team held on to its undefeated lead in the Bexley "Under 30" League last week.

NATURALLY GRAY HAIR...
Is it be auty or abomination? The truth is it could be either or neither. The problem of whether you should brighten your natural gray, go frankly silver, or go back to a becoming color depends largely on the vitality and clarity of your skin tones. If your skin is drab and lifeless there isn't a gray hair tone in the world that would be becoming to you. If you must stay gray, regardless, let us advise you about the proper gentle makeup to put the sparkle back in his eye.

THE PROMISE
We see it in the eyes of every little girl—the promise of unfolding womanhood and joyous utter femininity. We wish to offer a tribute to the wise Mother who knows instinctively that much that is vital to a woman's happiness must be learned very early from another woman. It is a lucky little girl who can learn these lessons just observing her own Mother's care of her own unfolding beauty. The greatest lesson of all is that Mama is not afraid of the years . . . that Mama is secure in the knowledge that there is a special quality of charm for lovely ladies of every age.
The budding woman is most secure who acquires a personal beautician as early as a personal physician. Such a child has a truly wise Mother

A MOTHER'S DAY PRESENT TO A SON
We know a woman who always sends a thoughtful gift and a "Thank you for being such a wonderful son," letter to her son every Mother's day. A switch, but a nice one, don't you think?

NEGLECTED HANDS
Many women who take excellent care of their face and hair display the most shocking neglect of their hands. Regular manicures should be as much a part of a total beauty program as clean hair. Well-cared-for hands are never ugly.

HOLY SPIRIT SOCIETY

A Thursday evening social hour for the Holy Spirit Altar and Rosary Society will follow recitation of the Rosary in the church tonight at 7:30. All women are asked to bring an inexpensive gift for game awards.

MRS. E. A. DONNAN, 90 Ashbourne-rd, residential vice-chairman for United Appeal of Franklin County 1965 campaign in the areas of East Berwick, Mid-East, Reynoldsburg and Whitehall, points out the districts on an area map to her area chairmen, at a recent coffee party in her home. From left are: Mrs. Robert Lazarus, Jr., Mrs. J. Ralston Werum, Mrs. Donnan, Mrs. Bert Riker, Mrs. Francis Fischback. Not shown is Mrs. William Willis.

MRS. DONNAN APPOINTS CHAIRMEN FOR 1965 UNITED APPEAL CAMPAIGN

Mrs. E. A. Donnan, 90 Ashbourne-rd, who is this year serving as vice-chairman for the residential area which includes East, Berwick, Mid-East, Reynoldsburg and Whitehall, was hostess to a coffee party in her home recently, honoring the area chairmen whom she has appointed to serve in the residential solicitation for the United Appeal 1965 campaign.

Guests included Mrs. J. Ralston Werum, 2130 E. Broad-st, area chairman for East; Mrs. Bert Ricker, 90 N. Merkle-rd, area chairman for Berwick; Mrs. Francis Fischback, 6809 Laird-av, Reynoldsburg, who is chairman in that area; and Mrs. William Willis of 1158 S. Waverly-st, Mid-East area chairman. Also present was Mrs. Robert Lazarus, Jr., 2094 Park Hill-dr, who heads the residential solicitation for Franklin County this year.

Mrs. Donnan's responsibility is recruitment of women volunteers for the above named areas. Area chairmen will appoint colonels and captains who will, in turn, recruit women to serve as volunteers in the neighborhood solicitation which is the sole responsibility of women in the annual United Appeal campaign. On Residentital Solicitation Day, Oct. 11, over 5000 women volunteers will visit each home.

"The need for volunteers is very great," said Mrs. Donnan. "Our responsibility to see that each household has an opportunity to contribute to the 1965 campaign is a far-reaching one, and requires much organization and detail, much faithful and often recurring checking by the volunteers who do the 'campaign roots work'."

Mrs. Donnan brings to the United Appeal Campaign of Franklin County a wealth of experience as chairman of the Dayton, O., United Appeal Residential Solicitation and also as chairman of its small business division.

She is president of the Columbus Vassar Club, chairman for a Twig of Children's Hospital and a volunteer at the Center of Science and Industry. She is the mother of two children: Addie, 18, and Missy, 16.

William S. Guthrie, general chairman for the 1965 United Appeal Campaign in Franklin County, commenting on Mrs. Donnan's appointment by residential chairman, Mrs. Robert Lazarus, Jr., said: "The leadership and responsibility in the residential division is one of the greatest civic opportunities for service available to women." He urged that volunteers immediately make known their availability to Mrs. Donnan and her area chairmen by calling 228-5696, residential division.

The big news at the playground this week was the girls' softball game against Etna Road. Norton Field won, 12-9. Outstanding players for Norton Field were Debbie Williams, Sue Hatfield, Sharon Chapman and Grace Stein. Next week the girls play Kae Avenue.

The boys lost to Etna Road, 20-12. Bill Simpson and Van Pickerell each had three hits for Norton Field. The junior boys also lost to Etna Road, 12-5. Rick and Rock Napier played outstanding ball but in a losing cause.

Juanita Williams has been having a large turnout for arts and crafts every afternoon at 2. Last week the children made jewelry boxes and napkin holders. Plans for the week of July 12 include lanyards, potholders and plaster of paris.

East Main . . .

Randy Schroyer won the horseshoe tournament in the nine-12 age group and Wayne Church won in the 13-15 age group. Mary Richart won in the girls' division, nine-12.

In softball the boys in the 13-15 age group won their game against Beechwood, 5-3.

Kae Avenue . . .

A Doll and Hobby Show along with a tetherball tournament are the main playground attractions for the week of July 12. Also scheduled will be two ball games with Norton Field and the daily arts and crafts program.

Etna Road . . .

The special event at Etna Road playground for the week of July 5 was Chef boxing Thursday with Rolland Boston and Jeff Mark as the winners. Following the boxing a wiener roast was held. The results of the softball games were the boys nine-12 won 20-8 over Norton Field, the boys 13-15 won, 16-9, over Norton Field and the girls' team lost, 12-9, to Norton Field.

Beechwood . . .

SPEAKERS' RULE FUSS

Campus Group Sets Statehouse March

Plans for a "massive" march on the State House this afternoon (Thursday) were announced Wednesday by a spokesman for the Free Speech Front (FSF) at Ohio State University. The demonstration was organized to protest action by the OSU Board of Trustees in continuing the university's controversial speakers' rule.

Miss Toby Emmer, FSF spokesman, said she expects "several thousand persons—both students and faculty — to participate." The group plans to submit a petition "to someone" at the State House.

Governor James A. Rhodes, contacted by the group earlier this week, informed them he would not be in the city. A group spokesman reported that contact was also made with John M. McElroy, administrative to Rhodes. Reportedly, McElroy said he "probably would not" meet with the group because "I am swamped with work now that the legislature is in its wind-up weeks."

A city-issued parade permit for the march seemed unlikely. Columbus Safety Director Frederick J. Simon said he would not issue a permit unless FSF agreed to comply with all city ordinances. City law says that such permits are not issued "in congested areas," except between the hours of 6 p.m. and midnight or on Sundays, holidays and special occasions.

The FSF march was scheduled to begin at noon today with a rally on the campus. The march to the State House was to have begun at 1:30 p.m. An FSF spokesman said marchers would use the sidewalk if they are not granted a permit to march in the street.

Central Market Curb Stands Get Reprieve

Sidewalk stand operators in the Central Market area apparently will get an indefinite reprieve from a City Department of Health order which would have shut most of them down July 31.

A recent order issued by Dr. Robert C. Adams, environmental health director, instructed stand operators to move onto Central Market property or face the loss of their licenses which expire on July 31.

Dr. Adams explained that his order was issued to prevent the continued operation of stands in the area after the existing markethouse is torn down. More than 30 market merchants, members of the Central Market Association, have pledged financial support to construction of a new markethouse in the Market-Mohawk area.

Dr. Adams said his order was directed to those merchants who did not plan to participate in the new market venure. He explained that he did not want the Department of Health to be committed to an annual license which would carry beyond the time the existing Central Market is torn down.

DeVore Intercedes

City Councilman Ronald De Vore interceded in behalf of those who currently operate stands, but do not plan to locate in the proposed new markethouse. He asked if Liam Melvin, senior assistant the Department of Health could issue a conditional license, and was told by Wil-attorney, that a conditional license could be issued.

Dr. Adams agreed to issuing licenses which would permit all stands to operate until the present Central Market is vacated. He said such an arrangement would serve his purpose of clearing the entire Central Market area at the same time.

Six of the city's seven councilmen have indicated that they will cooperate in relocating the market by negotiating a lease agreement which would permit building a new markethouse on land to be purchased by the city at Fourth and Mound-sts. Plans call for the city to sell the present market site to United Redevelopment Corp., developers of the Market-Mohawk area, for about $229,000.

The proposed new market site can be purchased by the city for $134,000. The city would lease the land to the Central Market Association at an annual cost o two percent of the rentals charged by the association to tenants.

Council has instructed Service Director Warren J. Cremean to negotiate a 50-year lease agreement with Central Market Association. When negotiations are complete, the lease agreement is to be submitted to council for final approval.

Bike Hikes, Games, Swimming At Jeffrey On Tap In Bexley Playground Program

Organized summer play programs for Bexley youngsters are being conducted at the city's three playgrounds —Maryland, Cassingham and Montrose— under the direction of Bexley recreation director, Joel S. Poetker.

Parents are encouraged by Poetker to send their children to the nearest playground to take advantage of safe, supervised play and an interesting program of planned events.

Younger children are guided by playground leaders, starting at 9 a.m., in group games and handcrafts. The afternoon sessions are devoted to story telling, quiet games and handcrafts.

During handcraft periods children may make foam dolls, bird houses, belts and other items.

Almost weekly there will be special events such as bicycle safety and poster contests, pet show presentation of plays, and bike hikes to Jeffrey Mansion for nature walks, picnics and swimming.

Planned events will be listed on playground bulletin boards and in The Spectator.

The individual playground events include:

Cassingham . . .

Cassingham playground leaders, Marilyn Kurtz and James Ort, took 21 boys and girls on a special "playday" at Jeffrey Mansion Thursday. Arriving at 9:30 a.m., boys and girls divided into teams for kickball and whiffleball games.

After a hike through the Jeffrey woods along Alum Creek, the group ate a picnic lunch.

Montrose . . .

Montrose playground leaders, Vicki Howe and David Weis, are planning a "bike hike" for Thursday, July 22.

The groups will leave Montrose playground at 9:30 a.m. or Jeffrey Mansion. The day's activities will include games, contests, picnic lunch, and swimming at the Bexley Pool.

Only Montrose playground children eight years of age and older may attend. All interested should see the playground leaders for details.

Playgrounds Tabulate Busy Week's Results

In the Bexley Junior Softball League for boys 13 through 15, two games were played this week.

In a Tuesday morning game Cassingham defeated the visiting Maryland team in a close, hard fought contest by a score of 10 to 9.

Leading the Cassingham attack was pitcher Steve Callif who had three hits in four at bats. Third-baseman Jack Knauer and left-fielder Carl Friedland each scored two runs.

Three hits by left-fielder Jeff Ralph and two hits each by pitchers Bob Marshall, third baseman Eddie Hoffman and catcher Louie Bernhart led the Maryland hit effort.

Maryland bounced back on Thursday from the earlier defeat to whip visiting Montrose 13 to 11. Eddie Hoffman, Rich Grow, Tom Parker and Nick Montel each collected three hits to lead Maryland. Hoffman's and Montel's hits included a home run for each player.

Montrose received strong support in a losing effort from Rob Mauger who, with four for four, maintained his perfect hitting record this season, and Sam Gingrich whose three hits in four at bats included a home run.

MRS. GLENN D. KARSHNER of Karshner Ceramics learns some dos and don'ts in carving from Mrs. Terry Johnstone, an instructor from Georgia, who conducted a workshop for members of Ceramics Anonymous. Looking on is Orville Borror, instructor in ceramics at Gladden Community House. They are preparing for the annual Ceramics Festival to be held in September.

Ceramic Festival Dated Sept. 10, 11, 12

Think back a few years. Remember the fun you used to have as a child making mud pies and popping them into an oven fashioned from stones. Mother probably raised a fuss over the ingredients you spilled on your clothes, nevertheless, you had a good time.

The members of Ceramics Anonymous (Addicts to Mud) are still having a good time . . . but they have advanced considerably from the mud pies of long ago. In place of the pies are real works of art, ranging from ash trays to the very detailed figurines.

Ceramics Anonymous is an organization, which was started to educate and promote ceramics as a hobby the whole family may participate in. To better inform the public in the field of ceramic hobbies, Ceramics Anonymous is holding its annual Ceramic Festival at the Youth Center, Ohio Exposition Grounds, Sept. 10, 11 and 12.

The festival will have displays of all related hobbies, such as jewelry making, mosaics, glass bending, copper enameling, and porcelain and wheel throwing. In addition to the displays, well-known artists will be giving half hour demonstrations throughout the exhibit.

Marc Bellaire, underglaze and brush decoration specialist, will emcee the show featuring Jake Lucas, porcelain technique; Carlie Tart, wheel throwing and decoration; Eleanor Taylor, brush strokes and design; Bea Mathney, china painting technique and Helen Elliott, who is coming here from Texas to demonstrate her specialty, draping of porcelain dolls.

A million dollars worth of demonstrations by these artists is expected to be witnessed by nearly 3,000 persons. Competition is open to all ceramists with cash prizes, plaques and ribbons going to the winners. Friday, Sept. 10, has been designated as "Senior Citizens Day" and all in that category will be admitted at half price or 25 cents.

Ceramics Anonymous president is Mrs. Clark A. Wright and co-show chairmen are Kenneth and Gevena Cathel. Mrs. Cathel will be happy to discuss any part of the show or tell any present ceramist how to enter competition. She may be reached at 224-7789.

Handicapped Youngsters Invited To Pre-School

The door to handicapped children seeking pre-schooling is open at the Franklin County Society for Crippled Children. Applications of children, three, four and five years of age are now being accepted by the society for the fall nursery school and kindergarten classes.

Any orthopedically handicapped child, regardless of cause of crippling, is eligible for these classes if he has sufficient intellect to benefit from the program. The Society's aim is to provide pre-school activities for those children who might be denied such experience because of physical limitations.

Classes will start after Labor Day and will be conducted at the Society's Treatment Center, 555 S. Monroe-av. The children will attend classes five half days per week. There will be six classes, limited to eight children in each class. Activities and curriculum will be geared to the capabilities of the children.

Parents of physically handicapped children interested in this program should telephone the Society at 253-5523 for an interview. The educational program is a direct service provided by Easter Seal funds and was initiated in 1962.

PLAN POTLUCK

Columbus Chapter, 37th Division Veterans and Ladies, will meet at the home of Jack and Doris Wander, 1780 Brinwood-ct, July 24 for a potluck. Members are to bring a covered dish, meat will be furnished.

Slates Picnic, Regular Meet

Two summer events are being planned by the Parents' Group of the Franklin County Society for Crippled Children, a family picnic on Saturday, July 17, and the regular monthly meeting on Wednesday, July 21.

FAMOUS OLD HOME INCLUDED IN TOUR

One of the finest of the old houses in Worthington, the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wilson H. Posey, 72 E. North-st, will be open for the 10th Tour of Homes to be held on Sunday, July 25, from noon to 5 p.m.

This twin-chimney brick colonial stood on the southwest corner of High and North-sts from the time it was built in the early 1800's until it was moved to its present location about 40 years ago.

The house is noted not only for its historical interest but also for its structure. The original stairway, woodwork, doors and ash flooring have been retained. The handsome mantel pieces still stand in the four rooms of the old house. Solid brick walls have been added to the rear.

Of special interest are old lamps and the fine collection of old clocks, hobbies of the Poseys; and their English banquet table, older than the house itself.

In Worthington, it is known as the Burr House for Erastus Burr, the second Episcopal bishop of Ohio, lived in it when he was rector of St. John's Church from 1833 to 1838. The home was also occupied by another noted clergyman, Rev. Thomas Woodrow, the grandfather of President Woodrow Wilson, who lived in it when he was minister to the Worthington Presbyterian Church from 1849 to 1857.

The Posey house is one of seven on the tour. Others are the homes of: Mr. and Mrs. V. N. Holderman, 380 Tucker-dr; Mrs. Frank Medick, 340 Tucker-dr; Mrs. Eli Long, 653 Oxford-st; Mr. and Mrs. O. F. Garrett, 695 Oxford-st; Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Tuller, 5830 Sawmill-rd, and Miss Helen Carroll, 62 E. Lincoln-av.

THE POSEY HOUSE, 72 E. North-st, will be one of the seven houses on the 10th annual Tour of Homes, sponsored by the Worthington Historical Society, on Sunday, July 25, from noon to 5 p.m. The house, one of Worthington's fine old homes, was occupied by two noted clergymen of an early day. They were Erastus Burr, the second Episcopal bishop of Ohio, and Rev. Thomas Woodrow, the grandfather of President Woodrow Wilson.

Proceeds of the tour will be used by the Worthington Historical Society to continue their work of restoring the Orange Johnson House, 956 High-st. Mrs. Victor A. Feldmiller, 465 Loveman-av, is general chairman.

Tickets may be purchased the day of the tour at the Sharon Memorial Building, 137 E. Granville-rd.

Women attending the tour are requested not to wear spike heels.

Twig 19 Offers 10 Rides For $1

Exclusive This Week: Bathtub Ring Broken!

By ADELINE DALEY

Do you know what's wrong with being a housewife (Aside from about 2000 other things)? All of the work sounds dull. Which isn't surprising, because it IS dull. Consider, though, that many occupations—in government, sports, the theater — sound more interesting because their doings are covered by the press.

Supposing that the daily routine of a housewife was accorded the same treatment, wouldn't her life appear less drab? For example:

"Plumbers were rushed to the Daley home yesterday to fix a stopped-up pipe in the kitchen sink which may have forestalled a disaster comparable to the Johnstown Flood of 1906.

"Since one of the Daley children was reported to have thrown apricot pits down the drain, authorities speculated this might have caused the stoppage.

"Arriving on the scene later, Mr. Daley, co-owner of the home, conferred with officials to ask them if there were any damages. 'About $28.50, sir,' was the reply. He made no printable comment."

• • •

"Mrs. A. Daley today admitted that her casserole, 'Heavenly Ham Bake,' was actually another disguise for the left-over ham she had been serving for three days running. The ruse was uncovered by the clever detective work of her family who became suspicious that this was not a new dish, despite Mrs. Daley's attempts to masquerade the ham under a lumpy cream sauce and a layer of thick pie crust. Charges were dropped after she promised never to serve it again."

• • •

"Several relics were reclaimed for posterity today when an expedition probed Mrs. Daley's mending basket and unearthed a couple of pairs of her husband's socks, long missing, which undoubtedly to the Pre-Acrilan period and certainly before the stretch socks age."

"A new supermarket obstacle course record was set today when Mrs. Daley completed her shopping at the Pay-More Market in 45 minutes, 32 seconds, three minutes faster than the old mark.

"Clever cart-handling, plus the fact that she did not leave her list at home, contributed materially to her success.

"'I was able to pry loose the grocery carts in less time than it usually takes,' Mrs. Daley explained, 'I guess it was because they weren't welded together.' She was fortunate in choosing the right check-stand line in that her checker was NOT headed for lunch."

The Jaycee Wives Club announces its new officers: Mrs. Dale Monett, president; Mrs. Tom Danley, vice - president; Mrs. Robert Zettler, secretary; Mrs. Larry Zickafoose, treasurer; and directors, Mrs. Don Currier, Mrs. Tom Maish, Mrs. Ken Monnett, Mrs. Gary Stewart, and Mrs. Morgan Williams, Jr.

ORIGIN OF A NAME
In the year 1878 a group of businessmen, headed by W. J. McGloghlon and John R. Peel, met in the City of London, Ontario to form an Association for the mutual protection of their families.
In the apocryphal writings of the Old Testament, they found in the Book of The Maccabees,
"that in the dividing of the fruits of their victories in battle, they should reserve a part for the widows, the orphans and the disabled."
Because of this early recorded evidence of a crude form of mutual aid, leading to our modern day life insurance protection, came the name of our company.

OSU DILEMMA: TO DEMONSTRATE OR MEDIATE

New Efforts Promised On Speakers' Rule

(See 'An Unfortunate Decision' on Editorial Page)

By FRANK RYAN

A mixture of solidarity and divided opinion exists at Ohio State University in the wake of the decision by the university Board of Trustees to maintain the controversial speakers' rule.

Students, faculty and administrative leadership are in almost total agreement that the board acted unwisely, and that the fight must be continued to change the rule. But there is a sharp division of throught on how a rule change might best be effected.

Early indications are that many students and some faculty members favor a massive demonstration by the end of the present summer quarter. Others, primarily administrative leaders, favor an approach of "educating the trustees," by providing a "better documentation" of the case for a change in the rule.

The speakers' rule, as it now stands, delegates to the university president the authority to bar from the campus any potential speaker he considers to be subversive, a supporter of any subversive cause or whose views he feels do not serve the best interests of the university.

Technically, the rule says that the university president MAY use these powers. But it is no secret that the speakers' rule, in application, is a mandate from the university trustees that all "suspect" speakers be banned.

Changes Proposed

The proposed change would have allowed speakers invited by campus groups which are recognized by the university administration. The proposed new rule included the following conditions:

1. Consultation with the sponsoring group's faculty advisor. The advisor's opinion would not be binding.

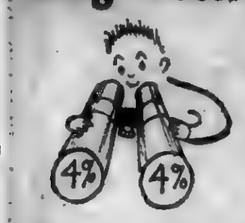
2. The university administration could appoint someone to "supervise" all such meetings, and would reserve the right to furnish a speaker to challenge or rebut the invited speaker.

3. The sponsoring group would be responsible for maintaining an orderly meeting under penalty of loss or recognition by the university administration.

Fawcett States Views

The rule change was devised by the university's Faculty Advisory Committee, and followed meeting with representatives of the administration and student groups. In a strong appeal to the Board of Trustees for approval of the rule change, OSU President Novice G. Fawcett said:

"I have concluded after long and exhaustive study, that the posture in which we find ourselves under the present rule is one through which subversives and their ilk achieve exactly the kind of publicity for which they strive, and that we in a sense aid their cause by giving them an opportunity to gain the quality of exposure they seek.



"In many other campuses that operate under the kind of rule before you, controversial people appear, are heard by a very few people, and leave without having made much impact on anyone."

None of the three trustees who voted for the rule change made any statement at the board meeting. Lone spokesman for the five trustees who favored retention of the rule was former U. S. Senator John W. Bricker, who said:

"Every man must live with his own conscience, and so far as I am concerned, there will be no Communists, Nazis, Fascists, or other subversives or their supporters teaching or speaking at Ohio State while I am on the board, if I can prevent it."

Governor James A. Rhodes was not available for comment, and John McElroy, an administrative aide, said Rhodes would not express an opinion on the board's decision.

Cochran Lauded By Chamber

During an informal gathering downtown Monday, a plaque of appreciation was presented by the Columbus Area Chamber of Commerce to the U. S. Army district engineer responsible for much of the planning which will bring federally built dams and new public recreation sites to this area.

The tribute, read by chamber Executive Secretary T. Kline Roberts, was directed to "Col. Harrington W. Cochran in acknowledgment of his unselfish contribution to the business and civic life of Columbus, O., through the faithful performance of his duties as commanding officer, Ohio Valley District, Corps of Engineers, U. S. Army."

Col. Cochran, who is being reassigned as commander of the U. S. Engineers in the Ryukyus, turned over his Huntington, W. Va., offices this week to Lt. Col. William D. Falck.

How many things in the would deserve our loyalty? Very few indeed. I think one should be loyal to immortality, which is another word for life, a stronger word for it. —Boris Pasternak.

54 Local Girls Enroute To Roundup In Idaho

EDITOR'S NOTE: Cheryl Porter, 2904 Crescent-dr is representing The Spectator as its official correspondent at the 1965 Senior Girl Scout Roundup, which is being held July 15 to 28 in Farragut, Idaho. This is the fourth of a series of articles on the roundup.

By CHERYL PORTER

Yesterday morning, July 14, 54 girls from the Seal of Ohio Council traveling to the 1965 Senior Girl Scout Roundup in Farragut, Idaho, bade farewell to their parents, then eagerly scrambled aboard the train to begin a two-week adventure.

Cheryl

Before boarding the train, a plastic identification number bracelet was locked on each girl's wrist, not to be removed until she returns home to Columbus July 30. This number identification is more important than a girl's name when she is among a group of 9,000 girls. It tells to which area, camp, troop, and patrol an individual girl belongs. This identification number is also marked on each girl's personal equipment.

Arriving at Richmond, Ind., we transferred to a train which took us to Chicago. We are now aboard the "Girl Scout Special" which will take us to Athol, Idaho. At each stop this train will be picking up more and more girls to bring to the encampment. Buses will carry the scouts from Athol to the camp site at Farragut.

This Roundup site, our home for the next two weeks, was a former U.S. Naval Training Station. It is a 5,000-acre tract of land on the wooded shores of Lake Pend Oreille. Here eight troops of four patrols will comprise a camp of 256 girls. There will be open space for patrol demonstrations, campfires, and other activities. Seven camps will be grouped in a designated area. Facilities such as a trading post, telephones, laundry service, film processing and a post office are available to the girls.

This is the climax of a dream-come-true, and the end of many long weeks of preparation for each girl.

The tendinous part of the mind, so to speak, is more developed in winter; the fleshy, in summer. I should say winter has given the bone and sinew to literature, summer the tissues and blood. —John Burroughs.

Integration Statement Is Endorsed

Representatives of three seminaries in the Columbus area—St. Charles College, the Lutheran Theological Seminary of Capital University and the Methodist Seminary, Delaware, issued a joint statement emphasizing the Bible's stand on integration.

The theologians stated that "God's plan for salvation leaves no place for discrimination. In addition to pointing out scriptural references to discrimination, the statement also endorsed fair housing.

The name of Ethan Allen, famed leader of the Green Mountain Boys, has come down from the Revolutionary War through the history books of nearly every American child.

Yet, to the best of our knowledge, until recently there existed only one large statue of this noted figure of early American life, the one located at Montpelier, Vt.

Now Columbus has a second one.

A life-size, authentic reproduction of the original, done in old green by Austin, of New York, stands beneath the beamed 18-foot cathedral ceiling in the main entrance of McVay's new Lincoln Square Colonial Shoppe at 4801 W. Broad-st.

McVay's will hold open house at the new store this Sunday, July 18, and all next week.

Hundreds are expected to attend. Not only to see this statue of a famous American who helped to shape our history, but to see Ohio's largest and newest collection of Ethan Allen furniture — the American traditional line which is shaping the decor of many Columbus homes.

McVay's, formerly located at 2542 W. Broad-st, are publicly thanking Columbus and Central Ohio homemakers this week for the patronage which made their distinctively beautiful new store possible.

The new building is colonial in design complete with bell tower and a huge walk-in fireplace.

Inside are authentically designed displays of American traditional furniture, accessories, draperies and floor coverings.

Color correlated rooms will offer browsing customers a glimpse into the warmth and charm which the famous line of Ethan Allen furniture and accessories can impart to any home.

McVay's is Ohio's largest Ethan Allen colonial furniture dealer, according to William Carter, president. He has named Gerald Jacoby to manage the new store.

Jacoby said the Lincoln Square Colonial Shoppe is the largest all-colonial store in midwestern United States.

The grand opening celebration begins Sunday, July 18, when the public may browse from 1 to 6 p.m., and continues throughout the week. Regular store hours will be 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday through Friday, and 9 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. on Saturday.

GARY NIEDERLANDER CRACKS 30 TO WIN '65 COLUMBUS SOAP BOX DERBY

GARY NIEDERLANDER, 11, of 211 N. Gould-rd, crosses the finish line in photo at left, a half-car length in front of Class A Champion Barry Huff to win the 1965 Columbus Soap Box Derby that was held Sunday on E. Fifth-av before a packed audience, official dignitaries and WLW-C television cameras that brought the event to thousands more at home. Gary, a unknown, racing his first year in the classic, sent his speedy No. 6 racer off the ramp and across the finish line in the Class A vs. Class B championship final in the blistering hot time of 29.9 seconds. Clutching the judge's checkered flag (center) that waved him to victory six times during the event, Gary Niederlander tours the course to receive a champion's plaudits from wildly cheering Soap Box Derby fans. Five times during his six laps to the trophy Gary cracked the magic 30-second time mark. Among the 58 other derby racing greats who performed in the event, only Huff, defeating G. Carroll in the final run for the Class A Championship, cracked the magic 30, turning in a 29.9 for the .875-foot downhill run. First to bestow a prize on Gary, at right, after he and his car were lifted to the Champion's Box was his mother whose tears and kiss splashed on his victory-flushed cheek. Among other prizes he won were a $500 savings bond, the all-important trophy and the chance to represent Columbus in the All-American Soap Box Derby at Akron. Gary spent four months in constructing the car which was sponsored by Peoples Savings Association. The trophy and pictures of the derby will be on display this week in their office at 70 E. Gay-st.

BOOK REVIEW

'Making of the President' Vol. II, More Objective

By MICHAEL V. DISALLE
Former Governor of Ohio

Those who read Theodore H. White's 1960 Pulitzer Prize winner "The Making of the President," will note an additional savoir-faire in his 1964 version. The campaign of 1960 and the intervening years have given the author the position of confidant to most of the nation's leading political figures both Republican and Democrat. With this relationship springing from respect of his past effort, he is able to give an intimate account of the 1964 campaign which should be of interest to not only professionals and quasi-professionals, but also to citizens generally.

His word portraits of the principals will not make quotable descriptions for campaign orators of either party. White leaves a clear inference that having left his heart with President Kennedy, he has sought never to love again, but to remain completely objective in his desire to produce a clear historical picture of the 1964 campaign.

Those who watched the two conventions either in person or on television will relive each of the proceedings nostalgically again completely savoring the highlights of both.

Outstanding passages not generally covered in the press deal with the interplay of personal emotions, the infighting, the crossing and double-crossing claimed by major figures in our recent political dramas.

White tells of running into Pierre Salinger the night that President Johnson was nominated and finding him red-eyed with weeping and almost incoherent. Pierre had watched the proceedings in a hotel room with other comrades of the 1960 Kennedy campaign —"and had not recovered and could not recover his balance. Salinger was mourning for John F. Kennedy and for another convention four years before on the banks of another ocean, he could not erase the past from the present."

The interplay of strong personalities as President Johnson eliminated his then-attorney general from consideration for the vice-presidential nomination, demonstrates White's ability to secure the inside story from what was necessarily a limited number of sources. For example the author tells of Johnson's chief aide, William Moyers' calling the President on his direct talk box to ask why not choose Sargent Shriver, Bobby's brother-in-law, as Vice-President?

The President had said that such a choice would further offend the Kennedys. That same afternoon the President was sitting with Kenny O'Donnell discussing the problem when the direct talk box opened up once more with the voice of Moyers calling. Moyers not knowing that O'Donnell was also listening, proceeded directly to the point. He said that he had checked with Shriver directly and Sarge had replied that the family would not object to his being named vice-presidential running mate and further that Bobby would not mind. At which point O'Donnell had reached directly over the President's desk, flicked down the "talk" switch and snapped to Moyers, "The hell he wouldn't."

On the Republican side there is much of interest to Ohioans. Chapter V entitled "The Dance of the Elephants" tells of the maneuvering which took place at the Annual Governors Conference held in Cleveland. Thirteen of the 16 Republican governors were opposed to Goldwater's nomination. Included was Ohio's Governor James A. Rhodes, who referred to his hotel suite as the "anti-Goldwater tent." Here at a meeting attended by Rhodes, Scranton and Rockefeller, it was decided that Romney must be the man to stop Goldwater. The Michigan governor was contacted at midnight and informed that the other governors would fall in line if he would but take the lead.

Richard Nixon, who had decided not to attend the conference, was brought in by Rhodes who said he would send a state plane up to Muskegon to pick him up if he would only come to Cleveland for one appearance. The result — the already embattled Nixon found himself embroiled in a political mess not of his doing or his choosing.

White described Scranton as completely disillusioned in the following words: "The press called him 'the toothless tiger'. He had tried to organize, overnight, a campaign for Romney, but on Tuesday afternoon Romney had quit. He had come to distrust Rhodes completely (during the hectic effort to draft Romney, Rhodes had said to Scranton: 'Romney's ready to go — let's get him out front there and then we'll decide what to do'). He was all alone."

The author details the complete domination of the Republican Convention by Goldwater and his followers and the collapse of the Scranton candidacy as follows:

"And by the time the convention opened, Ohio leadership had betrayed him. Governor James Rhodes of the Buckeye State, a courthouse politician whose promises and commitments are now held at general discount among high-level Republican politicians, had been among the leaders of the Stop Goldwater movement in Cleveland. Rhodes had not only pledged himself to Scranton to hold his delegation firm, but had made a similar covenant of faith with Ray Bliss, his partner in Ohio politics.

"But, breaking faith with both Scranton and Bliss, Rhodes announced on July 9 that he was releasing his delegates — and then, arriving in San Francisco, proceeded to Scranton's apartment to explain why: Rather than seeing Goldwater as a disaster, as he had at Cleveland four weeks before, Rhodes was convinced that Goldwater would be the Truman of 1964 —an underdog victor.

"Goldwater's vote on civil rights which had horrified Scranton had not upset Rhodes; the 'backlash' of white votes would carry Goldwater to victory in Ohio, predicted Governor Rhodes. (Goldwater was to lose Ohio, that sturdy Republican state, by over one million votes in November.) Rhodes urged Scranton to run for Vice-President as Goldwater's running mate.

"When Rhodes had left that night, Scranton knew the fight was over; and shortly after the Ohioan's departure he gathered his young men and several of his allies of the Lodge-Rockefeller wing. It was probably hopeless now, said Scranton. If any of them wanted to get off the Scranton bandwagon and go over, now was the time to do it; he would accept their departures with no reservations of affection or feeling. But as for him and Mary — they were going right on with it, down to defeat on the convention floor if necessary, hopeless as it was. At which all in the room rose and applauded; no one would leave."

If the "Making of the President 1960" was worthy of the Pulitzer Prize it is difficult to imagine the honors due White's current effort. Successful campaigns are always easier to examine in depth and to explain than are those of the losers. The situation is not too much different than the thousands of experts created by a rising stock market as compared to the thousands of poor guessers made by a falling market. Hence, second guessing the Goldwater strategy and proving how wrong his planners were is as easy as playing a bridge hand with all of the cards up.

White gives us an insight into the strategy of both parties and the rationalization of each as to why one succeeded and one lost. The chances are that it was impossible from the beginning for Barry Goldwater to win or for Lyndon Johnson to have lost the Presidency. Perhaps each knew this to be the case, but in the true tradition of a democracy each had to tell his story and explain his reasoning, or having fought, whether winning or losing, been lost in the past election frustration of what might have been.

Historians many years in the future seeking for the reasons behind these events will find that "The Making of the President 1964" serves a significant purpose.

Campaign planners will find it a must. But those who are not necessarily searching for historical or technical knowledge will find it entertaining as well as informative.

PERFORMERS ENTERTAIN PATIENTS

ENTERTAINING GROUPS are often in the headlines, but local groups don't usually get much publicity for performing free at convalescent centers, hospitals and other such institutions. Here the Enchanters, a combo led by Bob Decker, perform for patients at the Sun Ridge Convalescent Center on Sunbury-rd, while the 3-5-7 Clowns circulate through the crowd. Also appearing at the party were Russ Mann and Don Chamberlain, country and western singers, and Irene Rector, who sang religious favorites.

An Unfortunate Decision...

Ohio State University got its brains beat out last Thursday!

This would not be such tragic news as a sports story, but the beating came in a grim "academic" contest between the university leadership and OSU's Board of Trustees.

Five of the eight trustees decided the outcome by voting to continue the oppressive speakers' gag rule. By so doing, they have set the stage for more hard times, bad publicity and loss of prestige for OSU as a leading institution of higher learning.

The support for a change in the gag rule was overwhelming among all segments of the university — students, faculty and administration officials. In fact, Ohio State is the only major university in the nation that has such a board-imposed speakers' rule.

Is it any wonder that OSU has difficulty in recruiting quality instructors? They have a natural preference for those universities where their personal integrity and ability is more trusted.

Former U. S. Senator John W. Bricker—who has much experience in resisting change—was the spokesman for the five negative voters. All five, incidentally, are appointees of Governor James A. Rhodes. (The three trustees who voted for the rule change were appointed by former Governor Michael V. DiSalle.)

Rhodes has chosen not to comment on the decision by his appointees, except to say—through an administrative assistant—that he will "let the trustees run the university." He should be concerned that his appointees are defeating his stated intentions to protect and increase OSU's academic effectiveness.

We can only hope the decision of the negative-thinking trustees doesn't motivate an exodus from OSU by the best minds—student, faculty and administrative. But we're afraid it might.

Any inferior doctrine is best put down by unfettered, open debate. Only in those places in the world where one side of the story is heard do the people become hopelessly enslaved.

Communism promises much, but delivers little. How can our students shoot holes in a target they are not permitted to see?

Guest Pulpit . . .

Rev. Thompson

There are changes taking place today within the Christian Church as a whole.

There is an ever-growing spirit of ecumenism. Many communions are beginning to think more in terms of what they have in common rather than what they hold in contrast. There is a healing process under way in the much-divided body of Christ.

This is not simply a matter of forcing churches into a common mold — for in the true ecumenical spirit churches are asking of themselves and of others — "What real good do we have to contribute to the whole — and what stumbling blocks of purely human pride do we need to set aside?"

Alongside of and complementary to the growing spirit of ecumenism there is another change within the churches. More and more frequently are the various churches breaking down the dividing wall between the so-called secular and spiritual realms. More and more are the various churches beginning to profess that man's relationship to God and man's relationship to man are not separate realms of life—or separate threads — but rather the warp and woof of the same piece of cloth; and that in both directions man weaves either the cloth of sinful self-centeredness or the cloth of love.

I John says "If any one says, 'I love God' and hates his brother, he is a liar; for he who does not love his brother whom he has seen cannot love God whom he has not seen."

God is working His purpose out.

Rejects OSU Senate Speakers Stand

To the Editor:

Last week a young man from OSU representing the Student Senate called on me to renew our agreement for discount prices to students. We have offered student discounts for two years and we had every intention of continuing to do so. However, before signing a contract, I wanted to know the stand the Student Senate was taking on the campus speaker rule controversy.

The Student Senate representative said a poll taken indicated 60 percent in favor of modification, 30 percent for abolition, and 10 percent for keeping the rule as is. He said the Senate was backing modification. I asked if by modification he meant liberalization. He said yes, but not complete abolition. I said, "But another step toward abolition, right?" He said, "Yes."

I said, "ok," but I must now tell you I cannot back the Student Senate on this or any other of its endeavors. I'll still give discounts to students, but only because I want to — not because of anything the Student Senate has done and I will not sign a contract.

I have been an American for 35 years. I love being an American and I am proud to be one. America is at war. We are at war — and this war is being fought viciously right here on our own soil. It's not as loud as World War II, Korea, or Viet Nam, but it's just as deadly. I am not about to support any group which advocates giving or selling weapons to the enemy and this is exactly what the Student Senate is doing.

In America, everyone has the right of free speech —even a Communist. He can talk all he wants, I don't care — but I will not provide him with a stage, an audience, or recognition. This is no different than providing him with atom bombs. The controversy over the speaker rule is not a freedom of speech issue as some local Communists keep repeating. Yes, I mean Communists. Let's call a spade a spade, and a Communist a Communist. Let him not hide behind such terms as liberalist, leftist, socialist, just as I will not hide behind leftist, moderate, conservative, or rightist — I am an American. . .

We must remember the serious student does not have time to waste listening to Communist drivel and he is not equipped and will not be for many years to trade mental blows with the professional brain washers the Communists are trying to flood our campuses with.

I urge all area business men to continue student discounts if they wish, but not to contract with the Student Senate — a group which is undermining our guard against an enemy who wants to destroy our principles of free enterprise — the very system which makes discounts to students possible.

A Doctor In The House? Jet Fans Ailing

It must get more than a little discouraging for the Columbus Jets sitting over there on W. Mound-st in one of the International League's finest stadiums, listening to excuses that General Manager Harold Cooper must know by heart now.

If it's not poor weather conditions, Columbusites blame it on a bad team. If it's not a bad team, Columbusites shun the ball park for backyard cookouts.

So the Columbus Jets get an even break with the weatherman and they keep themselves out getting into first place. All they need now is a ban on backyard cookouts and maybe they'd get more than a mere 1800 steady customers per game.

Who has the answer to the Jets' attendance woes? Out of the 700,000 people served by Jet Stadium you'd think there'd be a Mr. Fixit somewhere.

The problem doesn't center on a lack of ticket sales. In fact, if the Jets could get the response during the season that they get before the season they'd be more than satisfied. Columbus residents bought $100,000 worth of pre-season tickets this year. But it seems that after they buy them they tuck them away in a desk drawer some place and feel that they've done their part.

Columbus is running out of excuses. The Jets are home now. They begin a four-game stand with Atlanta tonight (July 15) through Sunday's doubleheader. There are about seven weeks of baseball left.

If the Jets continue to get the cold shoulder, it could indicate that Columbus doesn't want a professional baseball club.

Would giving up the whole idea be the answer?

Jones Statements Displease

To the Editor:

I was more than a little disappointed that you would publish a column such as "Revere The Past" (July 8) and "Cut-Rate Christianity" (June 24) by Jenkin Lloyd Jones.

And in regard to his remark, "All over the world people figuratively are hoisting brass beds to the top of hills, votive offerings to God in the hope that He will turn back the hands of time,"—God can and would do just that if more would do all they could to uphold the cause of Christ instead of using the news media to preach disbelief.

We who believe in Christ are not "following a shadow." All things are possible with Christ Jesus.

So if you continue to permit Mr. Jones to write his "guest pulpit of unbelief," cancel my subscription.

STRICTLY FRESH

Taking the past as a guide, the world is full of good ideas that are so obvious that not one of us has been able to see them yet.

The perfect symbol of today's gracious living is a lady in a sheath dress trying to sit down in a contemporary design chair with a buffet dinner in her hands.

Sometimes the coating of civilization is so thin it comes off with just a little alcohol.

An Editor's Outlook . . . by Jenkin Lloyd Jones

'Do Something' Motive Spurs Campus Protests

This was the year that was on ten-dozen American college campuses. It was a year of rebellion, "teach-ins," walkouts, and occasional riots. What happened?

The current issue of the University of Colorado "Alumnus" carries an article that gropes for answers.

It suggests in the first place that there was conspiratorial fun to be had:

"To certain students who were looking for a thrill —any thrill — to enliven this year, the Berkeley 'Free Speech Movement' was a titillating example, an invitation to imitation. It had almost everything: encounters with the cops, secret high command posts replete with walkie-talkie sets, daring defiance of some of the most distinguished university leaders in the nation, loving attention from newspaper and magazine reporters, including correspondents dispatched to the battlefield all the way from New York."

Jones

But there was more to it. Some college psychologists cited the bigness and coldness of teeming, bulging institutions that only a few years ago were small enough to have a personality and to which the students of former times could "belong." Alma Mater has, in too many places, become The Woman in the Shoe, and no child can know his brothers and sisters. Out of this anonymity born of the hopeless crowd a student seeks the prominence of the picket line.

Some faculty members say that college students, having been given too much freedom by their parents, object to the mild rules imposed by college deans. But others claim that many colleges, in their effort to be thought "liberal," are too permissive, and some students raise hell in the subconscious hope that someone will give them the swift kick they deserve.

One theory is that there is too much grade pressure on students hoping to make it into graduate school. Sit-ins, like pantie raids, let off steam.

A university president simply blamed the whole malaise on "takeover mentality" — the student agitator who gains a limited victory, hungers for more, and finally winds up agitating to run the school.

The Colorado magazine reprinted a taped colloquy between faculty members and students. Said one undergraduate:

"Your generation had a devil — Hitler, or someone like that — for you to identify with resistance, rebellion against: a crusade for humanity. We don't have a specific devil. We have civil rights; we have Viet Nam; but these are all parts of a greater system that has evolved in the world, this Cold War kind of system. It is perhaps the system, itself; the entire, economic, social system of the world that is the devil."

How broad can you get?

Yet, the young man may have revealed more than he knew. He represents a generation too young to have known war, and therefore unblessed by a personal recollection of sacrifice, victory and perhaps heroism. Nor has this generation known struggle as other generations have. It struggles for grades, to be sure, and soon will struggle for prestigious jobs and, hopefully, a place in the suburbs.

But the elemental struggles for food and shelter are more foreign to these young Americans than to any other generation anywhere. The desire to be tested remains within them, but the old goals are not only met, but often over-met. They are children of unprecedented abundance, but not children of tranquility.

Through all their conscious lives they have lived in the shadow of the H-bomb. The H-bomb is not the same kind of worry as the Seneca's tomahawk. It is less tangible, less immediate. But it is not to be thwarted by a long rifle and a palisade. Hence, the desire by some to make a "devil" out of the "entire economic, social system of the world."

The hunger to be heroic, yet confusion over how or for what, has led some students to admire action — any action. One young Coloradoan put it this way:

"I think it's a darn good thing that the students at Berkeley are alive. I mean they are doing something. Admittedly, the governor, the regents, and some others don't like what the students were doing, but at least they were getting out and doing something."

This young man seems to have forgotten that the Hitler Youth "did something," and so did the medieval inquisitors and the killers in all holy wars and the jolly rapists who followed Genghis Khan. College is not supposed to impel you merely to do something. It is supposed to give you an idea of what is wisely done.

As one pretty solid Colorado coed commented: "We simply join any movement that happens to come along. We no longer try to distinguish what is truth. We don't question. And this is not the kind of rebelliousness that ought to be incorporated in the University system."

Amen!

Frosting on the Cake

BY "UNCLE DOC" ROSS — U.S.A.

What a joy these new air-conditioned diesel buses are! For three weeks now I have been riding them every time I have to go down town. They are most comfortable. The only "fly in the ointment" I have noticed is a few people who just don't know what air-conditioning is and they persist in opening a window.

From quiet conversations with the drivers, I learn that the new buses are much more maneuverable in traffic, especially when having to swing out wide to get past some traffic tie-up.

The inside finish is really deluxe in every way. There is leg room and the only time I have had any trouble getting to the back of the bus is when some "wide" lady is standing in the aisle. That calls for some very good manners in negotiating the situation.

For three years I have been making a time and cost check on the various trips my work required. After one drives down town, finds a parking lot that is not jammed up, and then walks two or three blocks to his "port of call," valuable time has been wasted and the parking cost is almost always more than the bus fare both ways.

All of this is important to busy and capable individuals who live organized lives; allowing nothing for the constant hazard of having some semi-conscious driver bang up a fender or worse. I have experienced 50 years of driving all over North America and have never had a moving violation ticket of any kind. But the biggest hazard facing me is "people in a gosh-awful hurry." Next, it's the man in a dangerous old jalopy.

The worst bang I ever got was a farmer in Illinois who died of a stroke before he hit me. The other one was a 10-year-old boy in Detroit who stole a car and tore around a corner and took off my left front fender. Five drivers hit me hard in the rear. Three of them had been mixing alcohol and gasoline. One had no brakes. He was almost killed. The last one was on the turnpike near Wauseon. That driver went to sleep.

The traffic situation is going to demand constant and improved regulation, or we will be "stacking 'em" in another 10 years. The three E's are still important — engineering, education and ENFORCEMENT.

A driver's license is NOT a right; it is a very serious and responsible privilege. People who can't or won't behave behind the wheel ought to be grounded for life.

ALGAE — Some people have neuritis, incurable arthritis, or facial neuralgia, but we had wateralgae.

It had a smell and tasted like — but don't forget, our water's wet.

One day in winter, cold and damp, by a graveyard sat a drunken tramp. Urged a passerby: "Hey! Come with me; you've got an awful cough," said he. Pointing graveward as he rose to go, said the souse: "They'd like to have it though."

Bone-dry New Yorkers wouldn't mind having water of the algae kind.

HISTORIC MEDALS

A recent news picture shows the President decorating Captain Roger H. C. Donlon with the Medal of Honor for his bravery in Viet Nam. His award was the 3,171st since the order was instituted during the Civil War.

The medal was authorized for the Navy in 1861 and for the Army in 1862. At first it was given to enlisted men only, later to officers. Now all ranks of all the Armed Forces are eligible.

Before the end of the Civil War, 1527 medals had been given. In Indian wars, 541 were awarded, 111 in the Spanish-American conflict, 123 in World War I, 1430 in World War II, 131 in Korea, and the rest for valor in other times and places.

Extraordinary bravery and fortitude have been recognized and rewarded for centuries. The ancient Greeks and Romans placed laurel wreaths upon the brows of their heroes. Colored shields and plumed helmets were marks of distinction in the days of chivalry, in the Middle Ages. Britain instituted orders of knighthood with various decorations.

In modern times Britain's highest award is the Victoria Cross, established in 1856. The Germans have awarded the Iron Cross since 1813. The French Medaille Militaire dates from 1852, and the Croix de Guerre for all ranks from 1915. Other nations have decorations for valor, too, in war and peace.

Ironically, some of the highest decorations for war have some form of the Cross, the symbol and emblem of the Prince of Peace.

It says here . . .

Valor in peace may yet be recognized as equal to bravery in war.

Arts Festival Begins Today At State Capitol

The annual Columbus Festival of Arts, opening today on the grounds of the Ohio State Capitol, promises a new vista in presentation of both the Static Arts and the Performing Arts.

Multiple stages for the performing arts and unusual display presentation for the static arts were developed this year by Gerry Breakey, display chairman and special events manager for F. & R. Lazarus & Co.

To be seen and heard in the performing arts events during the festival will be the Ohio State Jazz Forum Bands, the North American Aviation Concert Band, religious music, The Song Spinners, barbershop quartets, string quartets, folk singing instrumentalists Brian and Wilma, and square dancing performances among other offerings on the wide program.

Billy Maxted and his band may perform and the Columbus Chorale is programmed for a 45-minute presentation each evening.

Jane Cook, static arts chairman, indicated there will be painting demonstrations by such well-known artists as Louise Wiedman, Bill Arter, Leland McClellard, Al Getchell, Byron Kohn, David Jones and Hans Reitenbach.

Participating in the static arts displays will be the Columbus Recreation Department, Columbus Public Schools, Columbus College of Art and Design, Columbus Society of Professional Photographers, Columbus Gallery of Fine Arts, Columbus Art League, American Institute of Architects, Capital University, College of St. Mary of the Springs, Ohio State University, Bexley Art Guild, Otterbein College, Battelle Memorial Institute, German Village Society, the Junior League and the Franklin County Historical Society.

Most of the critical things in life, which become the starting points of human destiny, are little things. —Robert Smith.

Under Buckeye Skies

By KEN MACK McCREARY

Fishy Tales . . .

Even though fishing is one of the best ways of relaxing, it's surprising how many of us take it so seriously that it becomes an intense challenge instead of an "ulcer-preventer." Perhaps it's this attitude which leads anglers to stretch the facts into "tall" fishing stories. Certainly the element of chance is so great in fishing that it attracts people with imagination; once engaged in it many of these folks seem to really go into orbit when they start recounting their adventures.

Mack

Genial Dick Jennings, veteran publicity man for the Cortland Line Co., likes to tell about a grizzled old fishing guide he allegedly knew. According to Jennings, as they fished an Arkansas lake one day the guide, Bob Meeks, cautioned him: "Careful where you throw that cigarette—it's been so dry you might set the lake on fire!"

Warming to his story, Meeks continued: "It's pretty dry, but I've seen it worse. I remember one summer back in Ohio it got real dry. We caught catfish by the ton. No trick to it at all. We'd spot 'em a mile away by the cloud of dust they raised as they swam up the crick. We'd just get 'em down to the stream bed and herd 'em into a corral. It did rain eventually and got real damp for a spell. The crick riz so high that I drove a load of hay right under it—and never wet a sprig of that hay. And the crick backed up awful fast—it reversed a grist mill and before they could get the derned thing shut off it had unground seven bushels of corn. Another 10 minutes and I think it would have put the corn back on the cobs."

Jennings also tells of the time Meeks was fishing with a tall Texan who hooked a seven-pound bass. Even though he probably had never landed anything bigger than a two-pounder before, being a native son of the Lone Star State, he was prompted to remark: "Surely you're not going to put that little fish on the stringer. Why, down in Texas we throw those back to grow up." With that, the guide replied: "We do here, too" . . . and pitched the limker back into the water.

Then, there's the fish story about the two anglers who really found the walleyes at Hoover Reservoir. As they reluctantly headed back to the dock with their boatload of fish, one remarked: "Did you mark that spot where we caught all these walleyes?" The second replied: "Sure, I marked an X in the bottom of the boat." The first angler shouted in reply: "Man, you're stupid! How are we going to find it if they give us a different boat tomorrow?"

Also on the tall side, there was this Spectatorland fisherman who told me about casting a plug to a likely-looking big bass haunt in Buckeye Lake. The way he tells it, there was a tremendous swirl, but the bass missed the plug and swallowed the log.

Gal fishermen are always good for unlikely angling adventures. According to a friend of mine, he and the spouse were out on the lake on her first fishing trip. Suddenly he noticed that she was busily working over her line, and asked her what was the trouble. Wifey sweetly answered: "I'm changing corks, dear—this one keeps sinking."

Speaking of wives, did you hear about the one who complained to her neighbor that her husband spent all day in the living room, fishing in a pail of water? The friend replied: "Have you every thought of sending him to a psychiatrist?" To this the concerned wife retorted: "I would, but we need the fish."

Yes, there is a lighter side to the fishing game, and let's face it—when an angler trudges home fish-less after a long hard day on the water, he needs a sense of humor. And the next time we start describing the monster that got away, we might stop and think—maybe the fish goes home and lies about the size of the fish it stole.

Lake Central Sets Record

Lake Central Airlines carried more passengers in June than any month in the history of the airline. A total of 55,026 passengers used the local service carrier, compared to 46,261 in June of last year, an increase of 19 percent.

The passenger load factor, number of passengers in relation to the number of seats available, increased from 42.1 percent in June of 1965 to 43.7 percent, topping the previous load factor record of 43.5 percent which was achieved in April of this year.

L. W. Hartman, president of Lake Central, credited part of the increase to the additional capacity offered on heavy traffic segments. "Lake Central is operating seven 44-passenger Convair 340's this year, compared to five last year," he said.

Revenue passenger miles were up 17.9 percent, from 7,289,000 to 8,595,000. Available seat miles increased 8.6 percent from 17,318,000 to 18,806,000.

Two Win Scholarships In Communicative Arts

WTVN-TV and Radio has underwritten scholarships for two students to attend the Ohio State Summer Center of Communicative Arts at Ohio State University, it was announced by Robert C. Wiegand, vice-president and general manager of WTVN-TV and Gene D'Angelo, general manager of WTVN-Radio.

The students are Michael Allen Krupnick, 1017 Loringrd, and Tom Stork, Kettering, O. They were selected by a committee of educators at the secondary level of the public school systems in the WTVN market. Each of the young men selected has exhibited talent and interest in dramatics, music, speech and other attributes of particular significance to the broadcasting industry.

Primary purpose of the scholarships according to Lawrence Rogers, II, president of Taft Broadcasting Company, is to introduce practical knowledge of the industry to promising students thus contributing to the qualification through practical education of potential employes.

Sponsorship of the courses includes instruction, room and board, insurance, and planned recreation. Each summer outstanding high school students from all over the United States participate in this program of accelerated education in the communicative arts. Curriculum features five major areas of the communications field.

FOOD MARKETS THIS WEEK

What Are '65 Food Cost Trends?

By ESTELLE B. FRANKS

THIS WEEK LOOK FOR:

Fruit—watermelon, plums, peaches, grapes, nectarines, bananas.

Vegetables — green beans, sweet corn, cucumbers, summer squash, salad greens, Cobbler potatoes (new).

Meat, Poultry — broiler-fryers, beef "specials," ground beef, eggs.

Other Foods — Milk, ice cream, cheese, frozen orange juice and lemonade.

In spite of higher meat prices, food will take a smaller bite of disposable incomes this year than in 1964, say economists of the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Mrs. Franks

They explain that although prices of some food — beef, pork and potatoes for example — are currently higher than a year ago, overall food expenditures in relation to incomes are expected to decline.

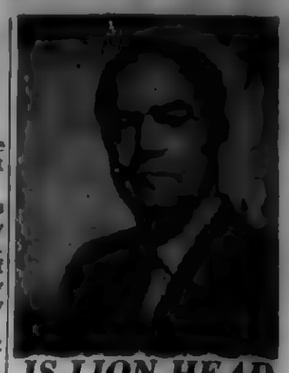
In 1964 an average family spent about 18.5 percent of its disposable income for food. This was an all-time low. Expenditures are expected to decline to about 18.3 percent this year.

Meat prices — somewhat higher than a year ago — can be explained generally by shorter supplies. In May of 1964, prices were abnormally low as sharply increased supplies of beef brought a price drop. In April of this year, however, meat prices were more nearly comparable to the 1957-59 average.

Weather and labor conditions during the past winter and early spring caused temporarily higher prices for some vegetables. But increased supplies already have started a downward price trend.

Food trends for the rest of the year, according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture appear to be developing as follows:

With the demand for beef strong, and with total meat supplies down, beef prices can be expected to be strong. But an increase in production of broiler-fryers is expected to partially offset the shorter supplies of red meats.



Vegetables, too, have been more limited in supply and higher priced — in some instances, such as potatoes and lettuce, dramatically. However, fresh vegetables — more plentiful now — should be even more abundant in the weeks ahead as the harvest increases.

Prices of citrus fruit this year dropped as dramatically as the cost of vegetables rose. Supplies — particularly of oranges — are considerably larger and prices well below those of a year ago.

Both eggs and sugar cost less this year also.

How does all this add up? Economists say food prices for the year may be a little higher than a year ago, when prices are averaged out. But food will continue to be the best bargain available to American consumers.

Scouts Find Philmont Trails Washed Out

Ed. Note: Following is the third report from 53 Central Ohio Explorer and Boy Scouts and their leaders who left June 25 for Philmont National Scout Ranch, Cimarron, N. Mex.

By STEVE SCHUSTER
And RICHARD ALMAY
Spectator
Philmont Reporters

On arriving in Tent City at Philmont Scout Ranch we observed a camp of about 450 tents and 15 buildings, including the trading post, mess hall and medical center.

We left the next morning at about 6 to start on the trail. But we soon discovered the trails were washed out and full of rocks, mud and water from recent rains. Besides all of this the hills were from 35 to 50 degrees in elevation and there were fallen trees we had to climb over and creeks to cross.

Almay Schuster

Then on the second day it rained and hailed off and on all day. Due to the bad conditions, our crew, one of the five from Central Ohio, got lost on the way to Clear Creek.

But after a night and morning without food three of the scouts, Tom Miller of 3653 Dublin-rd, Richard Berry of 3455 Polley-rd and Joe Leach of 3765 Stoney Bridge-ln, found the camp after an hour of following the trail that we did not follow far enough the day before.

The entire crew ate breakfast and dinner all at once upon returning to the base camp.

The Wonderful World of ANIMALS

By Frank Miller, D.V.M.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Husband says there is nothing wrong with weaning kittens before six weeks. I say it is criminal to separate the young before eight weeks. I know they need that extra milk from the mother to give them the right start. Please help me convince him so our litter-to-be won't suffer. Thanks for the help.—G.G. —G.G.

DEAR G. G.: I really don't deserve your thanks as I'm on your husband's side. The female cat (even the dairy queen variety) has no magic potion in her milk that makes it essential to the kittens past their first month.

From then on, they can do very nicely on a substitute diet, provided it is properly balanced. They do better, in fact, than kittens allowed to nurse to six or eight weeks and fed side-dishes of milk and scraps.

• • •

DEAR DR. MILLER: Everyone thinks our three-month-old Weimaraner puppy is simply beautiful. We would like to enter Beau in a dog show. How old does he have to be?—O.I.

DEAR O. I.: Beau is probably old enough right now to enter a match show. A licensed show (one that carries championship points) requires him to be at least six months old.

• • •

DEAR DR. MILLER: Can those shots to prevent heat periods in a cat ever be given when the cat is already coming into heat? — B.C.

DEAR B. C.: — Yes, the hormone injection can still be given — though a much larger dose is required. Even then, the dose does not always stop the cycle once it is under way.

• • •

DEAR DR. MILLER: I have a young canary. Jeepy seems to be eating all the time. I fill his dispenser and it is empty in two days. Is something wrong with him or is he just a feathered pig? — C.M.

DEAR C.M.: If he is eating steadily all day it is definitely not normal. You may find, though on checking closer, that Jeepy is actually playing with, and wasting, part of his seed. It may simply be a game for him to see just how soon he can reach bottom. If he has normal BM's, a little meat on his bones (a canary can't carry too much), and if he is active, there is little cause for concern.

• • •

DEAR DR. MILLER: Are dogs color blind? — G.E.

DEAR G.E.: Practically.

• • •

DEAR DR. MILLER: Is it true or false that a dog can "smell it" when a person is afraid of him? — C.L.

DEAR C.L.: True. A dog can also detect the subtle (but definite) odor changes in those humans he loves when they are sad, mad or physically ill.

• • •

DEAR DR. MILLER: I own a budgie (Poppy) and she chews on everything. Especially me. I asked a woman who raises birds and she said it was nothing but I am not satisfied with her comment.—N.H.

DEAR N.H.: Poppy's perversity is bound to make a deep impression on you. Hen parakeets bite harder than any others when they want to. Giving her wooden chewing blocks, or twigs (unseasoned by sprays) will provide her with a safe outlet for her energy. Of course, you have no assurance Poppy will do all her chomping on this material.

OSU Subversion Report Stirs Controversy On Campus

By FRANK RYAN

Dr. William E. Warner, professor of education at Ohio State University, indicated to The Spectator Wednesday his connection with a report titled "Emotionalism Versus Education, A Report of Subversion at The Ohio State University, Columbus, Ohio."

The controversial report is identified as concerning "some 650 members of the OSU faculty and others who have identified themselves with at least 14 'liberal' or socialistic means of agitation."

The report, dated June 11, 1965, was sent to OSU President Novice G. Fawcett with a letter from Dr. Warner dated July 1, 1965. Copies of both the letter and report turned up on the university campus on Tuesday.

The report included an alphabetical listing of hundreds of names of faculty members and others connected with the university.

A statistical breakdown by university departments listed three deans, 31 chairmen and directors and 147 professors at the university as among the 650 persons cited. Also included are 24 clergymen in the campus area.

Dr. Warner told The Spectator that the report, while dealing with subversion, did not specifically identify the people named as subversives. "If it's not there (in the report), we didn't say it," he commented.

Several of the people whose names were listed as part of the report have indicated that they will initiate legal proceedings against those responsible.

"The issue," Dr. Warner told The Spectator, "is whether we have emotion or education at the university."

In commenting on a concluding statement in the report that "There is ample documentation and experience to validate all the implications" of the report, Dr. Warner told The Spectator:

"It really means read your newspaper."

The report lists "some of the agitational tactics employed" at OSU as support for:

Committee to Defend the Bill of Rights, Free Speech Front, partisan advertisement for President Johnson and Vice-President Hubert H. Humphrey, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, Congress on Racial Equality, United Nations' UNESCO program and agitation for dropping the speakers' rule. These were listed among 14 "agitational tactics" cited.

Noting that Fawcett had referred to "moral decay" during his June commencement address, the report said that "the problem is more vicious than that, because these agitators parading as teachers, are disloyal to the American spirit and example of freedom."

The report continued:

"Academicans, not to mention the 24 preachers shown, are notable suckers for emotionalism. The narrowness of their specialties, not to mention the limited nature of their experiences, have ill prepared them for the subtleties of psychological warfare."

In commenting on the report, Dr. Warner told The Spectator:

"The major thing is what should go on on the campus. Should we hoot and holler and sit down in the administration building, or should there be education?"

Dr. Warner identified himself as faculty advisor to the Conservative Club at the university.

He would neither confirm nor deny that copies of the report had gone to members of the OSU Board of Trustees. Board member John W. Bricker said of the report:

"I think maybe it was furnished to me, but I haven't had time to study it." He said he "will study it before the next board meeting."

Chances Slim For City Sewer Compromise

By FRANK RYAN

Time and "set" attitudes are fast closing the door on any hopes for a compromise agreement to keep Columbus city council's $42.6-million sewer bond issue off the November ballot.

The controversial plan, backed by the six Republican members of council, calls for the sole use of public-voted bonds to finance the city's sewer capital improvement program. The bond issue has yet to gain the backing of any major group outside of council.

The alternative to council's proposal is a sewer rate hike. The city's sewer consultant had recommended rate increases geared to bring 35 percent more revenue annually to the sewer division. The Development Committee for Greater Columbus has twice called for a rate hike of "at least 35 percent" to meet sewer expansion needs.

The Columbus Area Chamber of Commerce has also gone on record in favor of raising sewer rates, although a specific rate hike figure was not set. Also opposing council's bonding plan is the League of Women Voters.

The bonding proposal was originally suggested by Councilman Ronald DeVore, but was worked into its present form by Council President William Fornof, City Council Clerk Gordon Serrott and Robert T. Dundon, deputy city treasurer. Fornoff has borne the brunt of the battle, and has been the spokesman in trying to garner support for the measure.

He presented the plan to the Columbus Metropolitan Committee — coordinating group for all major public bond issues over the past 20 years. Metropolitan Committee Chairman Paul R. Gingher said his group was dealing with the first major bond issue brought before it without support of both the council and city administration.

Mayor Sensenbrenner — backed by Service Director Warren J. Cremeun and Finance Director John P. Stanley — is unalterably opposed to council's plan. The official administrative attitude is to accept the basic recommendations of the consultant, as supported by knowledegeable business, industrial and civic opinion outside of city government.

On the spot at the present time is the Metropolitan Committee. Its members are reluctant to say no to council, but in substantial agreement that council's plan will not solve the city's sewer expansion needs. Gingher, according to a source close to the "compromise" negotiations, has met with both Fornof and William A. Schneider, chairman of the Franklin County Republican Executive Committee.

According to the source, Schneider "favored a compromise" to remove the bond issue from the ballot, but Fornof "turned thumbs down on it" (the compromise). Fornof reportedly "leaned" toward a compromise at one stage of the three-way negotiation, but finally returned to his staunch support of the bond issue.

Contacted Tuesday, Mayor Sensenbrenner refused to rule out any chance of a compromise. But he indicated that he expects the Metropolitan Committee to do more than refuse to endorse council's plan.

"If the members of the Metropolitan Committee are interested in the welfare of this city," he said, "they should come out and tell the people which is the best plan. This is not a political question. It is for the best interests of the City of Columbus."

Sensenbrenner had previously asked the Metropolitan Committee to oppose council's bond issue plan.

Another source close to the controversy indicated that council could come up with a "compromise" plan with or without the approval of the city administration. He said he had heard that council might want to raise rates in "steps of 10 percent increases." He said this would only compound the problem, and added that he did not expect any compromise that would be acceptable to the city administration.

Councilman Robert T. Southwick said Tuesday he

Firemen Seek Short Hours, Pay Increase

A triple request concerning changes in their pay scale, a raise in salaries and a reduction in working hours that would place Whitehall firefighters on a more comparable rating with other departments in the state was presented to city officials this week.

The firefighters ask for adjustments that would eliminate claimed inequities in their salary scale, raise their pay and reduce their working week from 72 to 56 hours.

Under their present salary structure, the firefighters claim, it is possible that a lieutenant might make less than a firefighter, because of incongruities in the pay scale structure, and at best, would make only five per cent more.

The requested raise in pay would make their salaries equivalent to that of Columbus firefighters, now making $65 more for working 70 hours less per month.

And, in requesting a shorter work week, the Whitehall men point out that they are among only 181, or the scant 2.6 per cent of professional firefighters in the state still working 72 hours a week. Presently the men are on duty 24 hours and off 24 hours, and have one day off a week.

Shortening the work week and still maintaining the number of men on duty would require the hiring of six new firefighters to form a third platoon. With three platoons, they would be on duty 24 hours and off 48, with no additional days off.

They point out that, increasing the departmental strength in this manner to 30 men, would still cost the city nearly $30,000 less than supporting the Whitehall police department with its 25 men.

City Council Tuesday night authorized hiring six new police officers. Three will replace policemen who will be leaving and the additional three will raise the department strength to 28.

Three At OSU Named Regents' Professors

Three prominent Ohio State University faculty members who have achieved national recognition in their fields have been named by the Ohio Board of Regents as the first Regents' Professors at any state university in Ohio.

Honored with the new title were Dr. Melville L. Wolfrom and Dr. Melvin S. Newman, both professors of chemistry, and Dr. Robert M. Zollinger, professor and chairman of the department of surgery.

Both Dr. Wolfrom and Dr. Newman hold membership in the National Academy of Sciences, one of the highest honors that can come to an American scientist. Dr. Zollinger is an internationally known surgeon and former president of the American College of Surgeons.

Ohio State's three faculty members will serve as Regents' Professors for at least two years, the university receiving $25,000 per year for support of each Professor's salary.

It is expected that three additional Regents' Professors will be appointed for the 1965-67 period and another eight for the 1966-67 academic year. The professorships may be renewed pending subsequent appropriations by the Ohio General Assembly.

Dr. Zollinger, 83 S. Columbia-av, has also been president of the Society of University Surgeons, the Central State Surgical Association and the Interstate Postgraduate Medical Association of North America. He has been editor-in-chief of the "American Journal of Surgery" since 1958.

His most recent honors came earlier this year when he was inducted as an honorary fellow of the Royal College of Surgeons of England and received an honorary doctorate from the University of Lyon, France.

Dr. Wolfrom, 168 Fallis-rd, has been a Guggenheim Fellow at the University of Zurrich and a National Research

'NOISY DOGS, MOTOR BIKES'

Whitehall Council Hears Citizen Protest

Whitehall Council's Tuesday night meeting, marked by an absence of official action as councilmen disposed of the routine readings of ordinances, rapidly "went to the dogs" at the close of the session when members heard residents register vehement protests to the nuisance of barking dogs and noisy motor bikes.

Harry McPherson of 512 Westphal brought his complaint of sleepless nights for himself and neighbors to council, and asked for some control of "hot-rodding riders of motor bikes, with no mufflers" who, he claimed, used streets in the neighborhood for raceways late at night.

And constantly barking dogs, he continued, also add to the noise factors, keeping people awake at night. He also cited junk cars in yards as downgrading the area.

The ordinance requesting the state to issue no more liquor licenses in the city was read for the first time, and according to Councilman Gilbert O'Shaughnessy, would be amended before the measure is ready for a vote.

A request for permission to install a car wash on the Farber Motors lot, 4318 E. Main-st, was protested by Merle Linscott, owner of the Columbus Motel across Pierce-av.

He said lights from the lot were already annoying to guests at the motel, and objected to the addition of a car wash on the lot.

Darrell Todd, safety director, assured McPherson and another resident appearing on the matter of noisy motor bikes and dogs that a planned program of selective enforcement should alleviate the noisy problem of racing motor bikes.

The city now has night radar equipment and this will be put to use, he said, in trouble areas.

Enforcement of city ordinances governing junk cars on residential property was also promised by Mayor William Holzhause and Todd.

And McPherson was advised of the procedure for filing complaint on the barking dogs.

CAMPING'S A 'CIRCUS' FOR TOTS AT ORA

IT'S TOP OF THE WORLD, surely the top of a preschooler's world . . . the one place where tots can look down, instead of up, at people. And for this reason Mrs. Rose Schwartz, director of the Jewish Center Pre-School and wise in the ways and woes of little ones, arranged that the Magic House should have a flat roof so groups at Camp Ora could take turns eating their lunch up there. The day camp for pre-school age tots is held behind the Jewish Center. On Circus Day last Friday the Magic Dragons had their turn to eat on the rooftop. They are, Brian Flax, Laurie Frank, Stewart Golden, Philip Goldmeier, David Grochandler, Stephen Jones, Trippy Kaplin, Neal Kleval, Susan Lazarus, Susan Modes and Bobby Waserman, with counselor, Jay Snyder and counselor-in-training, Mary Lee Seligson.

A HOLLOW TREE seemed a likely hiding place for treasure, and Eddie Jordon's guess was right. Seeing that he had found some peanut "treasure" in the tree, Melissa Schildhouse moved in to try her luck. A peanut hunt was part of Circus Day fun for the 140 four, five and six-year-olds, and so were hay rides around the ground on a tractor-drawn trailer.

A PEANUT, first of a whole bagful collected by Kathy Hackman, was an especial delight. Other "special days" at Camp Ora are field trips to the zoo and to a farm. The farm trip is followed, back at camp, by butter-making and, best of all, ice-cream making in hand-cranked freezers. (More pictures inside.)

JUN 1965

Teacher, OSU Senior Repeat Vows June 19

Norton Church of Christ was the setting for the June 19 marriage of Miss Jo-Ellen Bowen and Lt. Curtis Griffith, Jr.

Rev. Philip H. Ling officiated for the 7:30 p.m. double-ring ceremony before an altar adorned with white gladiolus, snapdragons, daisies and seven-branch candelabra.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Bowen, 841 Westphal-av. Her husband's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Griffith, Sr., of Pickerington.

The new Mrs. Griffith chose for her wedding a gown of chantilly lace over taffeta. The bodice was designed with a sabrina neckline edged with iridescents and long sleeves. The bouffant skirt featured tiers of lace to the hemline and swept to a chapel-length train.

Her veil of illusion fell from a forward plateau of pearl and crystal. She carried a trailing cascade of white butterfly roses, stephanotis, lily of the valley and baby breath accented with camellia foliage.

Mrs. Howard Swartz of Huntington, W. Va., served as matron of honor for her niece. Bridesmaids were Miss Penelope VanderPutten of Whitehall, Miss June Bryan and Miss Ruth Ann Brown of Nashville, Tenn.

Miss Carol Freeman of Whitehall was junior bridesmaid, and Miss Nori Beth Payne, niece of the bride, was flower girl.

The attendants were identically gowned in floor-length white re-embroidered silk organza over aqua taffeta. The controlled skirts were styled with back fullness accented with aqua grosgrain ribbon bows and floor-length streamers.

To complete their ensembles they wore matching Dior bows with triple sheer theatre veils and carried crescent designed bouquets of white daisies, baby breath and leather leaf foliage.

The flower girl wore an identical gown which featured an Obi sash and bow of aqua taffeta. She carried a white basket decorated with white daisies and filled with yellow rose petals.

Best man was Mr. William C. Adkins. Ushers were Mr. Ernest Griffith, brother of the bridegroom, Mr. James Pritchard and Mr. Robert Pinney. Brent Dunn, cousin of the bride, was junior usher.

Two-year-old Master Stephen Payne was train bearer. Master Jack Payne was ring bearer. Both boys are nephews of the bride.

A reception in the church social room followed the ceremony.

The bride is a graduate of David Lipscomb College, Nashville, and teaches at Kae Avenue Elementary School in Whitehall.

Mr. Griffith is a member of the 121st Tactical Fighter Wing, Ohio Air National Guard, and is a senior at Ohio State University.

Following a wedding trip to Russell's Point, the couple is residing at 860 Westphal-av.

Bill Harrison Mows Down Braves, 4-2

Bill Harrison added another feather to his pitching cap Tuesday hurling the Red Sox to a two-hit, 4-2 win over the Braves in the Little League division of the WSBA.

The Red Sox (10-1)-Brave game provided a "showdown" between the respective American and National League pacesetters in the Major League circuit.

The Sox, whose big blows were doubles by Harrison and Rich Cochran and a triple by Tim Stead, scored all their runs in the first two frames.

Besides this key two-hit win, Harrison now has a pair of no-hitters and a one-hitter to his credit this season.

Ready Spills Hartley, 3-2

Bishop Ready High School downed Bishop Hartley, 3-2, in the Tuesday-Friday League last week.

Bob Helcher, the winning pitcher, got the game's only home run.

On the Ready side, Dale Corbett walked, stole second and third, and brought in the first run on a suicide bunt by Bill Scales.

Larry Leger doubled later in the game. He scored for Ready when Junior Dembinski hit a double into center field. Hartley's Joe Gatto doubled and came home when Scott French hit a two-baser.

Steve McGrew of Hartley made it to third in the sixth inning and then scored on a throwing error.

could see "no area for compromise" of council's bonding plan.

"Putting it on the ballot is giving the people the right to choose between a bonding and a rate increase," he said.

The ultimate decision will be up to council. With a 6-1 Republican majority, it can call the shots on the issue. But a choice to remove the issue from the ballot, if it is to be made, must come soon.

Time is running out — particularly in view of the planned "vacation" from council sessions during the month of August. If council Republicans decide they do not want the issue on the November ballot, they must notify the Franklin County Board of Elections prior to printing of early ballots for absentee voting.

A Board of Elections spokesmen said a contract for ballot printing probably will be let between Aug. 10 and 15, with the first printed ballots due at the county election office "about" Labor Day.

Garland Team Takes City Horseshoe Lead

A 5-1 Garland Equipment win over Amanda coupled with Caskey Cleaners identical margin over New Rome I boosted Garland into a narrow percentage point lead in the City Recreation Horseshoe League standings, .560-.555.

Post Office's 5-1 winning series against New Rome II further tightened the race with only 30 points separating the top four teams.

GARLAND'S slow but sure push to the top has been sparked by veterans Midge Johnson, Clarence Handon and Clinton Hodges, steady Eddie Lomax, Sunshine Park champion John Keller and newcomer Sam Conley.

In Garland's win over Amanda, Hodges and Johnson tied for high-singles honors with 102 while Johnson picked up series laurels with a 465. J. D. Rhymer paced the losers with a 106-502.

B. Redding (Rome I) turned in the week's top performance (117-544) but it wasn't enough to prevent Caskey's win which was sparked by T. Harris (113-499).

POST OFFICE got stellar pitching from H. Brenning (high single, 99) and H. Lee (high series, 368) to down Rome II. The losers' efforts were highlighted by F. Redding's 103 single high and Montgomery's 467 series.

Here are the current loop standings:

	W.	L.	Pct.
Garland	37	29	.560
Rome I	40	32	.555
Caskey	39	33	.542
Rome II	35	31	.530

Like Old Man River, CMS's Gregory Keeps Rollin' Along

Don Gregory's sportsman division win-streak now matches the No. 11 on his car, winning his tenth-straight last Friday at the Columbus Motor Speedway before coming back Sunday to make it 11.

With the three wins he took at the start of the '65 season, he now has 14 victories in 15 tries.

ON THE other hand, Bob James, the late-model speedster, has been having problems getting an extended streak going—even though he had won four-in-a-row until last Friday when a tire blewout just when it looked like he'd make it number five.

But Sunday evening after he had set a new qualifying record of 16.37-seconds on the third-mile oval, he outdistanced a field of staunch rivals to notch his ninth feature of the year.

This weekend there'll be another $3000 in prize money awaiting winners in the two divisions when they put on eight-event program both Friday and Sunday nights with $1500 being put-up for each night of action.

TIME TRIALS—both Friday and Sunday—start at 7 p.m. and the first race is set to get moving at 8 o'clock.

In the South Side raceway's free game of "Total," there'll be $400 in cash waiting for the fan (or fans) who can correctly pick the first five, in order, in one of tomorrow night's feature events.

Pirates Plan Tryouts At Jet Stadium

The Pittsburgh Pirates will conduct a tryout camp at Columbus on Friday and Saturday, July 23 and 24. The camp will be held at Jet Stadium and will be under the direction of scouting supervisor Jim Maxwell. He will be assisted by Carl Weise and Dave Roese.

Players should report ready to go at 9 a.m. and be prepared to work out until 2 p.m.

Candidates must be 16 years of age to be eligible to attend the camp, and no American Legion players will be permitted in the camp if participation would interfere with any Legion activities. Such players will only be permitted to tryout with a letter of approval from either his Legion coach or the commander of the Legion post he represents in Legion play.

Players are expected to furnish their own shoes, uniforms and gloves. The Pirates will furnish all other equipment. Players will also be responsible for their traveling and living expenses, if any. Expenses will be reimbursed to those players signed to contracts with Pittsburgh organization clubs.

Sporting Chances

Chris Dean, coach of the Twins, an entry in the Babe Ruth section of the Whitehall Boys' Baseball Association, can claim a league record for his team this week—but he's not overjoyed with the mark.

The last-place Twins now hold the distinction of losing three games in one day! After dropping a pair of "sudden death," one-inning games to the Suns, the Twins lost their regularly scheduled loop game with the first-place Vees.

ED'S NOTE—If it makes you feel any better Chris, Sam Mele, of the adult version of the Twins, seems to be having his problems this week too).

JOHN COLMERY, coach of South's recent state basketball champions didn't indicate whether he was scouting for cage talent in his postal greeting from California.

John, his wife and daughters have embarked on a family camping outing and have scheduled stops at San Francisco, Yosemite and Yellowstone National Parks, Reno, Salt Lake City and Mt. Rushmore.

ANYONE anxious for a personal review of the '65 NFL season might be interested in the package the South Side Y is offering.

The South Y's YICA Club is sponsoring a bus trip to Cleveland Saturday, Sept. 4, for the Brownies' annual "pro football doubleheader."

The $15 package ($14 for Y members) includes a $6 ticket for the twin-bill (Lions vs. Giants and Browns vs. Packers), the bus ride, food and soft drinks.

A $6 ticket deposit must be made to the South Side Y, 190 Southwood-av, by Monday, July 26, the balance paid by Monday, Aug. 23.

The trip is open to any man or boy. Any boy under 15 must be accompanied by an adult. No refunds will be made unless a replacement can be provided by the depositor.

ED's note: We don't usually "push" anything but this one's a good deal—if your back side doesn't complain over several hours of football. Most real pro fans seem to be immune to this malady.)

Williams Unhurt As Racer Flips

The pit at the CBS Speedway on Route 33 near Lancaster was filled with go-karts last Sunday.

During the afternoon races Edwards Williams of Columbus, a driver in the "Hot B" class, lost control of his racer on a curve. The go-kart did several back-flips, but Williams escaped with only a few bruises. He said he will return next Sunday ready to race again.

Winners in last Sunday's races were:

Jerry Crowell, Riley Evans, Ralph Stokes, Larry James, Curtis Stanley and Edward Williams, all of Columbus.

Glen Kimble, Carl Kimble and Garry Browning, all of Zanesville.

Other winners were Seth Dildine, Edgewater, and Jim Swartz, Lancaster.

PITCHERS NIGHTMARE:

Heavy Hitting Marks Play In Bexley Loops

In Tuesday play, first-round Bexley Old Timers winner Central Ohio Welding received a jolt in the first game of the second round.

Christ Lutheran scored 17 runs on 20 hits including five home runs while holding Central Ohio Welding to seven runs. Every player on the Lutheran team hit safely with Bill Frantz leading the parade with a home run, a triple and a single for a perfect night at the plate.

CENTRAL Ohio Welding collected 15 hits in their losing effort. Dick Linson powered two home runs and a double in four trips to the plate. Dave Little also had three-for-four.

At the Maryland diamond, Bexley Methodist unloaded a 36 hit attack in downing Susil Construction, 33-15. Most of the heavy bombing was done by Ron Brandt, who had three home runs and two singles in seven trips to the plate. Roger White just missed a perfect night at the plate with six safeties in seven tries.

Susil Construction showed its biggest offensive punch of the year while suffering defeat. Ross Miller had a perfect four-for four with a home run, and Wayne Hanners, Melvin Miller and Bill Payne collected three hits apiece.

IN A CLOSE and well played game Brad Salt Realtors edged Dollar Federal 7-6. Paul Lindquist had three-for-three and Bob Weissinger had three-for-four to supply most of the power for the Realtors.

Gene Millard had a home run, triple, and single and Bill Birch had two doubles and a single to keep Dollar Federal in close contention throughout the game.

FAST BALL

In Wednesday play, Wilson Auto Parts defeated "Them" 27-12, Williamson Furniture defeated Superior Die and Tool 15-3, and the Red Dogs defeated the Pussycats, 5-4.

WILSON Auto Parts used 24 hits to collect their 27 runs. Second baseman Stan Brown was the Wilson ringleader as he collected four hits including three home runs in four trips to the plate.

He had plenty of help from teammates Dave Draudt (five-for-six with two home runs) and Dave Hess (four-for-five including a home run). Third baseman Cam Orr tried to keep "them" in the game with two homeruns and a single in four-at-bats.

Pitcher Sandy Solomon of Williamson Furniture held Superior to five hits with Dick Holstein's triple being the only extra base hit for Superior. Williamson hitters were led by Bernie Weston, who had two home runs (one a grand slam) and a single.

IN A CLOSELY played game, Chris Tsitouris singled home the winning run in the last inning as the Red Dogs edged the Pussycats. Tsitouris also had another single and two doubles for the evening.

Steve Cartwright, Mark Feinkopf and Sig Munster each collected two hits for the Pussycats.

T-Birds Triumph Over St. Agnes, 5-4

The Thunderbirds of the Central Ohio Babe Ruth League won their fifth league game last week by coming from behind with three big runs in the seventh inning to defeat St. Agnes, 5-4.

Ron Fish did a good job for the T-Birds on the mound and contributed two hits to his own cause.

The T-Birds got one run in the first, but fell behind when St. Agnes brought home one in the second, one in the third and two in the fourth. Both teams remained scoreless until the T-Birds sprang forward with their three seventh inning scorers.

Both teams went errorless.

Midget League . .

In Tuesday morning's game, the visiting Montrose team won its first game of the season by a score of 7 to 5 over the Maryland home team.

Catcher Tom Lambert led the Montrose team as he scored two runs and had a triple and a single at bat. First-baseman Tom Adrian also had a triple and a single at bat, and pitcher Tom Hall had a homerun.

Maryland outhit Montrose as every player contributed at least one hit to the Maryland 11 hit attack on Montrose's Tom Hall's fastball pitching.

John Ingwerson with two singles, and triples by Wes Thomas and Steve Sweeny led to all of Maryland's scoring.

In Thursday morning's Midget League game, visiting Maryland defeated Cassingham 19 to 7 to win the first round championship.

Maryland pitcher Guy Adams had a perfect day at the plate as he banged out five hits. He got plenty of support from right fielder George Long, who had four hits, third baseman John Ingwerson, and second baseman Steve Sweeny who each collected three hits.

The big blow of the game was John Ingwerson's homerun.

Third baseman Stan Greenblatt, first baseman Hank Bernstein, and right fielder Steve Weiner pounded out two hits each in an attempt to keep the game close.

Jewish Center Sports Roundup

After three games of the second round, B.V.D. and Ontario are in first place in the A.K. Softball circuit with three wins each. This battle will be solved tonight when the two teams meet.

Highlights of last week's games saw an improving Len Immke team (2-1) rally in the last inning for 10 runs to defeat Martin's Market (1-2), 16-10. Leading the attack was Bob Grad with two home runs and two doubles, assisted by Leon Margulis who had a home run and two singles.

THE B.V.D. team put together 28 hits of which 13 came in the third inning to give them a 17-3 win over Hackman Realty (0-3).

Stan Vogel, Meyer Kravitz and newcomer Jack Speert each had four hits for the winner while Burton Berk was the only "over two" hitter for Hackman with a double and two singles.

In the third game, Ontario maintained a grip on first place by shellacking the Friedman, Cummins, and Stern Insurancemen (0-3), 13-6. Big guns for the Ontario team were Martin Alder, Marv Grossman, and Jules Vogel, plus a rapidly-improving Sol Zeldin who clubbed a "storybook" homerun.

Using some solid long ball hitting, YYA leader, Dick's Barber Shop (4-0) trounced Sportsmen's Center 24-16.

Big five powerhouses on Dick's Barber Shop were Finke, Engelman, and Honigberg credited with one or more home runs plus Greenberg and Berman credited with at least three hits during the unusually long game.

SPORTSMEN'S (2-2) did not go down unaided, however. Mike Stein was credited with a home run and Weston, Ballen, Topolosky and Wood each collected two hits.

Raybo Vending (2-2) and Richfield Construction (2-2) went into the top of the seventh inning with a tie.

Goodman came up with a single for Raybo followed by a home run by Solomon which provided Raybo with an 8-6 win. Finke, having a home run plus two hits to his credit, and Gold, pounding out three hits, were Richfield's only big two men during theh game.

HARRIS Construction (2-2) dropped Grays (0-4) 12-4. All players of Harris saw the bases during the first inning when they poured on the steam.

Harris was led by a big quartet of men with at least three hits — Oppenheimer, Goldberg, Katz and Sterling. Berman and Rosen were the only two men of Grays who had two hits to their credit during the game.

• • •

In the Center Pony Loop, Green Cabs, current occupant of first place was upset by the number two team — Barney and White by a slim score of 12-10. Both clubs now stand at 6-2.

During the first inning, Barney and White put 10 of their 12 runs across the plate. Zieve was credited with three hits, one of which was a home run and Goodman hit safely three of the four times he was at bat two RBIs.

Silberman was the only man on Green Cabs with three hits (including a HR), but A. Berliner, Chambers and Goldslager each had two hits top push Green Cabs.

ELSEWHERE, Katz, Gold, Clayman and Gurevitz led Bargainland to a smattering 20-4 victory over Jetcoat.

During the first inning, every team member of Bargainland got on base and came around to see home plate. Bidney Hameroff, and Fleischer tried desparately to close the 16 run gap but couldn't do the job for Jetcoat.

In other games Green Cabs downed Bargainland, 14-7, and B&W outscored Jetcoat (0-8), 11-7.

• • •

In an unusually low scoring Teen League game last Sunday, Epsilon (3-0) edged out Pops Dworkin (0-3), 2-0.

As a dramatic opposite, Capital (2-2), using some sparkling playing coupled with long ball hitting, smashed Heart (0-3), 16-7. J. Engelman, D. Engelman, Oser and Timen were the big four powerhouses of Ensilon, each man credited with at least three hits plus one or more home runs.

The losers were pushed hard by a duet of hitters—Silberman and Derrow—each credited with one or more home runs.

WHITEHALL SLO-PITCH:

Darnell Bounces Recreation Twice, Captures First Round

Darnell pulled the rug out from under the Recreation Department last weekend to nab the round one title in the Whitehall Slo-Pitch League.

The newly-crowned champs, faced with a "must" win over the Recreation Department, won 5-2, and then sewed up the title with a thrilling, 8-7, extra-inning nightcap victory.

RECREATION Department hitters were stymied most of the afternoon by the spinning serves of Darnell hurler Jack Gilmore, who went all the way in both games.

Gilmore, backed up by a fine defensive effort afield, was in the command all the way in the opener, yielding but six hits as Darnell never was headed.

Phil Paulson and Don Dorsett set the hitting pace in the opener for the winners — each collecting three hits in as many times at bat. Bill Darnell added two hits.

FOR THE Recreation Department, Phil Allen went three-for-three while teammates Don Sapp and Ed Nash each garnered two hits apiece.

Rather than meet again later to complete the round, both managers decided to break a 4-1 first-place deadlock with second game.

Ron Dorsett and Paulson got Darnell off to a fast start, the former knocking in two runs, the latter three with triples that sent their team off to a 5-1 lead.

THAT LEAD was increased to 7-1 as Recreation came to bat in the sixth.

But before Gilmore, who had been the master all afternoon, could retire the side, Recreation had banged out six hits (good for six runs)—the big blow coming on Ken Richards' two-run homer.

And that's how it remained until the 12th when Gilmore romped home from third with the tie-breaking run on an error.

RON DORSETT and Paulson were the big guns in the second win for Darnell—each going five-for-six. For Recreation, who got to Gilmore for 13 hits in the nightcap, Don Sapp had three-for-four while Gino Kaska and Allen both collected a pair of bingles.

Recreation, who played a fine ball game despite fielding only nine players, loaded the bases in the 11th but couldn't bring home the run.

Despite being victimized by three double plays, the Police Department downed the Fire Department, 9-4, with Tom Trace and Paul Cordle going two-for-three for the boys in blue.

ELSEWHERE, the WBBA Coaches handed Holy Spirit its fifth straight setback, 13-6, as Neutzling and Ted Schenz each hit safely three times, including a triple each.

Round two gets under way Sunday with Darnell facing the Fire Department (Whitehall - Yearling, north diamond), WBBA hoping to elude the Police at Whitehall-Yearling's south diamond and Recreation aiming to get back on the win path at the E. Main-st diamond against Holy Spirit. All three tilts are scheduled for 1:30 p.m.

Here are the final Round One standings:

Team	W.	L.
Darnell	5	1
Recreation	4	2
Police	3	2
Fire Dept.	2	3
WBBA	2	3
Holy Spirit	0	5

Hilltop Youth Hits His Mark With The Greatest Of Ease

Dennis McCann, 221 J. Burgess-av, is only 15, and he has been interested in riflery for only three years, but already he is the state junior indoor-outdoor rifle champion.

He also holds three other state champ shooting titles, and has won enough trophies and medals to line a fireplace mantel and fill three large boxes.

Dennis, who will be a junior at West High School this fall, became interested in riflery in 1962 when he met a young member of the Coach rifle team. Several weeks later Dennis joined the team which is sponsored by the Central Ohio Anglers and Hunters Club located near West Jefferson.

With a new .22 Winchester and a few months practice shooting, Dennis had all he needed to take award after award.

Now Dennis is eyeing a position on the Ohio State University rifle team. He plans to enter Ohio State and major in engineering immediately after graduating from high school.

Dennis' big dream is to someday be a member of the U.S. Olympic rifle team.

Educators Agree On Town And Country Success

TOM WELLINGER and Virginia Deleweese discuss marketing of fresh produce with Dr. Vern Vandemark. Dr. Vandemark is an Ohio State University extension specialist in food merchandising.

Two Franklin County extension agents put together a consumer education program a year ago at Dublin High School and it caught on faster than a lady consumer grabs at a hat sale counter.

They repeated it this year at Dublin with the same agents, Thomas J. McNutt and Estelle B. Franks, organizing the project, and they got the same results. And now educators throughout the county are thinking of putting it to wider use.

Formally, it's called the Town and Country Business Program.

Less formally, it's designed to take the high school student out of the classroom for a practical look at the processing and marketing of agriculture products . . . products that they'll be spending money for after graduation.

Eighty-six Dublin seniors took advantage of the program this year. That's every senior Dublin had. They boarded buses and visited a processing plant, various stores, a warehouse, a commercial bakeshop, meat and dairy science laboratories.

The only changes over last year's program was the addition of information available in sales and service and in the meat industry. Ohio State University cooperated in arranging tours of the Animal Science Laboratory and the Dairy Science building on the campus there.

Success has been so clearly associated with this program since its inception that now Columbus Public School officials are considering incorporating it into their curriculum.

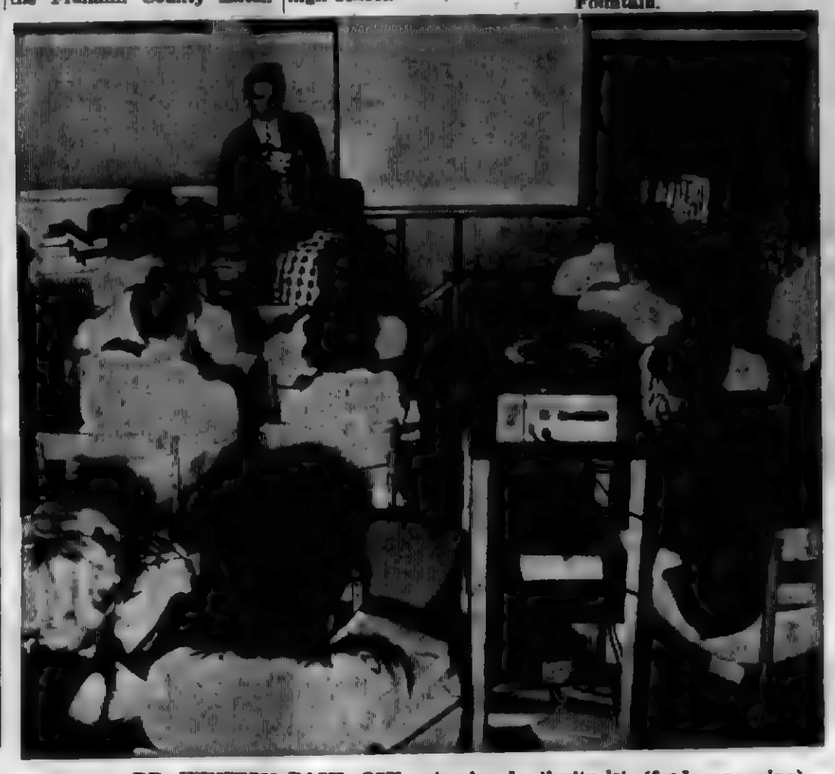
Other schools in the county have also expressed a desire to set up the six-week course.

In Dublin, this has been a cooperative venture between the Franklin County Extension service and a public school. It broke the ice, so to speak, for future expansion.

It might be pointed out that the program in Dublin was a first for the state of Ohio. It had been originated a few years ago in Pennsylvania but never on such a large scale.

Most of the credit for the sucess of the project, Mrs. Franks says, should go to area businessmen who became the major teachers of the young consumers.

"These are the people who know the consuming business best," Mrs. Franks said. "Their experience was invaluable to us."



A parent of a Dublin High senior summed it up best. She said, "I have never seen my son so interested in a course. He brought home literature, I read it and wished for such an opportunity when I was in high school."

MEAT GRADING and cutting techniques are the topic in this meat department discussion between Franklin County Extension Agent Tom McNutt, Meat Department Manager Virgil Tarmas, and Dublin student, Norman Fountain.

DR. WINSTON BASH, OSU extension horticulturist (food processing) tells Dublin High seniors about a new way to process tomatoes. It's frozen tomato slices, now being test-marketed in Madison, Wis. All Dublin seniors took the six-week course this, it's second year. (Photos by Malcom Emmons)

Lake Central Sets All-Time Cargo Record

Lake Central cargo poundage increased 37.6 per cent during June, compared to the same month last year, setting an all-time monthly cargo record for the local service carrier.

Air freight was up 42.1 per cent, air express increased 39.7 per cent, and air mail was up 23.8 per cent. Total cargo poundage increased from 1,204,830 pounds to 1,657,778 pounds.

"Part of the increase is due to an increase in capacity," said L. W. Hartman, president of Lake Central. "However, a substantial increase in the acceptance and necessity of air cargo service is also indicated. Total DC-3 cargo poundage remained constant in spite of the retirement of two DC-3's. The airline operated seven Convair 340 aircraft last month, compared to five a year ago, representing a 40 per cent increase in its fleet of large aircraft. Convair cargo poundage, however, increased 172.4 percent."

BUILDINGS Face-Lifting Award Won By Trautman

By CHARLES McDERMOTT
Spectator
Business Editor

Columbus is compiling a thick album of accolades from many sections of the country on its new skyline of moderate skyscrapers and architecturally elevated industrial buildings.

Receiving less notice, but adding an important cosmetic to the downtown face of the All-American City, is the remodeling and renovation of many of its older buildings.

Now, well-deserved awards are beginning to filter into the city for this work, too.

Latest is the "Certificate of Modernization Excellence" awarded to Warner L. Trautman, president of Real Estate Investments, Inc., at 209 S. High-st.

The award was made recently to Trautman by the editors and publishers of BUILDINGS, The Construction and Building Management Journal, published at Cedar Rapids, Ia.

Horace G. Hedges, publisher, told Trautman, "Our editorial board has given your recent rehabilitation-modernization project careful attention and each member agrees this citation is well-deserved."

In his letter, Hedges pointed out, "It is our hope that, by calling attention to such excellent projects as yours, and your active participation in it, we can all help to emphasize the quality, leadership and importance of professional building management."

The award was in recognition of the face-lifting given to the 75-year-old Trautman Building, which stands where the old Comstock Theatre was once a S. High-st attraction.

Several years ago a creaking elevator, dingy hallways and plaster-cracked "offices" presented a dismal greeting to those who had occasion to enter the building. Today, anyone who "knew it when" would probably attest to the merit of the BUILDINGS' award after a quick tour through the renovated building.

The renovation of other downtown buildings is equally deserving of recognition, and we hope other awards are forthcoming to add to Columbus' album of accolades in the building industry.

Business Women Name 'Woman Of The Year'

Miss Medert

Miss Grace Medert, 110 W. Patterson-av, immediate past president of Flambeau Chapter, American Business Women's Association, has been selected its "Woman of the Year" for 1965-66. She is membership chairman and chairman of the Torchbearer-Friendship Committee which is now in process of organizing a fourth ABWA Chapter in Columbus.

She has been employed since 1955 as secretary and office manager for the Fishel Company, local contractor specializing in the installation of large water mains and underground telephone conduit.

Membership at St. Luke Lutheran Church keeps her active in the women's organization and the senior choir. Other activities include membership in Trudeau Guild 8 of the Benjamin Franklin Tuberculosis Hospital, and in the Southern Ohio Covered Bridge Association. Reading, photography, collecting phonograph records, and travel occupy spare moments.

The "Woman of the Year" award is made annually by each AWBA Chapter and the top 10 women are chosen at the National Convention. Primarily the award is based on the progress the member has made in her chosen business field. Her other interests and activities also play a part in the selection.

The American Business Women's Association was founded in Kansas City, Mo., in 1949. It has grown to over 545 chapters consisting of more than 31,000 members throughout the United States. Primarily educational in nature, ABWA stresses the value of business women keeping up to date on business procedure and encourages women to seek additional training which will qualify them for advancement in their chosen field. During the past year, chapters throughout the country expended approximately $60,000 in scholarships to women seeking training in a variety of occupations. Currently, Flambeau Chapter is sponsoring scholarships for Miss Lois Good, Grant Hospital of Nursing, and Miss Lillian Thorne, Ohio State University.

Farmers Doing 'A Little Better'

Statistically, farmers did a little better during the month ended June 15.

"Agricultural Prices," published by the U.S. Department of Agriculture each month, shows the relation of prices farmers have to pay to the prices they receive at 79 — up 1 point from the preceding month. That is the highest it has been since February, 1963.

The Prices Received Index advanced two percent to 256 percent of its 1910-14 average, primarily because of higher prices for hogs and cattle. Partially off - setting were price declines for potatoes, lettuce, wholesale milk, and wheat. Prices received were up 10 percent from June 1964.

The Index of Prices Paid by Farmers (including interest, taxes, and farm wage rates) was unchanged, equaling the record high established a month earlier. Prices paid for family living items declined slightly.

There's one more term that should be understood in this measurement of how well farmers generally are doing.

It is the "Adjusted Parity Ratio" which incorporates and reflects supplementary income from Federal farm programs. This ratio reflecting Government payments, averaged 80 during 1964.

NATIONWIDE INN'S new manager, Mark Novak, pauses a moment at poolside, popular focal point at the inn where guests relax after a dip, dance at night under the stars or exchange stories of their travels. Novak, himself, has many interesting stories. A native of Poland, he was taken prisoner by the Nazis and confined for 18 months in the Auschwitz concentration camp, from which he and four army officers escaped to France and England. In England, Novak joined the British Commandos and fought in Africa and Italy. He was honorably discharged from the British Army in 1946 with the rank of second lieutenant.

Century Electric Plans Local Facility

One of the nation's leading manufacturers of electric motors will establish a new distribution center in the Lincoln Village Industrial Mile.

Plans for the office-warehouse facility were disclosed by Fred Pillsbury, president of the Century Electric Co. Headquartered in St. Louis, Century has manufacturing plants in Missouri and Tennessee, as well as offices in principal cities through the country.

Pillsbury said the move to Columbus was prompted by geographic and transportation factors. The new building will replace facilities in the Cleveland area.

Planned as a one-floor brick-and-masonry structure, it will be located on the north side of Industrial Mile-rd, mid way between Georgesville-rd and Sullivant-av. The land was purchased from the Nationwide Development Co., developers of Lincoln Village. John B. Hill of Colonial Realty represented both parties in the transaction.

Scheduled for an early fall opening, the new center will serve the east-central portion of the United States. It will handle Century's line of motors, ranging from fractional horsepower to larger industrial types.

Century Electric officials also quoted in the announcement included J. S. Pillsbury, vice-president; V. J. Hartling, assistant secretary; George Nafe, vice-president in charge of sales and Ralph Moseman, appointed manager of the local facility.

Housewife Wins Florida Homesite

Her conviction that owning a Florida homesite would put "GO in my GOlden years," has earned Mrs. Mary Patterson, Worthington housewife, a place in the sun at Port Charlotte, one of the nation's largest retirement communities.

She was one of more than 2,500 contestants who were asked to give their reasons for wanting to own a Florida homesite in a General Development Corporation community. In her award-winning reply, she said:

"I want a GDC homesite in Florida because . . . for happy retirement . . . a new era of life . . . these beautiful preplanned communities offer subtropical living at reasonable prices; putting the GO in my GOlden years."

Mrs. Patterson, who lives at 385 S. Selby-blvd with her husband, Jack, and their two children, David, 10, and Laurie, 7, will be presented the deed to her Port Charlotte homesite next week by Marvin C. Yerke & Associates, franchised agents for General Development Corporation in the Columbus area.

Decide Now On Landfill Site

Last June 5, the Columbus Board of Health called to the attention of city officials the lack of adequate sanitary landfill facilities.

A resolution directed to city council and the Sensenbrenner administration said in part:

"Presently available public disposal sites are small and rapidly filling up while private sites for commercial disposal are poorly run and inadequate. Careful surveys indicate present disposal areas will be filled in less than one year.

"A forward step has been taken by the authorized study of incinerator construction and utilization. It is the opinion of the board of health that this cannot be carried out in time to meet the immediate needs."

The problem spotlighted by the board of health is both serious and immediate. The plea for action now by the city administration and council should be heeded.

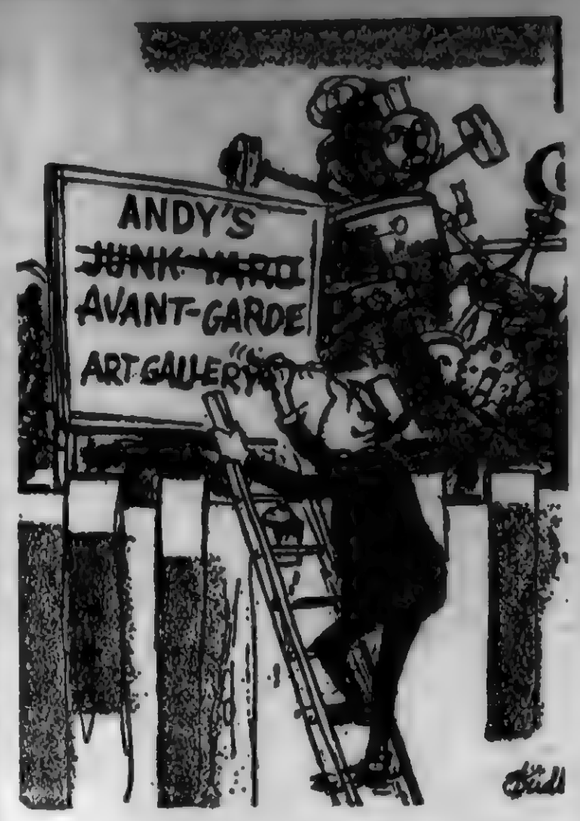
Eventually, a new landfill site must be selected by administration officials and approved by council. Waiting will not minimize the almost-certain howls of protest from those citizens near to any site chosen.

The fact remains that there is a world of difference between a "dump" and a properly operated "landfill." The city's Goudy Field operation is positive proof that the city can operate a "landfill" with a minimum of inconvenience to nearby property owners.

We agree with the members of the board of health that "all practical steps should be taken to protect individual property rights and desires." But we also agree with their contention that the "overall good of the community" must be the ultimate determining factor.

Putting off the unpleasant task of selecting a landfill site is like ignoring an aching tooth until it becomes abscessed.

A. A. Conference Is Message Of Hope



Hardly a weekend passes without some type of state conference scheduled for the Capital City. Virtually all such conclaves have worthy aims, but few are unique.

But, there is a highly worthy and unique conference at the Deshler-Cole this particular weekend (July 23-25). It is the ninth annual State Conference of Alcoholics Anonymous.

A.A., founded 30 years ago in Akron, O., by two men, has grown to a worldwide membership of almost 400,000. This, in itself, is an impressive statistic. But only a recovered alcoholic, or someone directly affected by alcoholism, can appreciate the true worth of Alcoholics Anonymous.

The very success of A.A. and composition of its membership has done much to erase the public image of an alcoholic as the skid row derelict and "bum under the bridge." We would defy any visitors to the Deshler over the weekend to pick the non-alcoholics from the A.A. members.

A friend of ours in A.A. gave us a good rule of thumb to follow. "If you spot one who's smiling and happy," he said, "chances are good that he's an A.A. member."

THE OTHER SIDE
Of The Story

By ROBERT W. REIDER

REACTION to The Spectator's policy statement on Page One in the last edition was gratifying (putting it that way could turn out to be one of our understatements of the year).

Some response was anticipated, of course, but frankly the almost overwhelming expressions of reader approval prompted us to take a second look.

The repeat glance verified that we merely had written a simple statement of purpose that would fit any newspaper dedicated to upholding the ethical standards of journalism that have made the American press generally widely respected.

Columbus, however, seems to be an isolated case in contrast.

The Spectator's stated policy to seek out the truth irrespective of consequences was received with such warm enthusiasm that it seemed to underscore a basic fact we suspect has existed in the Greater Columbus area for some time.

It is apparent that a healthy segment of the newspaper-reading population in Central Ohio is starving for truth-in-news.

Over the years a steady diet of slanted stories and irresponsible reporting has damaged Columbus' press image almost to the point of no repair.

The Spectator intends to use every resource at its command to give Greater Columbus a bona fide NEWSpaper.

We earnestly want the respect of our readers. We intend to earn that respect by adhering only to sound journalistic practices. The Spectator's aim is to become recognized as the Columbus NEWSpaper that can be relied upon for factual reporting . . . for truth in the news. In rendering that service we hope to contribute to the continued growth of Ohio's otherwise most progressive population center.

QUESTION of the week: What has happened to the Rhodes "austerity" program? ? ?

An Editor's Outlook . . . by Jenkin Lloyd Jones
Sea Shapes Nova Scotia Face, History

(Editor's Note: While Jenkin Lloyd Jones is on vacation he will depart from his usual column format and write three pieces on travel.)

LIVERPOOL, Nova Scotia — In the winter of 1735 the brigantine Baltimore was discovered aground in Chebogue harbor, five miles south of Yarmouth, and aboard was a young woman who recounted hysterically a tragic tale. Her name, she said, was Susannah Buckler, and she was the widow of the captain.

Jones

She told how the ship had been driven ashore in a storm and how Indians had come aboard and murdered all the crew. She, alone, had barricaded herself in the deckhouse and driven off the savages with two pistols. Sure enough, the decks were an indescribable mess of blood, and all the stores had been looted.

They cared for the woman tenderly at Annapolis Royal and in the spring a ship took her on to Boston where she disappeared. It wasn't until years later that the word got back to Nova Scotia that the Baltimore had left Ireland with 90 convicts, including five women. How the convicts seized the ship and exactly what happened after that will never be known.

But maybe some of the proudest old families of Massachusetts are descended from a woman who must have changed her name again as soon as she walked away from the Boston wharf and who was buried, perhaps, in a Puritan graveyard with a tremendous sea story sealed within her.

The sea is the great fact of Nova Scotia. It not only surrounds it; it pounds it. The bores from the Bay of Fundy's 40- and 50-foot tides bring vertical walls of water charging up the Shubenacadie and the Avon, and woe to the human being or animal who doesn't understand that a muddy clam flat one minute may be an anchorage the next. Although Nova Scotia is smaller than West Virginia, it has a coastline that would stretch from New York to Los Angeles and back to Kansas City.

So the sea has hammered, shaped and moulded Nova Scotians. It has been their living and their death. These are the saltiest people in North America, and their tales will curl your hair.

Was a ship's anchor really found 10 miles inland after the munitions explosion in December, 1917, that killed 2,000 people in Halifax? As you stand on a rock throwing wet flies at the speckled trout in the Medway River, your guide swears it not only was, but he saw it.

Did Captain Samuel Davis, en route from Cardiff to New York in the Yarmouth barque Arlington, really have that dream on the night of December 28, 1891? There was that voice crying, "Help us," and he awoke to find himself mumbling, "Latitude 52 North, Longitude 21 West." While his crew thought him mad he turned north a day's sail and at the appointed spot picked 11 men off the Countess of Dufferin of Quebec, which was awash and within an hour of sinking.

There were plenty of eyewitnesses to the wonderful still made by Captain Henry MacArthur after his ship Milton of Maitland, Nova Scotia, caught fire west of Panama in 1879. In those water it rarely rains, and the captain made a tube from strips cut from a tin can. For fuel he had only the wood from the lifeboat itself, and the boat was consumed almost to the waterline during a 40-day, 2,600-mile voyage before a Mexican schooner appeared. But he distilled enough sea water to keep most of his crew alive.

And how often can you match the devotion to his fellowman of Captain Richard Hichens? Cast away in 1817 on deserted Seal Island at Nova Scotia's southern tip, the young Englishman finally made smoke signals and was rescued. The village preacher at Barrington put him up and shortly the preacher's daughter, Mary Crowell, married him.

But though the captain made several commercial trips, he and his young wife thought often of the silent island, sitting patiently in the fog and darkness, fishing for luckless sailors. One early spring day they sailed out to it and found a frozen body hunched with a tinderbox over a pile of faggots.

So the two young people went out to Seal Island, built a house, and lived in self-imposed poverty. But they saved dozens of seamen from major wrecks, and in 1831 they finally persuaded the Crown to put up a light which they tended until the captain died. Two people who gave their lives to see that the captain's disaster would be suffered by no other man.

And there was 16-year-old Aaron Churchill, first mate of the Research of Digby, who, when the rudder pintles were carried away in a winter storm in 1866, stripped himself naked and spent 105 minutes in 40-degree water attaching a jury rig to the banging mass of wood. Sixteen-years-old!

Perhaps that's Nova Scotia's best lesson to the effete and confused landlubbers who, by law, have prolonged childhood far beyond the limits the Lord intended and who look with dismay at the rocketing record of juvenile delinquency. (T-M, WRR Gen. Fea. Corp.)

Variety . . . by I. F. Howell

We've said much here about Ohio and will say more. But today let's look at a near neighbor.

Point Pleasant, across the Ohio River from Gallia County, O., is the seat of Mason County, W. Va. It has an interesting and important history.

Point Pleasant is the scene of the first battle of the War of the Revolution. The story is preserved on plaques and monuments at the "Point" where the Kanawha and Ohio Rivers merge. The Ohio was named The Beautiful River by the Iroquois Indians.

At various times Point Pleasant was visited by the explorers LaSalle, Celeron and Gist. George Washington was there in 1770. Daniel Boone once had a trading post there. George Rogers Clark led 175 men from there in 1778 to the Northwest Territory. Point Pleasant was proposed about 1771 as the capital of a new colony, Vandalia, but it was never organized.

Mason County Clerk L. W. Getty gave us the history of the court house that surely deserves repeating as a wonderful example of a people's self-reliance in the B. A. years (Before Appalachia).

The old court house, built just before the Civil war, stood for about a century. But more room was needed, and the old building had been damaged by floods. It was razed in the late 1950's and a new one was built on the original site. The old bell was saved for the new structure.

The new court house was built entirely from county funds and was paid for on the day of its dedication. No bond issues or begging by Mason Countians. All of the furnishings were bought "cash and carry." The building is heated and cooled entirely by electricity because in that area it is cheapest and best.

It says here. . .

We Ohioans are justly proud of our state. But we have some good neighbors, too.

". . . Your old men shall dream dreams, your young men shall see visions:" — Joel 2:28.

Age, experience and ability have no monopoly on our capacity to dream. These things only contribute to the nature of our dreams and in their degree of fulfillment.

The reverie of mind is the very longing of the heart and soul for something better — a desire to live life more abundantly. How many of us realize that it is never too late to make our fondest dreams come to life, that we can live the heart's desire?

Rev. Wilson

When we are young we have a vision and set out to make the world over — we are hindered by the fears that experience often brings. Then we find that age brings dreams of what might have been if only the vision of youth had been fulfilled. They are much like two sides of the same coin, inseparable, yet on opposite sides; we could liken them to the light that is both sunset and dawn, depending on where you are when you see it.

Wouldn't it be wonderful to combine the vision of youth with its faith and the dreams of age with their experience? Two ideals united to make the world a better place in which to live. The world needs this combination.

Changing the world begins with each of us, individually. For example, if we would have good people in the highest offices we need to be good people to elect them to those offices. A good neighbor begets good neighbors. Youth, age, or station in life have nothing to do with doing things that are right and good. But, we need a vision, a dream, of a better world, then a willingness to live by the kind of standards that are taught us by the Master.

Jesus said, "But seek ye first the kingdom of God, and His righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you." Our first steps toward changing the world begin with changing ourselves and learning to live our highest dreams.

Where does one start? By giving a helping hand to someone who needs us. We do not need to look very far to find many worthy charities that could use another willing heart and hands. Our schools need support from all of us to help in teaching our children how to live fine, upright lives, and to become good citizens of the world.

A military man made this remark to me just the other day, "When I was a child I heard a great deal about loyalty and patriotism. It seems to me that I do not hear this as much as I used to." Most certainly our dream of a better world includes loyalty to nation, community, home and to God. Do we have the right to expect to see our dreams fulfilled without incorporating this factor into the very fiber of our being?

An important starting place is our church, the church needs us — above all we need our church. Our children, grandchildren, need the benefit of church training — we can see that they have the opportunity, we can even help by taking an active part in teaching. There are a multitude of activities for both children and adults — Scouting, the "Y", athletics — that need our talents and abilities. They need us and if we only knew, we need them too.

Let us give serious thought to these things, for they are the things that help our dreams of abundant life come true.

When we learn to live as Jesus Christ would have us live His words will come to life in our world. ". . . I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly." (John 10:10.)

No Converts At OU

This is in reply to Ed Smith (Spectator, July 15, 1965).

To The Editor:

I am a student of Ohio University, and proud of that fact. Your letter to the editor (Spectator, July 15, 1965) reminded me of our situation at OU. We have no speakers' rule. Last semester the leaders of the American Nazi Party and the C.P. both came to speak on our campus. To your way of thinking, it was bad to have such speakers.

Let me take a moment to draw an image. A man has cancer. It keeps spreading throughout his body, because his body doesn't know what it is or how to fight it. Doctors, who have been taught about cancer, can check its growth if they get the chance soon enough.

Now, insert these things in that story. Communism is the cancer. The student body of OSU is the "body." The doctor is knowledge. If the students don't have a chance to hear the claims of communists or learn about them, then the spread of the disease cannot be checked.

The students of OU weren't converted by the controversial speakers. They had a chance, though, to see how ridiculous the claims of fanatics can be. Those two speakers probably made every student in the audience a better American.

I can't see how any American who believes in his country can deny anyone the right to offer radical views. After living under this system, and feeling freedom all around me, how could anything else sound half as good?

Favors Speakers' Rule

To the Editor:

I was quite pleased to read the letter by Ed Smith, manager, Thurber Village Laundromat, and heartily agree with his statement "In America everyone has the right of free speech—even a Communist—etc., but I will not provide him with a stage, an audience or recognition." As a taxpayer, these are my sentiments exactly.

Then, I read your editorial "An Unfortunate Decision." I have always enjoyed reading your paper but I can see your new ownership is beginning to show itself. I don't think enrollment or education at OSU will suffer by the decision of the OSU trustees—and let those faculty members leave that have threatened to do so. They can go to those other colleges that encourage appearances by our enemies—so they can sway the minds of those minority students that are so "far out."

All I can say is that I'm surprised to read your views on this subject—politics should not enter into such a thing.

Elect Trustees At OSU

To the Editor:

As a candidate for governor, I am in favor of electing the Board of Trustees of Ohio State University in the democratic fashion by the vote of the people, like they do in the state of Michigan.

Since the trustees are political appointees, they have no responsibility to the people. As the Board is presently constituted, it could well be called the John W. Bricker dynasty.

John W. Bricker and the other four trustees who refused to heed the advice of President Fawcett on making a change in the Speakers' Rule, apparently are stuck fast in the days of yesterday and need to have their cataracts removed so they can see things as of today.

Cites State School Needs

To the Editor:

The Columbus State School is everybody's business because the sick need everybody's help.

If Gov. Rhodes likes to spend the taxpayers' money so well, he ought to spend some for the kids at the Columbus State School.

It is pretty hot in those units. The patients could use some fans or air conditioners; and some extra help.

No Litterbugs Here

To the Editor:

On June 27, as you know, the German Village Society sponsored its sixth annual Haus und Garten tour. It was attended by many thousands of people who stood in line for considerable time before they were able to go through the houses, and it was noted by the members of the German Village Commission and the German Village Society the fine type of people who are interested in this program.

The Street Cleaning Department came into the area several days before the tour. Things were spick-and-span. After the tour the neighborhood was still spick-and-span. Rather than throw paper cups on the street, many of these people folded them up and put them in their purses.

It gives the German Village Society a great deal of gratification to be able to sponsor such a program for the pleasure of the finest people in our community.

ONE WOMAN'S Opinion . . .

Hanky-Panky Shocking? Phooey!

The average newspaper reporter is not particularly naive.

In fact, most of us are as shock-proof as a good watch.

Yet the press is currently throwing its collective hands up in horror at the hanky-panky that has cropped up in some of the programs of the anti-poverty program.

Mrs. Robinson

Some of the girls in a Florida youth center came home drunk.

So what? A breath-o-meter test at any OSU sorority house would probably prove that Smirnoff — in fact — does leave you breathless.

Some of the Floridians were even accused of knowing, first-hand, all about the birds and bees.

Again, so what?

The Kinsey Report pretty well established several years ago that, outside of a convent, sex is here to stay.

On a local basis, youngsters involved in the city Neighborhood Youth Corps have been accused of petty thievery.

Since Moses acted as a heavenly mouthpiece, people have been coveting, and some are not strong enough to resist temptation. If they were, the Yale Lock Co. would have been a sick idea.

Don't misunderstand.

We are not backing drunkenness, sexual promiscuity or petty larceny.

But when large groups of people are brought together, there will always be a few who believe they can get away with ignoring the mores of society.

What we are lamenting is the surprise that the press is showing when they find a few flies in the ointment being applied to the sores of poverty.

Their attitude is as phony as a three-dollar bill.

And it's not just a harmless gimmick to fill up space of which the best of newspapers are guilty.

Why?

Because by spotlighting the exception they are risking the reputation of a program that can spell the difference between success and failure in the lives of many.

What are a few drunks, tramps or thieves compared to thousands who may be given their first shove out of the mire of need, ignorance or despair?—JANE ROBINSON.

A PERSONAL RECOLLECTION

Adlai E. Stevenson

By MICHAEL V. DI SALLE
Former Governor of Ohio

Archibald MacLeish, in his fine "Speech to those who say comrade," said,

"The brotherhood is not by the blood certainly.

But neither are men brothers by speech, by saying so:

Men are brothers by lives lived and are hurt -or it."

We shared two major defeats in Ohio in 1952 and 1956. No one could have defeated General Eisenhower in those years. Perhaps as aware as anyone of this was Adlai Stevenson. We traveled many miles together and shared many experiences. As the candidate for President, he was in the limelight. It was his campaign. One wondered as the inevitable developed, how people could be cruel or rude to this articulate, gentle, kind and considerate person. In 1956 he came to Ohio a few days after he had announced his position against A-bomb testing. He was met with a barrage of abuse launched by not only the political opposition, but by persons who had little or no concept of the proposal.

Driving by a school in Cleveland after a day when we had been deluged by "I like Ike" signs, he was booed by school children who had been let out to see him go by. As tired as he was, as hurt as he was, he gave them a gentle smile and a wave of the hand.

The only indication he gave that he had noticed the discourtesy was when we arrived in Toledo, and he told his audience, "I am happy to be here, and to be able to say, I like Mike instead of Ike."

In Elyria the train was stopped on a platform high above his audience. From this level he looked down at the people and said, "Now my opponents can truly say that I am speaking above the heads of the people." He never believed that the people he reached did not understand his message.

During both campaigns he had the support of only two major Ohio daily newspapers. In 1952, the Dayton Daily News, and in 1956 the Toledo Blade. I am certain that if he could now hear what was being said about him, he would want to send someone down to examine the coffin to find out who had passed away.

For a person who was so at ease addressing large groups, he was particularly shy in small groups. He found it difficult to make small talk. He had great personal appeal that did not seem to reach the masses. Very few of our leading political figures commanded so much warm respect and such devoted loyalty from his greatly outnumbered supporters. These were people who would truly "rather fight than switch." Perhaps in death, where he no longer constitutes a political threat, the qualities that produced this following will be more easily discernible.

We were both present at a private party in New York sometime in 1954. Another guest was the sophisticated TV personality, Arlene Francis. I had known her for sometime, and we were discussing some of the programs we had shared, and some of our mutual acquaintances. She expressed the wish to meet just one person, Adlai E. Stevenson. I told her he was not hard to meet, but as I took her across the room to introduce her, she became as completely flustered as a teenager meeting her first beau. I told Adlai how excited she was at the prospect of meeting him. He quickly put her at ease by saying he was grateful to me for thinking of him, but possibly the next time they met, it could be "without benefit of emissary."

Did he want the nomination in 1952? I doubt it. I was in the Convention Hall the day after he was nominated, making my way back stage to help escort John Sparkman, the Vice-Presidential nominee to the platform. In the narrow aisle I ran squarely into Adlai Stevenson. I held out my hand to congratulate him, and he said in accepting, "I suppose I should thank you for what you did yesterday, but I am not sure that you did me any favor."

He never seemed to be too involved to be kind. On Nov. 7, 1962, I received the following wire:

"I think my disappointment is almost as great as yours, and I know how you feel. But your future is bright and I send you warmest good wishes. — Adlai."

There are relatively few people who think of the loser of an election. Adlai E. Stevenson knew what it meant to lose, and he knew that this was when a word of encouragement was needed. It was the measure of the man to always think of others, to be considerate.

History will treat him kindly, but no more than he deserves for his contribution to his party and to his nation, but above all, to a finer concept of integrity in public life.

100 At Stevenson Memorial Service

A memorial service for Adlai Stevenson Monday noon at Trinity Episcopal Church was attended by 100 religious, political and civic leaders, including former Ohio Governor Michael V. DiSalle.

Preacher for the service was Fr. Thomas F. Duffy, St. Charles Seminary, who told the gathering his memories "are of pictures rather than words."

In his eulogy of the United States Ambassador to the United Nations, Fr. Duffy said:

"I remember first seeing him accept the presidential nomination in 1952, and sensing immediately that something new had arrived on the American political scene. I remember his embarrassment and awkwardness as he tried to read the early campaign speeches written for him by others, as well as the passion and eloquence he later displayed.

"I remember the hurt and shame for his country that distorted his face the day at the U. N. when he was interrupted by a hoodlum demonstration. I remember the poise and assurance with which he unmasked the duplicity of the Russian ambassador at the time of the Cuban crisis. I remember the look of pity and disbelief on the face when he was attacked by the crowd in Dallas.

"And I remember the love in his eyes as he paid tribute to his friend and kindred spirit, Eleanor Roosevelt. Most of all I will remember his eyes — eyes that had known hurt and tragedy, but eyes that never ceased to scan the faces of humanity for answers to the ambiguities and mysteries of human existence . . .

"His memory, then will continue to be fruitful for the country and the world he served so well, but, here there is a discordant note I have to introduce. As I prepared these remarks a disturbing thought came to me, kept recurring insistently, and would not be put down. It struck me that a man like Stevenson could not have come from Columbus. Try as I would, my imagination could not picture him growing and flourishing in the soil of our local culture.

"What would have been the occasions for his eloquence to develop, the public forum for his ideas to mature? Where would he have got the public notice for the expression of his passionate humanitarian concerns? What clubs would have responded to his highly civilized wit? What public offices could he have realistically aspired to?

"I have been haunted by the implications of these questions the last few days. I have sought reasons for eliminating these depressing considerations from my remarks, but I could find no honorable ones.

"O holy Lord, almighty Father, eternal God, we thank you for the blessing you have bestowed on our country in the person of Adlai Stevenson, and we ask that your blessing continue through the inspiration and example of his living memory. And with a sense of confusion and need we in Columbus entreat you to raise up in our midst at least a minor prophet inspired by his example — one whose trust could overcome our cynicism, one whose compassion could destroy our apathy, one whose breadth of vision could expand our narrowness, one whose honesty could expose our lack of candor, one whose courage could banish our timidity.

"Finally, almighty Father, we ask that you welcome to your heavenly kingdom our brother Adlai, who proved himself to be a brother to all men. Grant to his compassionate heart the peace for which his eyes ceaselessly searched the faces of his fellow men. Give him the reward of your eternal rest."

It is native personality, and that alone, that endows a man to stand before presidents or generals, or in any distinguished collection, with aplomb — and not culture, or any knowledge or intellect whatever. — Walt Whitman

"I THINK I'LL GO HOME and never complain again." That was a comment overheard on the tour of the city last week sponsored by Columbus Urban Renewal. It was made as the buses wound their way through the slum areas of the city, enroute to the areas where slum clearance and urban renewal is a reality, not merely a vision dependent upon the success of the $6-million bond issue facing the voters this fall. The spokesman was only one of the 300 women representing local church and civic organizations to whom the term "Urban Renewal" now means orderly housing developments, housing for senior citizens, sleek new office building and wide expanses of parks rather than merely bulldozers and deserted and barren neighborhoods. At a stopover at Westminster Presbyterian Home are shown, Mrs. William Miller, left, 1462 Berkshire-rd, past-president of the United Church Women; Mrs. John Wilson, 391 Walhalla-rd, chairman of the Inter-faith Department and Earl Ross of Metropolitan Housing who served as a tour guide and sat on the panel discussion which followed the luncheon at the Eastside Branch YMCA. It was here the group heard the human aspects of urban renewal referred to with Lincoln's qoute, "I like to see a man proud of the place in which he lives. I like to see a man live so that his place will be proud of him."
